PUBLISHERS' ANNOUNCEMENT.

THE general policy of THE ENGLISH AND EMPIRE DIGEST is controlled by a Board of Editors, acting under the advice of Lord Halsbury, with Sir Thomas Willes Chitty as Managing Editor.

After the most careful consideration and consultation, both with many leading members of the Bench and Legal Profession in Great Britain and with the leading Judges of the Dominions and India, it was decided that the vast work of preparing THE ENGLISH AND EMPIRE DIGEST should be undertaken.

The Publishers desire to record their gratitude to the Editorial Board for their interest in this undertaking and to the Managing Editor, Sir Thomas Willes Chitty, who has undertaken the great task of finally reviewing and passing the proof sheets of this work. Lord Halsbury's "Laws of England" has already gained the reputation of being the Premier Legal Work of the English-speaking world—it is not too much to say that it has become famous for all time. It is gratifying to know that many of the leaders of legal thought and eminent lawyers who contributed to "The Laws of England" are connected with this work.

The work is unique in aim and form, and in completeness and comprehensiveness it exceeds anything hitherto attempted, and it is believed that the work will be considered as being, jointly with "The Laws of England," the most important legal compilation that has yet appeared and will be regarded as the port of entry to the whole region of the Case Law of the British Commonwealth of Nations. It is in fact the reports in miniature and supplies a concise statement of the effect of each reported case; so that the practitioner or jurist will know where to look and what he may expect if he examines the report itself.

The purpose of this work is to supply the whole Case Law of England, together with a considerable body of cases from the Courts of Scotland, Ireland, the Empire of India, the Dominion of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, the Dominion of New Zealand, and the other Colonies beyond the seas, in the most convenient and easily accessible form, and with exhaustive and absolutely complete annotations giving all the subsequent cases, in which judicial opinions have been given concerning the English cases digested.

A detailed review of the objects and scope of this immense undertaking may not be out of place. Our law, except so far as it is statutory is based on precedents. Those precedents are embodied in the judgments and opinions of the Judges, which are recorded in some hundreds or thousands of cases reported in thousands of volumes of "reports" and "abridgments." The convenience and utility of having all the cases bearing on each subject and point which are scattered over many series of volumes collected together in one place will be at once apparent. The legal profession and the public require a complete and comprehensive guide and index to those reported cases, and as a guide this work enables the reader to ascertain whether there is any reported case deciding or bearing on any particular point and what was decided in each reported case, and as an index to the reported cases this work enables him to ascertain exactly in what volume or volumes of the reports any particular case is reported.

In preparing this work all the English reports from the earliest time have been carefully searched through, and all the cases of any possible use to the legal profession or student of law will be found in the text. The search for the cases was commenced with the Year-books and was carried on through the Black-letter reports and all the other reports down to the present time. As one result of this search it will be found that much hidden law and many useful cases, which for one reason or another have been for the time lost sight of and have remained unnoticed by the text-book writers, are brought to light. Just as a single instance, it may be mentioned that in R. v. Levy, Ex p. Hobbs, [1916] W. N. 30; 32 T. L. R. 238, the question was raised whether it is an indictable offence to personate a juryman. No authority appears to have been cited in that case, but in fact the point was raised and decided in 1640 in Anon., March, 81, pl. 132 (see ACTION, p. 25, post). Thus, by the aid of this work, it is believed that what in law remains obscure will be enlightened, what is new will be shown merely to be a fresh setting of the old, and what is old and sure will be revealed to be the more firmly established.

The principle which has been adopted is that all cases should be included except those which are clearly obsolete for all purposes except those of the antiquarian. In the case of the Year-books and the Black-letter reports this principle has not been so strictly followed, and cases of no present interest have been excluded, but in the later reports the principle has been strictly adhered to.

Some difficulty has been experienced with reference to the exclusion of cases which are in a sense replaced and rendered obsolete by provisions in Codes such as the Sale of Goods Act, the Bills of Exchange Act, and the Marine Insurance Act. As, however, these cases are at least useful as showing the state of law before the Code and the law still in force in some parts of the British Empire, and are still frequently referred to, they are included and references to the English codifying statute added.

The scheme of arrangement and classification has been a matter to which the greatest attention has been paid. As far as possible the selection and arrangement adopted in "The Laws of England" has been followed. This arrangement has been found convenient and effective, and the legal profession throughout the English-speaking world is now familiar with it.

The table of contents or synopsis at the commencement of each title shows how the cases have been arranged and gives the reader a guide to the scope and contents of the title. At the end of the table of contents, and also throughout the text whenever it is thought likely that a particular subject might be looked for, cross-references are added showing where such subjects will be dealt with.

In the arrangement of cases the rule has been to group together all the cases dealing with each particular point and to present them as far as possible in chronological order. To avoid duplication of cases it has not always been possible to conform to this rule completely, but by means of the annotations and cross-references its object is effected.

Where a case is reported under the same name both on appeal and in the court below references to the reports in the appellate court only are given. This has been done to save space and avoid confusion. Where, however, the name is altered in the report of the decision on appeal, or any difficulty can arise, as, for instance, where a case is reported in the lower court in one set of reports only, and in the Court of Appeal in another set only, references are given to the reports in both courts.

The date of each decision is entered after the name of the case. References are added in each case to all the contemporaneous reports in which the case is reported on the particular point or points involved. In many cases it is useful to refer to more than one report of a case, as it often happens that a particular report is not complete for all purposes, and sometimes a particular report is incorrect, and reference to the other reports is necessary to understand the real decision.

An outstanding feature of this work is the system of annotation of cases, by means of which each English case has appended to it a note of all the subsequent cases, if any, in which judicial opinions or decisions have been expressed or given with regard to it. The annotations have been obtained by making a complete examination of every report of every English case from a very early date, and by noting every instance in which any previous case was referred to in any judgment, or by any judge in the course of the arguments, and the particular kind of reference which was made to it. To give an idea of the extent of the labour involved it may be stated that a very large staff have been continuously engaged on the work for five years.

These notes have then been collected and attached to the various cases, showing as regards each such case the subsequent cases in which it has been approved, followed, distinguished, overruled, or otherwise referred to. The complete annotations follow after the most important paragraph when the case appears more than once in a title. Where the case only appears once the full annotations follow it except where the case is only cited on points having no relation to the point of the paragraph. In this event a cross-reference will be found to the title in which the case will appear with its full annotations.

Thus there is afforded a complete history of the judicial comments upon any English case which enables its present authority to be ascertained. No such complete system of annotation is believed to be in existence. Incidentally it forms in effect a complete noter-up to every reported English case and every English report.

As regards the Scottish and Irish cases a selection has been made, but all cases of not merely local application are inserted in this work.

A special feature of this undertaking is the inclusion of the whole case law of the Dominion of Canada with the exception of cases turning on the Codes in the Province of Quebec, and a considerable body of the reported decisions of the courts in the Empire of India, the Commonwealth of Australia, the Dominion of New Zealand, and the other Colonies where English law is in force. The reported decisions of these courts have been examined and considered, and all the cases bearing on English law which appear to be of interest outside the particular dominion or country where they were decided have been included in the work. The inclusion of these cases will, it is believed, be found of great use throughout India, the Dominions and the Colonies, especially in the coming years of the closer Imperial union of the Empire. The English lawyer will find many cases on points as to which there is no English decision. He will also find in some cases decisions opposed to the decisions of the English courts, which will afford him great assistance in the higher tribunals. The legal profession in other parts of the Empire will find the decisions of their courts and a ready clue to the English decisions as well as to those of the other Dominions and Colonies.

In dealing with the Scottish and Irish decisions and the decisions of the Overseas Dominions the effect of each case is stated in a concise form. To distinguish them from the English decisions they are printed in a smaller type in three columns and placed below a line drawn horizontally across the page. These cases follow as far as possible the arrangement of the English cases, and where they deal with the same subject-matter, so that they can be justifiably connected with specific English cases, that fact is indicated by giving them the same number as the English case bears, followed by Roman numerals where there are more than one Scottish or Irish case or decision of the Overseas Dominions on the same point. Cases that cannot be joined in this manner to specific English cases are marked with a letter of the alphabet and are placed as near as possible to the English case that is most similar to it.

Volume I. contains all the cases reported down to January 1st, 1918, and each succeeding volume will contain all the reported cases down to the end of the year preceding the date of its publication.

As the attention of the Editors is fully engaged in the preparation of the remaining volumes, it is particularly requested that all communications in connection with the work be addressed in the first instance to the Publishers, who will welcome any suggestions or criticisms and be responsible for their early consideration by the Editors.

MEANING OF TERMS USED IN CLASSIFYING ANNOTATING CASES.

THE different expressions used to describe the effect of the annotating cases have the following meanings, and the classification of the annotating cases has been done strictly in accordance with these meanings. The annotating cases are listed chronologically except such as are classified as " Referred to " or " Mentioned." These come at the end and are arranged inter se in chronological order. The terms used in classifying the annotating cases are as follows :

- " APPLIED " (Appl.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the principle of law enunciated in the annotated case has been applied to a new set of facts and circumstances in the annotating case.
- " APPROVED " (Apprvd.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the annotated case has been considered to be good law in the annotating case where the latter is in a higher court than the former.
- " CONSIDERED " (Consd.).—This expression is used where the remarks in the annotating case are devoid of adverse criticism and merely denote the giving of more or less careful consideration to the annotated case.
- " DISTINGUISHED " (Distd.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but where some essential difference (either on the facts or in law) between it and the annotated case is pointed out.
- " DOUBTED " (Dbtd.).—This expression is used where the court in the annotating case, without definitely going to the length of saying that the annotated case is wrong, adduces reasons which seem to show that it is not accurate.
- " EXPLAINED " (Expld.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but the decision arrived at is justified or accounted for by calling attention to some point of fact or of law which is usually, but not necessarily, one not obvious on the face of the report.
- " EXTENDED " (Extd.).—Compare " APPLIED," supra.
- " FOLLOWED " (Folld.).—This expression is used to denote that the same principles of law are applied in the two cases. It does not necessarily imply that the facts are substantially identical in the two cases.
- " NOT FOLLOWED " (N.F.).—Compare " FOLLOWED," supra, to which it is the adverse.
- " OVERRULED " (Overd.).—This expression is used where the annotating case is on substantially identical facts with the annotated case and in a higher court and the rule in the latter case is held to be wrong.
- " REFERRED " (Refd.).—This expression is used only where the annotating case deals with the point of the Digest paragraph and is without comment of any definite character on the case annotated, and where there is no delicate shade of approval or disapproval which would justify the use of any of the foregoing words.
- " MENTIONED " (Mentd.).—This expression is used only where none of the foregoing terms apply. In other words, it is used only where the case annotated is cited on a point having nothing to do with the point in the Digest paragraph.

INTRODUCTION.

OF the two great systems of law which together control the lives of nearly all the civilised and most of the uncivilised populations of the world, the one looks for its origin to a city on the Tiber and the other to Westminster Hall and the Assizes. The history of the Roman law and its developments cover about twenty-five centuries, whereas the growth of English law from the reign of Edward I. is but about 600 years. Lord Bryce in 1901 estimated that there were probably 130 millions of civilised persons (without counting the natives of India) who lived under the English common law, while the number living under some modern form of the Roman law was still larger. Geographically the English common law is in force in the United Kingdom with the exception of Scotland ; throughout the British Empire, with the chief exceptions of South Africa, British Guiana, Quebec, Mauritius and Ceylon ; and in the slightly modified form of American common law, throughout the United States with the exception of Louisiana. The Roman law on the other hand, modified by local laws and legislation, extends over the Continent of Europe and elsewhere. In some cases, as in France, the actual system of law is of Roman descent ; in others, e.g., the States of Germany, the system, though not descended from the Roman, has been closely assimilated to the Roman law by large importations ; while in other countries, such as Russia, Norway, Sweden and Denmark, which have borrowed much of their law from other European countries, the leading principles of Roman jurisprudence prevail.

On comparison of these two great systems of law—which may be generally described as the Continental system and the system of the English-speaking nations—one of the most striking differences is the reliance upon and binding character of judicial decisions in our own system, and the absence of their binding character and their comparatively slight importance in the other system. On the Continent, the Codes of Prussia and Austria provide that judgments shall not have the force of law, and though the Codes in France, Italy, and Belgium do not touch the point, the rule in all these countries is substantially the same, namely, that previous decisions are not authoritative, with certain very limited exceptions.

Among us, on the other hand, it has long been established that our courts are arranged in ranks, and those of each rank are, generally speaking, bound by the decisions of courts of the same or a higher rank, and that the House of Lords is bound by its own decisions. The decisions of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council are in general binding on the courts in the British Dominions and Colonies overseas. The binding character of a decision of course only exists in cases where the principle of the former decision applies, and it is a recognised function of the court, when not following a decision which on its face may appear to be applicable to the case in hand, to state the grounds on which it is distinguished.

Thus the judgments of our judges not merely decide the case in hand, but declare the law. It is a fundamental theory of our law that the judges "are the depositaries of the laws, the living oracles who must decide in all cases of doubt."

It is from this privilege of making a binding rule of law, which is attached in certain circumstances to the decisions of our Superior Courts, that the common law of England, the foundation of our system of law, has for the most part arisen. Out of this privilege have sprung our various instances of judge-made law, which declare what in novel circumstances is most consonant with well-known legal principles, for instance, in cases primae impressionis, or where a question of public policy arises, and to some extent in cases involving modern rules of equity.

The fact that the decisions of our courts were the main source of the common law led to great importance necessarily being attached to accurate records of them.

Hence, from the first Year-books of Edward I. onwards, the study and practice of law reporting has gradually increased and developed in this country from an original jejune paragraph to the arrays of elaborate and learned reports which now exist ; and by the experience of many generations, the practice as regards the principles of selection of cases for report out of the large number of judgments delivered has become well established ; but even so the mass of reported cases during the last 600 years has been so great that special means of dealing with them became long ago necessary.

In this way abridgments and digests of cases originated and grew up in this country. They are the special and essential fruit of our system of law and our tradition of stare decisis, and have gradually extended from abridgments of small size, or digests of cases on some special branch of law, to large works endeavouring more and more to deal with the whole body of the law.

A digest of cases provides the practitioner with the main basis of his argument before the court, since legal arguments, like judgments, are in almost all instances founded on reported cases. A digest collects all the reported cases on each subject, and gives their history with a completeness not usually possible in a text-book or treatise. Further, a digest of cases not only prepares the way for an orderly statement of principles in a certain branch of the law (as by a codifying statute, such as the Sale of Goods Act), but also in itself has certain advantages over a Code, since a Code gives only the general principles, whereas a digest gives not only the principles, but copious instances of their application.

The importance of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States has been so often dwelt upon in our highest Appellate Courts that it is unnecessary to do more than allude to it. But it is perhaps not so clearly remembered in this country what a vast importance our reported decisions exert in the courts of the United States. As regards also the Superior Courts in the British Overseas Dominions and Colonies, their decisions, though not binding in our courts, are recognised often to be monuments of learning and to be most useful in elucidating difficult questions of law.

The reputation of British law and British justice stands supreme throughout the world, as the unquestioned acceptance by the Overseas

Dominions of the decisions of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council and the suits by subjects of foreign States in the courts of this country, instead of in those of their own country, testify. A work which through the English cases collected in its pages traces the source and growth of that law, and which shows through the cases decided in the courts of the Overseas Dominions and Colonies its application to and development under the different and various conditions of life in the British Empire, and which illustrates how old principles of law have been applied and will have to be applied to the new combinations of circumstances which have arisen overseas and are now likely to arise in this country under the new conditions of commerce born of the War, will, it is believed, not only stimulate the study of the science and art of our law amongst ourselves, the subjects of India, the Overseas Dominions and the Colonies, the United States of America and those foreign States which already regard with favour British law and British justice, but will also help to forge yet another link in the chain of affection and esteem which holds this Empire together.

For as has been observed: "Doubtless the most significant and momentous fact of modern history is the wide diffusion of the English race, the sweep of its commerce, and dominance of its institutions, its imperial control of the destinies of half of the globe." And whilst in many respects it is true that the Overseas Dominions and Colonies have modified various characteristics of our institutions to meet the requirements of their national life, yet they have generally retained the outstanding features of our legal system, an institution which is in truth one of the cornerstones of the Empire and stands for freedom and purity of justice wherever the British flag flies. It was in order to uphold that freedom and all the principles of right which are so dear to the Empire, that her sons came together from all quarters of the world and fought and learned to appreciate more fully the sterling qualities of each other during the great War that has ravaged the world for the last four years.

Now, when the dawn of Peace has arisen and the bonds of friendship between the English-speaking races are daily becoming more secure, when this country is confronted with the problems of reconstruction and the reorganisation of its commerce and industry, is a fitting moment to produce a work that side by side will trace the source and growth of the law of England and of the Empire, so that the Overseas Dominions will see the development not only of our own law, but also its influence on the growth of their law, and we in this country shall learn how they have approached and decided problems which they in the infancy of their national life have had to overcome, and which we from our close contact with them during the War and in our new strength are bound to meet in the era of Peace we hope is now opening out before us.

SECT. 1.—ACTION AND OTHER LIKE TERMS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—ACTION.

A. Under Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66).

1. Essential features—Plaintiff & defendant.]—The words "rules of ct." in s. 100 of the above Act are not confined to rules of the High Ct., & the term "action" includes any civil proceeding in which there is a pltf. who sues & a deft. who is sued in respect of some cause of action as contrasted with proceedings such as statutory proceedings which are embraced in the word "matter" (BUCKLEY, L.J.).—JOHNSON v. REFUGE ASSURANCE CO., LTD., [1913] 1 K. B. 259; 82 L. J. K. B. 411; 108 L. T. 242; 29 T. L. R. 127; 57 Sol. Jo. 128, C. A. S. C. No. 8, post.

2. ——— Judgment against defendant possible.]—ROBERTS v. BATTERSEA METROPOLITAN BOROUGH, Nos. 5, 15, 27, 28, 70, post.

3. Award—Application to enforce.]—An application for a rule calling on a party to show cause against his paying money according to an award which has been made a rule of ct. is not made in an "action" within R. S. C. (1875), O. 53, r. 2 (see, now, R. S. C. (1883), O. 52, r. 2).—Re PHILIPS & HILL (1875), 1 Q. B. D. 78; 45 L. J. Q. B. 136; 24 W. R. 158.

4. Administration bond—Application to enforce.]—An application for the assignment of an administration bond with a view to its being enforced against the sureties is not a proceeding in any "action" within R. S. C. (1875), O. 53, r. 2 (see, now, R. S. C. (1883), O. 52, r. 2).—In the Goods of CARTWRIGHT (1876), 1 P. D. 422; 34 L. T. 72; 40 J. P. 104; 24 W. R. 214; 3 Char. Pr. Cas. 399.

5. Certiorari.]—ROBERTS v. BATTERSEA METROPOLITAN BOROUGH, No. 2, ante; Nos. 15, 27, 28, 70, post.

6. Counterclaim.]—A counterclaim cannot be deemed an "action," it not being commenced by writ of summons.—MCGOWAN v. MIDDLETON (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 464; 52 L. J. Q. B. 355; 31 W. R. 835.

For full anns., see SET-OFF & COUNTERCLAIM.

7. ——— For purposes of transfer.]—A deft. to an action in the Ch. Div. counterclaimed for libel & slander:—Held: the word "action" in R. S. C., O. 36, r. 2, did not apply to a counterclaim so as to entitle deft. to have the action & counterclaim transferred to the K. B. Div. for a trial by a judge with a jury; though the ct. might exercise its discretion & send the issues raised by the counterclaim to be tried by a judge with a jury.—KINNAIRD (LORD) v. FIELD, [1905] 2 Ch. 361; 74 L. J. Ch. 692; 93 L. T. 190; 54 W. R. 85; 21 T. L. R. 682; 49 Sol. Jo. 670, C. A.

Annotation:—Refd. R. v. Westminster Assmt. Com., R. v. Islington Assmt. Com., [1917] 2 K. B. 215, C. A.

See, further, SET-OFF & COUNTERCLAIM.

8. County court action.]—The word "action" in s. 100 includes a ct. ct. action, since such an action is a civil proceeding commenced in manner prescribed by rules of ct.; & therefore an order of the Div. Ct. dismissing an appeal from a judgment in a ct. ct. action commenced by plaintiff is a final order in an action, & not "in a matter not being an action," within R. S. C., O. 58, r. 15.—JOHNSON v. REFUGE ASSOC., No. 1, ante.

9. Information.]—The term "action" in R. S. C., O. 1, r. 1, includes an action (formerly known as an information) by the A.-G. at the relation of a pltf., for which proceeding the title "information" should no longer be used.—A.-G. v. SHREWSBURY BRIDGE CO. (1880), 42 L. T. 79.

10. Interpleader proceedings.]—An interpleader issue was ordered to be tried by jury. The case was tried & verdict passed for defts. A new trial was granted on the ground of misdirection. Pltf. gave notice of trial to be by a judge alone without a jury under R. S. C., O. 36, r. 2:—Held: he was not entitled to do this, because interpleader proceedings were not an "action" within s. 100.—HAMLYN v. BETTELEY (1880), 6 Q. B. D. 63; 50 L. J. Q. B. 1; 43 L. 12. Originating summons—When action.]—An originating summons was taken out for administration of real & personal estate. The summons was dismissed. On appeal to the C. A. a preliminary objection was taken that the appeal was out of time because notice of appeal had not been given in due time:—Held: (1) an originating summons taken out under R. S. C., O. 55, r. 3, was a civil proceeding commenced otherwise than by writ in manner prescribed by rules of ct., & was an "action" within s. 100; (2) it was not "a matter not being an action" within R. 21. Bankruptcy motion.—The high bailiff of a city. ct. levied two executions against the goods of a debtor. He then received an intimation that a petition was about to be filed, & a motion was made by the trustee in bkpcy. under Bkpcy. Act, 1883 (c. 52), s. 45. At the hearing a preliminary objection was taken that the formalities prescribed by Cty. Cts. Act, 1888 (c. 43), ss. 52, 53, 54, were not complied with:—Held: the motion was not an "action" within those sects. & the objection must be disallowed.—Re LOCKE (LOCK), Ex p. POPPLETON (1890), 63 L. T. 320; 39 W. R. 15; 6 T. L. R. 384; 7 Morr. 184.

22. Counterclaim.—An action was brought in the High Ct. & debt. counterclaimed for slander. Pltf. having become bkpt., the trustee in bkpcy. obtained a stay as to the claim in the action:—Held: the counterclaim, although the issue raised by it was the only issue left for trial in the action, could not be treated as an "action" for the purpose of remitting to the city. ct. under s. 66.—*DELOBBEL-FLIPO (DALOBBEL-FLIPO) v. 29. Declaration, action for.—Plffs., being about to erect certain buildings upon land within defts.' district, were served by defts. with notice that if they did so legal proceedings would be taken against them for infringing Public Health (Buildings in Streets) Act, 1888 (c. 52). Plffs. thereupon brought an action against defts. for a declaration that they were entitled to erect the contemplated buildings without defts.' consent. The action having been dismissed with costs:—Held: it was an "action" within s. 1 of the Act of 1893, & defts. were entitled to their costs as between solr. & client.—GRAND JUNCTION WATERWORKS CO. v. HAMPTON URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1899), 63 J. P. 503; 15 T. L. R. 412; 43 Sol. Jo. 570.

30. Injunction.—F. brought an action against a corpn. for an injunction to prevent it from using a weir in such fashion as to allow the water in storm time to injure his land. The action was dismissed & pltf. ordered to pay costs as between solr. & client under s. 1:—Held: the word "action" in the above sect. included an action for an injunction in the Ch. Div. & the order as to costs was right.—FIELDEN (FIELDING) v. MORLEY CORPN., [1899] 1 Ch. 1; 67 L. J. Ch. 611; 79 L. T. 231; 47 W. R. 295, C. A.; aff'd., [1900] A. C. 133, H. L.

36. Divorce Court proceedings—Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (c. 52).]—Causes or suits in the Divorce Ct. are not called "actions," & its decisions are not called judgments, but decrees.

In a suit by a husband against his wife for dissolution of marriage on the ground of adultery a decree nisi for dissolution was made, the decree containing an order for payment of petitioner's costs by co-resp. The decree was afterwards made absolute; the costs were taxed at £204, & an order was made that co-resp. should pay the amount within a specified time. He failed to comply with the order:—Held: (1) there had not been a "final judgment" for the amount within s. 4 (1) (g) of the above Act; (2) petitioner could not issue a bkpcy. notice against co-resp. in respect of it.—*Re BINSTEAD, Ex p. 37. Information—Parliamentary Oaths Act, 1866 (c. 19).]—Although in some cases "actions" include indictments or even criminal informations, the word "action" in the above Act, penalties under which are "to be recovered by action," must be construed according to its ordinary meaning; it means action in one of the superior cts.

An information laid by the A.-G. under the above Act is a civil action with all the consequences, including a right of appeal (BRETT, M.R.).—A.-G. v. BRADLAUGH (1885), 14 Q. B. D. 667; 54 L. J. Q. B. 205; 52 L. T. 589; 33 W. R. 673, C. A.

F. Commencement of Action.

55. When writ issued.—The writ is now the commencement of the action for all purposes.—THOMPSON v. DICAS (1833), 1 Cr. & M. 768; 2 Dowl. 93; 3 Tyr. 873; 2 L. J. Ex. 294; 149 E. R. 609.

56. —.]—A plea of tender before action is supported by proof of tender after pltf.'s attorney had applied for a writ of latitat, but before the issue thereof.—BRIGGS v. CALVERLEY (1800), 8 Term Rep. 629; 101 E. R. 1585.

57. —.]—In assumpsit for goods sold & delivered, the question being whether deft. had not paid for them before action brought, it appeared that deft. paid pltf. after the issue, but before service of an alias pluries writ:—Held: the issue of the writ was the commencement of the action.—TOMS v. POWELL (1806), 7 East, 536; 3 Smith, K. B. 554; 103 E. R. 207.

58. —.]—In an action against an attorney for goods sold & delivered, deft. pleaded payment. Payment was made on the day pltf. filed his bill, & there was no evidence as to whether the payment was made before or after notice of the bill being filed was served on deft.:—Held: the filing of a bill was the commencement of an action against an attorney without notice being served upon him (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—GODARD v. BENJAMIN (1813), 3 Camp. 331.

59. —.]—Where payment was made after pltf. had issued a writ of latitat:—Held: a plea of payment was bad.—FRANCIS v. CRYWELL (1822), 5 B. & Ald. 886; 1 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 546; 106 E. R. 1415.
Annotations:—Refd. Worswick v. Beswick (1830), 8 L. J. O. S. K. B. 305. Mentd. Cook v. Hopewell (1856), 11 Exch. 555.

60. —.]—Deft. was arrested on Apr. 1 & owing to Easter Monday & Tuesday falling on the 8th & 9th had the 10th to put in bail. Pltf. on the 10th took an assignment of the bail bond, & issued a writ of summons against the bail. The ct. set aside the proceedings on the bail bond:—Held: since Uniformity of Process Act, 1832 (c. 39), suing out the writ of summons was the commencement of the action for all purposes, & the cause of action was not complete until after the 10th.—ALSTON v. UNDERHILL (1833), 1 Cr. & M. 492; 2 Dowl. 26; 3

Tyr. 427; 2 L. J. Ex. 238; 149 E. R. 494. S. C. No. 163, post.

61. — Actual time of issue.—To issue a writ of summons is not a judicial act, & the ct. may inquire at what period of the day it was issued.

It appeared from the statement of claim that the writ of summons in the action was issued on July 2, & that the cause of action arose on the same day, but before issue of the writ. The statement of claim was demurred to on the ground that the issuing of the writ was a judicial act, and must be presumed to have taken place at the earliest moment of the day, before the cause of action accrued:—Held: the ct. could inquire whether or not the writ was in fact issued after the cause of action accrued.—CLARKE v. BRADLAUGH (1881), 8 Q. B. D. 63; 51 L. J. Q. B. 1; 46 L. T. 49; 46 J. P. 278; 30 W. R. 53, C. A.

62. —.]—The issue of a writ in an action for the infringement of a copyright on the same day, but subsequently to the registration of such copyright under Copyright Act, 1842 (c. 45), sufficiently complies with s. 24 of that Act, so as to enable the person making the registration to sue in respect of the infringement.—WARNE v. LAWRENCE (1886), 54 L. T. 371; 34 W. R. 452; 2 T. L. R. 427.

63. Audita querela.—GILES v. HUTT, No. 34, ante.

64. Petition—Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (c. 27).—The proceeds of sale of mtgd. premises, sold under the power of sale in a mtge. deed by the trustees of the mtgee., were paid into ct. in a suit for administration of mtgee.'s estate, & there being nearly 20 years' arrears of interest due on the mtge. exceeding in amount the fund in ct., the trustees petitioned for payment out of the fund to satisfy such arrears, & the assignee of mtgor. was served with the petition:—Held: (1) this petition was not a "suit" to recover arrears of interest within s. 42 of the above Act; (2) the claim of mtgee.'s trustees in respect of interest was not limited to 6 years' arrears.—EDMUNDS (EDMUND) v. WAUGH (1866), L. R. 1 Eq. 418; 35 L. J. Ch. 234; 13 L. T. 739; 12 Jur. N. S. 326; 14 W. R. 257.

66. Release of suits.—A release of "all suits" is a release of executions, & is larger & more beneficial than a release of "quarrels" or of "actions."—ALTHAM'S CASE, No. 50, ante.

Annotations:—Refd. Lampet's Case (1612), 10 Co. Rep. 46 b; Wilton v. Bye (1618), Cro. Jac. 486; Williams v. Fry (1672), 2 Keb. 756, 787, 814, 867.

67. — Writ of error.—A writ of error was a "suit"; by a release of all suits the writ was destroyed.—COLE'S CASE (1622), Lat. 110; 82 E. R. 299.

68. Covenant not to sue.—A suit in Ch. comes within a covenant the condition of which reads as PART I. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 1.—F.

55 i. When writ issued.—The day of issue of a summary writ, & not the day of the teste, is considered the commencement of the action; a process sued out on a demand accruing subsequent to the teste but before the issuing, is sufficient.—STEPHENSON v. McLELLAN (1848), 6 N. B. R. (1 All.) 19.—CAN.

55 ii. —.]—The issue of writ, & not the filing of the declaration, is the commencement of an action.—STILES v. BREWSTER (1859), 9 N. B. R. (4 All.) 414.—CAN.

55 iii. —.]—In a suit brought in a justice's ct., the filing of the particulars of pltf.'s claim with the justice is not the commencement of the action.—McPHERSON v. MCKINNON (1879), 19 N. B. R. (3 P. & B.) 3.—CAN.

SUB-SECT. 3.—PROCEEDING, ETC.

70. Scope of term.]—A "proceeding" need not be an action; it may be no more than an act which may or may not terminate in an action.—ROBERTS v. BATTERSEA METROPOLITAN BOROUGH, Nos. 2, 5, 15, 27, 28, ante.

71. Companies Act, 1862 (c. 89), s. 85—Quasi-criminal proceedings.]—"Proceedings" within this sect. included not only the legal proceedings referred to in ss. 65 et seq., but also quasi-criminal proceedings for the recovery of penalties under ss. 26, 27 of the Act, & under Life Assurance Cos. Act, 1870 (c. 61), ss. 8, 10.—RE BRITON MEDICAL & GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE ASSOCN. (1886), 32 Ch. D. 503; 55 L. J. Ch. 416; 54 L. T. 152; 34 W. R. 390; 2 T. L. R. 344.

72. —Execution.]—The word "proceeding" in ss. 85, 87, included execution under a judgment in an action (JESSEL, M.R.).—RE ARTISTIC COLOUR PRINTING CO. (1880), 14 Ch. D. 502; 49 L. J. Ch. 526; 42 L. T. 802; 28 W. R. 943.

For full anns., see COMPANIES.

73. Evidence Act, 1851 (c. 99), s. 13—Action.]—An action in a superior ct. is a "proceeding" in which a certified copy of a record is admissible as evidence of the record under the above sect.—RICHARDSON v. WILLIS (1872), L. R. 8 Ex. 69; 42 L. J. Ex. 15; 27 L. T. 828; 12 Cox. C. C. 298.

74. Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66)—Not step in action.]—In s. 89, "proceeding" is used for "action," not for any step in an action.—PRYOR v. CITY OFFICES CO. (1883), 10 Q. B. D. 504; 52 L. J. Q. B. 362; 48 L. T. 698; 31 W. R. 777, C. A.

76. —Not voluntary arbitration.]—Where parties agree to refer their disputes to arbn., no action having been brought in respect of those disputes, the ct. or a judge has no power under R. S. C., O. 37, r. 5, to order the issue of a commission for examination of witnesses in the matter referred to arbn., since the arbn. is not a "proceeding" in the High Ct. within Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 100.—RE SHAW & RONALDSON, [1892] 1 Q. B. 91; 61 L. J. Q. B. 141; 8 T. L. R. 85. S. C. No. 99, post.

89. Taking proceedings—What amounts to.—W. having refused to pay calls on certain shares, the co. commenced an action to enforce payment, & on July 12 applied for final judgment under R. S. C., O. 14. W. filed an affidavit in opposition to the application, alleging that he had been induced to take the shares by misrepresentation, & stating that he intended to counterclaim for rescission on that ground. Leave to defend was given. A petition for winding up the co. was presented on July 22, & W. delivered his defence & counterclaim on Aug. 2. A winding up order was made on the petition on Aug. 3. W. applied to have his name removed from the list of contributories:—Held: W. having asserted his right to repudiate the shares in the affidavit on which he obtained leave to defend the application under R. S. C., O. 14, he had in substance taken legal steps before commencement of the winding up to have his name removed from the register.—Re GENERAL RAILWAY SYNDICATE, WHITELEY'S CASE, [1900] 1 Ch. 365; 69 L. SUB-SECT. 4.—CAUSE OR MATTER.

91. "Cause."—The word "cause" in Eccles. Cts. Act, 1812 (c. 127), s. 1, is not a technical word, but means causa jurisdictionis, any suit, action, matter, or other similar proceeding competently brought before & litigated in a particular ct. 98. — Compulsory arbitration.]—A co. whose property consisted of gold mines in India, having passed resolutions for voluntary liquidation & reconstruction, a dissentient member of the liquidating co., in an arbn. under Cos. Act, 1862 (c. 89), ss. 161, 162, claimed to have his interest valued at the price at which the shares in the new co. were issued under the scheme of reconstruction; but the liquidators claimed that such interest should be valued on the footing of a realisation of the assets, & took out a summons entitled "In the Matter of Cos. Acts, 1862 & 1867," for a commission to India to examine witnesses as to the value of the property:—Held: (1) the application was made in a "matter" within Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 100, & R. S. C., O. 37, r. 5; (2) in the circumstances the ct. would make the order, as being necessary for the purposes of justice within the above rule.—Re MYSORE WEST GOLD MINING CO., LTD. (1889), 42 Ch. b. Action—Appeal causes in county court.]—Popularly speaking, suits brought into the ct. by appeal are spoken of as appeal causes only, & not as "actions." Cty. Cts. Consolidation Act (Nova Scotia), 1889 (c. 9), s. 64, providing for appeals in all "actions" does not extend to appeals by a garnishee, appeals relating to removal of paupers, bastardy proceedings, etc.—HALIFAX PILOT COMMRS. v. FARQUHAR (1894), 26 N. S. R. 333.—CAN.

c. — Counterclaim.]—A counterclaiming deft. is not a pltf. in an action; nor is a counterclaim an "action."—IRWIN v. BROWN (1888), 12 P. R. 639.—CAN.

d. — —.]—An answer to a counterclaim is termed a defence in the Practice Rules (Ontario).—IRWIN v. TURNER (1895), 16 P. R. 349.—CAN.

e. — Execution.]—Limitations Act (Ontario), 1910 (c. 34), Part III., of which s. 49 is the first sect., is headed "Personal Actions," a well-understood term which clearly does not include the issue or renewal of a writ of execution.—POUCHER v. WILKINS (1915), 33 O. L. R. 125; 7 O. W. N. 670.—CAN.

f. — Garnishee proceeding.]—For some purposes of Division Cts. Act, R. S. O. 1887 (c. 51), a distinction is made between an "action" or "cause" and a garnishee proceeding, but not for purposes of transfer.—Re MCCABE v.

g. — Habeas corpus.]—A prisoner can obtain relief in the ct. under the Act "Of the Liberty of the Subject." As regards that Act the ct. has concurrent jurisdiction with the S. C.; but the proceeding is not an "action," & there is no provision for an appeal.—Re HARRIS (1894), 26 N. S. R. 508.—CAN.

But see Cty. Ct. Act (Nova Scotia), R. S., 1900 (c. 156), s. 35.

h. — Information.]—O. 1, r. 1, provides that all actions & suits which previous to Oct. 1, 1884, were commenced by writ, bill or information in the S. C., shall be instituted in the ct. by a proceeding to be called "an action."—Held: the word "information" in the rule must be read in the same sense as the corresponding word in the English rule (O. 1, r. 1), as referring exclusively to informations in Chancery, & would not cover an information in the nature of a quo warranto.—A-G. v. BERGEN (1896), 29 N. S. R. 135.—CAN.

i. — —.]—Limitations Act (Ontario).—The word "action" in Limitations Act (c. 34), s. 49, is used in its ordinary sense & only applies to an action or proceeding in the nature of an action. The interpretation section (s. 2 (a)), which reads "action" shall include an information on behalf of the Crown, and any civil proceeding, does not extend the ordinary meaning of the word.—*POUCHER v. t. Fresh action for same cause—Special damage not identical.]—A. sued B. by civil bill process, for having sold pltf. a cow, warranted sound, but which was unsound. The civil bill assigned as special damage that four other cows of pltf. became infected by her, & died. B. having been decreed in this suit, appealed, relying upon a decree against himself at a former sessions at the suit of A. immediately after the death of the particular cow, for breach of the above warranty. By that decree, deft. had been ordered to pay the value of the deceased cow:—Held: as both actions were in contract, & for substantially the same cause of action, although the special damage was not identical, pltf. was not entitled to recover. Semble: the result would have been the same had the second action been framed expressly in tort for the consequential damage.—GARDINER v. MATHEWSON (1853), 6 Ir. Jur. 147.—IR.

u. Fresh action for integral part of original suit.]—In Sept., 1883, pltf., a firm of millers, delivered to defts. a quantity of flour to be carried on their ry., nine sacks being consigned to D., who had purchased same from pltf., and the remainder being consigned to pltf. themselves. Some of the flour received by pltf., & the greater portion of that delivered to D., was damaged in the course of carriage. D. had used two & a half sacks before he discovered that it was contaminated, whereupon he returned five sacks to pltf. & claimed from them damages for the sacks he had used. Pltf.

SUB-SECT. 4.—SEPARATION OF CAUSES OF ACTION AND SPLITTING DEMANDS.

A. In General.

114. General principle.]—It is a rule that when a thing directly wrongful in itself is done to a man, in itself a cause of action, he must, if he sues in respect of it, do so once & for all. As, if he is beaten or wounded, if he sues he must sue for all his damage, past, present, & future, certain & contingent. He cannot maintain an action for a broken arm, & subsequently for a broken rib, though he did not know of it when he commenced his first action. If he sustained two injuries from a blow, one to his person, another to his property, as, for instance, damage to his watch, there is no doubt that he could maintain two actions in respect of his one blow. The same would be true of an action for consequential damages. A man slandered by words actionable in themselves must sue, if at all, for all his damage in one action. Probably, if he sustained special damage, as that he lost a contract through being charged with theft, he might maintain one action for the actionable slander, another for the personal loss (LORD BRAMWELL).—DARLEY MAIN COLLIERY CO. v. MITCHELL, Nos. 118, 224, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 118, post.

115. —.]—There is no positive law (except so far as the Cty. Cts. Acts have from a very early date dealt with the matter) against splitting demands which are essentially separable, although the High Ct. has inherent power to prevent vexation or oppression, & by staying proceedings or by apportioning the costs, would have always ample means of preventing any injustice arising out of the recklessness of legal procedure (BOWEN, L.J.).—BRUNSDEN v. HUMPHREY, No. 122, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 122, post.

116. — Dilapidation of rectory—Non-repair of chancel.]—In an action against the exor. of a deceased rector for dilapidations to the chancel & pew, defts. pleaded that pltf. had recovered in a previous action for want of reparation of the rectory house & other buildings belonging to the rectory, that the chancel & pew were in the same state as at the commencement of the former action, & that the compensation then claimed might have been recovered in the former action:—Held: the injury from dilapidation of the rectory could not be identified with non-repair of the chancel, & there was no entirety in the cause of action.—YOUNG v. MUNBY (1815), 4 M. & S. 183; 105 E. R. 802.

117. Separate cause of action in respect of new subsidence.]—Where there is a claim against an administrator for money had & received by the intestate, for coal tortiously taken by him from pltf.'s land, & sold by him, & part has been raised notified defts. of the damage & issued a civil bill process without, however, claiming in respect of the sacks used by D., & obtained a decree. D. then issued a civil bill against pltf. for the two & a half sacks, & obtained a decree, & the amount was paid by pltf. to D. Defts. were served with notice of D.'s civil bill. Pltf. afterwards sued defts. to recover the amount they had been obliged to pay to D.:—Held: the injury to the two & a half sacks being an integral part of the cause of action arising from defts.' negligence in the carriage of the flour & for which pltf. sued in the first civil bill process, the second civil bill action was not maintainable.—RUSSELL & SONS v. WATERFORD & LIMERICK RY. CO. (1885), 16 L. R. Ir. 314.—IR.

more than 6 months before intestate's death, & part within 6 months, pltf. may bring trespass, under Civil Procedure Act, 1833 (c. 42), s. 2, for so much as was raised within the 6 months, and also money had & received for so much as was raised before, the acts being distinct, and the two actions not incompatible.—POWELL v. REES (1837), 7 A. & E. 426; 2 Nev. & P. K. B. 571; Will. Woll. & Dav. 680; 8 L. J. Q. B. 47; 112 E. R. 530.

118. ——[When damage is caused to land by removal of the minerals under it & the consequent subsidence of the surface, the owner has a cause of action as often as such damage takes place.

Resp. was the owner of land, & in 1867 & 1868 appls. worked out the coal under the land without leaving proper support, in consequence of which the surface subsided, & some cottages belonging to resp. were injured. Appls. made compensation for the injury, & did not work the minerals after 1868. In 1882 a further subsidence occurred from the combined effect of the previous workings of appls. & workings under the adjoining land. Resp. brought an action to recover compensation for the injury he had sustained:—Held: (1) a new cause of action arose in respect of the second subsidence; (2) resp.'s right to maintain an action for the injury he had sustained was not barred by Stat. Limitations.—DARLEY MAIN COLLIERY CO. v. MITCHELL (1886), 11 App. Cas. 127; 55 L. J. Q. B. 529; 54 L. T. 882; 51 J. P. 148; 2 T. L. R. 301, H. L. S. C. No. 114, ante; No. 224, post.

Creditor's debt secured by mortgage—Action to recover residue of debt.—[A creditor whose debt is secured by pledge or mtge. necessarily resorts to legal proceedings to make his security available, & if he realises only a portion of his debt, there is no reason why he should not have recourse to a common law ct. for the recovery of the residue (BYLES, J.)].—*NELSON v. 120. ——[Deft. charged her property with repayment of £100 & interest to pltf., & gave him four supplementary charges to secure further advances. She then gave him another supplementary charge to secure a further advance & his professional costs. Pltf. brought an action on the first five charges, omitting the sixth, which was mislaid, & obtained an order for foreclosure nisi. He afterwards found the sixth charge, & applied for an order extending the relief to that charge, but his application was dismissed with costs. He then brought a fresh action for foreclosure on all six charges. Deft. took out a summons asking that the proceedings might be stayed on the ground that pltf. was estopped by the foreclosure order:—Held: (1) the subject-matter of the fresh action was not the same as that in the first action; (2) in the circumstances pltf. was not estopped from setting up his present case; (3) deft.'s application must be dismissed with costs.—*BAKE v. 121. Sheriff's negligence—Money had & received.—[After the sheriff's death & before the appointment of his successor, the under-sheriff sold goods taken in execution before the death of the sheriff, & paid part of the proceeds to the execution creditors, but died before paying over the balance. The execution creditors, more than 6 months after the death of the under-sheriff, on entering upon the administration sued his exors. for negligence & extortion in the under-sheriff, & also for money had & received:—Held: (1) an action for money had & received would lie against exors. of the under-sheriff; (2) the action for money had & received, not requiring the same evidence to support it as the action for tort, might be brought although the tort had not been waived.—*GLOUCESTERSHIRE BANKING CO. v. B. Claims in Tort.

122. Same wrongful act—Two distinct torts—Injury to person—Damage to property.—[Damage to goods & injury to the person, although they have been occasioned by one & the same wrongful act, are infringements of different rights, & give rise to distinct causes of action; & the recovery in an action of compensation for the damage to the goods is no bar to an action subsequently commenced for the injury to the person.

Pltf. brought an action in a cty. ct. for damage to his cab occasioned by negligence of deft.'s servant, & having recovered the amount claimed, afterwards brought an action in the High Ct. against deft., claiming damages for personal injury sustained by pltf. through the same negligence:—Held: the action was maintainable & was not barred by the previous proceedings in the cty. ct.—*BRUNSDEN v. 124. ——— Damage to credit.]—Deft., a comr. in bkpcy., wrongfully seized the goods of pltf., who was no bkpt. In an action on the case for damage to his credit:—Held: it was no defence that pltf. had already recovered damages in trespass for the goods taken from him. The same thing may give several causes of action.—WATSON v. NORBURY (1649), Sty. 201; 82 E. R. 645.

125. ——— Trespass to land.]—Certain premises were let to pltf. by P., who had previously mtgd. them to defts., trustees of a benefit building society, to secure payment of subscriptions, etc., which might become due from him to the society. The mtge. deed gave power to defts. to distrain the goods of P., on the premises for arrears of subscriptions due to the society, as for rent due on a demise. Defts. distrained on the premises for subscriptions due from P., & seized pltf.'s goods. Pltf. replevied the goods, & recovered in the action of replevin, in the ct. ct., as damages, the amount of the expenses of the replevin bond. Having sustained further consequential damages by reason of the seizure of his goods, he brought an action of trespass in the High Ct., to recover these damages, & also in respect of the trespass to the land:—Held: (1) the judgment in replevin was a bar to the action in respect of trespass to the goods, as the special damage was recoverable in the action of replevin; (2) the judgment in replevin was no bar to the action in respect of trespass to the land, as it was not in respect of the same cause of action.—GIBBS v. CRUIKSHANK (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 454; 42 L. J. C. P. 273; 28 L. T. 735; 37 J. P. 244; 21 W. R. 734.

126. ——— Malicious prosecution—False imprisonment.]—To an action for falsely, maliciously, & without any reasonable or probable cause, charging pltf. with larceny, before J.J. indicting pltf., & causing him to be tried on such charge, on which he was afterwards acquitted, deft. pleaded that before commencement of the suit pltf. brought an action of trespass against deft. for assaulting & imprisoning him on a false & unreasonable assertion that he had committed felony; that to that action deft. pleaded the general issue & a justification of the assertion, & imprisonment in consequence, & on a trial of which action the judge directed the jury to take into their consideration the question whether deft. had charged & accused pltf. with having stolen the goods mentioned in the declaration, & falsely & maliciously, & without any reasonable or probable cause, committed the grievances complained of in the present action; that the jury found for pltf. & assessed damages, & that pltf. recovered judgment for same, with costs; averring the identity of the imprisonments in the two actions, & that the grievances complained of were the same in respect of which damages had been given on the former occasion:—Held: (1) this plea was no answer to the action, as the causes of action were different; (2) the judge had misdirected the jury on the trial of the former action. Qu.: whether it would have been a defence that on the trial of the former action damages in respect of the cause of action complained of in the present had been assessed by the jury with the consent of the parties.—*GUEST v. 127. ——— Defamation—Different innuendoes.]—In an action for slander deft. pleaded that pltf. had unsuccessfully brought a previous action against him on the same words, except that no innuendo had been attached to them. On demurrer:—Held: pltf. could not entitle himself to a new action by a new interpretation of the same words.—GARDNER v. HELVIS (1684), 3 Lev. 248; 83 E. R. 673.

128. ——— Different defendants.]—If A. & B., having recovered in separate actions for libels against different persons engaged in the management & publication of the same newspaper, commence fresh actions against the same parties, each suing the party against whom the other has recovered, the ct. will not interfere in a summary way to set aside the latter proceedings.—*MARTIN v. Annotation:—Refd. Brunson v. Humphrey (1884), 14 Q. B. D. 141, C. A.

129. ——— Different passages in same publication.]—Deft. published in pamphlet form a report of the judgment delivered in a former action which pltf. had brought against him. The pamphlet contained no report of the evidence given at the trial, & there were passages in the judgment reflecting on pltf.'s conduct. Pltf. brought an action for libel in respect of such publication, & the jury found the pamphlet was a fair, accurate & honest report of the judgment & was published without malice, & returned a verdict for deft. Pltf. brought another action for libel in respect of the same publication; but he relied on defamatory statements in the pamphlet other than those set out in the statement of claim in the former action for libel. On an application to dismiss this action as frivolous & vexatious:—Held: (1) the questions for the jury in the second action for libel being identical with those decided in the first, a plea of res judicata must succeed; (2) the action ought to be stayed as frivolous & vexatious; (3) even if pltf. could rely in one action on one part of the pamphlet, & in another action on another part, such a course was an abuse of the process of the ct., & the second action should be stayed.—MACDOUGALL v. KNIGHT (1890), 25 Q. B. D. 1; 59 L. J. Q. B. 517; 63 L. T. 43; 54 J. P. 788; 38 W. R. 553; 6 T. L. R. 276, C. A.

136. Distinct claims—Separate actions.—Pltf. in a former action declared on a promissory note, & for goods sold, but upon executing a writ of inquiry after judgment by default gave no evidence on the count for goods sold, & took his damages for the amount of his promissory note only:—Held: the judgment thereupon was no bar to his recovering in a subsequent action for the goods sold.—*SEDDON v. 137. ———.—]—Pltf. declared in debt for double rent, for use & occupation, with a count for money had & received; & obtained a general verdict for the amount of rent only. Two days before trial of the action, he delivered a declaration in judgment-debtor. In 1886 he brought another suit to recover the principal & residue of interest:—Held: (1) the cause of action in the suit of 1882 was mtgr.'s non-delivery of possession of the property, by reason of which mtgee. had been unable to realise his interest from the usufruct; (2) the cause of action to recover the principal accrued at the same time & was the same cause of action, & pltf. was bound in the suit of 1882 to sue for the principal, & the present suit was barred by Civil Procedure Code (India), s. 43.—*HIKMATULLA KHAN v. z. ———.—Price of goods sold & damages for non-acceptance.—A claim for the price of goods sold is a cause of action different from a claim for damages for non-acceptance of goods pursuant to contract. Such claims, although arising under the same contract, may be sued upon separately. But where a purchaser takes some goods, and breaks his contract in part by not paying for the goods he takes, & in part by not taking & paying for the remainder, the claim arises out of one cause of action; & the whole must be included in one suit.—*ANDERSON WRIGHT & Co. v. The particulars annexed to the first consisted of items from Nov., 1845, to July 12, 1849. The particulars of the second complaint consisted of three items, from April, 1846, to July 14, 1849. The pltf. recovered judgment in the first cause for £17, in the second for £19:—Held: the items in the two complaints were not so connected as to form one cause of action, although they might have been recovered under one count.—*KIMPTON v. 139. ———.—Deft. was indebted to pltf. for liquors supplied & money lent at different times. Pltf. had been in the habit of marking down the separate items, & afterwards entering them in his book as one account, & sent deft. an account including the whole, amounting to £36 10s. 4d. Pltf. levied a plaint in the ct. et. for £20 for goods sold the particulars of demand comprising no items for money lent. Having recovered judgment & obtained payment of this amount, he levied another plaint for £5 1s. 6d. for money lent, being the amount of the loans included in the account of £36 10s. 4d. At the hearing of the first plaint there was no abandonment:—Held: (1) these were distinct demands; (2) there was no ground for prohibition.—BRUNSKILL v. POWELL (1850), 1 L. M. & P. 550; 19 L. J. The bill was not paid at maturity, & pltf. issued a writ against deft., & by the indorsement thereon claimed the amount of the bill & interest at £20 per month as per agreement; but the declaration in the action was on the bill only, & contained no count upon the agreement or for interest, & pltf. recovered judgment by default for the amount of the bill only. Pltf. having brought a second action against deft. upon the agreement for interest:—Held: the action was maintainable for interest due before the judgment was recovered, but not for interest due subsequently to it.—*FLORENCE v. with same transaction, which assault the ct. had taken into consideration in measuring the punishment:—Held: a party applying for a criminal information waives all right to bring a civil action for same transaction.—R. v. O'BRIEN, (1824) Sm. & Bat. 79.—IR.

142. —Nominal damages after conviction.]—A person who has preferred an indictment for an assault, from which he did not suffer any personal injury, & has succeeded, & received from the Treasury a portion of the fine imposed upon deft., is not entitled, in an action against same deft., to recover more than nominal damages. It is the duty of an attorney when applied to to bring such action to dissuade the party from persevering in his intention.—JACKS v. BELL (1828), 3 C. & P. 316.

143. Libel.]—Where a rule nisi obtained for a criminal information for a libel, in the Q. B., is discharged on showing cause, appt. may bring an action in another ct. for publication of the same libel.—WAKLEY v. COOKE (1847), 16 M. & W. 822; 4 Dow. & L. 702; 16 L. J. Ex. 225; 11 J. P. 506; 11 Jur. 377; 153 E. R. 1424.

144. Misappropriation of money.]—Deft., an officer of a friendly society, was charged under Friendly Societies Act, 1875 (c. 60), s. 16 (9), with misappropriation of certain money. He was convicted & ordered to pay a penalty & to repay the money, & in default of compliance with this order, was imprisoned for 2 months with hard labour. An action having afterwards been instituted against him to recover the misappropriated money:—Held: his conviction & punishment under the above Act were a bar to remedy by action.

If the operation of the stat. had been confined to criminal proceedings I should have entertained no doubt that imprisonment for the criminal offence afforded no answer to a civil claim for the debt. The old principle of law, founded upon public policy & expediency,—that where a claim is founded on a matter which might be the subject of criminal proceedings, the person seeking to enforce it must prosecute for the criminal offence before he can sue in a civil action—is not in question here (LORD HALSBURY, C.)—VERNON v. WATSON, [1891] 2 Q. B. 288; 60 L. J. Q. B. 472; 64 L. T. 728; 56 J. P. 85; 39 W. R. 519; 7 T. L. R. 534, C. A.

action for tort.]—Notwithstanding s. 866 of the Criminal Code (Nova Scotia), a pltf. has the right to prosecute deft. criminally, & at the same time to sue him for damages for same illegal act. Application to stay proceedings in civil action will be refused.—HAMILTON v. CROWE (1897), 40 N. S. R. 217.—CAN.

145. Detention of goods.—A person who obtains an order from a police magistrate under Metropolitan Police Act, 1839 (c. 71), s. 40, for delivery up of goods improperly detained, is not thereby precluded from bringing an action for special damage arising out of the same detention.—*MIDLAND RY. 146. Breach of duty—Employment for hire.—In an action against three, wherein plff. declared that they had the loading of a hogshhead of plff. for a certain reward to be paid to one of them, & a certain other reward to the other two, & that defts. so negligently conducted themselves in the loading, etc., that the hogshhead was damaged:—Held: (1) the gist of the action was the tort, not the contract out of which it arose; (2) on plea of not guilty, the two being acquitted, judgment might be had against the third, who was found guilty.

What inconvenience is there in suffering the party to allege his gravamen, if he please, as consisting in a breach of duty arising out of an employment for hire, & to consider that breach of duty as tortious negligence, instead of considering the same circumstances as forming a breach of promise implied from the same consideration of hire?—(LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—(*GOVETT v. 147. — Broker.—Wherever there is a contract, & something is to be done in the course of the employment which is the subject of that contract, if there is a breach of duty in the course of that employment, the party injured may recover either in tort or in contract.

In case the declaration alleged that A. employed B. as broker, to sell & deliver oil, on the terms contained in such contracts of sale as should be made with persons who should become purchasers thereof, for reasonable commission to B.: that B. accepted the employment, & sold oil to C. on the terms of payment on delivery: that it thereupon became the duty of B. not to deliver the oil without payment; that B. delivered the oil to C., but did not obtain payment, whereby plff. was damaged:—Held: (1) this declaration set forth a good cause of action; (2) the duty of B. arose out of the contract.—BROWN v. BOORMAN, BOORMAN & WILD (1844), 11 Cl. & Fin. 1; 8 E. R. 1003, 11 L.

PART I. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 6.—A.

151 i. No action before cause of action arises.—Several creditors of deft. entered into a composition agreement with him, whereby they engaged to accept payment at certain stated periods, & among the rest, plff. agreed to grant 3 years for payment of his debt:—Held: plff. could not, before expiration of that period, maintain an action on a promissory note, which he had afterwards induced deft. to give him for the amount of his debt, payable by annual instalments, in fraud of the other creditors.—WILLARD v. KILMAN (1840), 3 N. B. R. (1 Kerr) 105.—CAN.

151 ii. —.—[An agreement between plff. & deft. & T. recited that T., in the hope of obtaining a vacate on the enrolment of certain recognisances, had accepted bills, the amount of one of which he had applied to plff. to advance until such vacate was had, & that T. bargained that plff. should be repaid the advance by deft. out of proceeds of the loan, deft. & W. having a certain amount in consols to their credit as trustees for T. In an action of debt:—

148. — Duty independent of contract.—Where the liability to do a certain act arises merely from an agreement to do it upon a good consideration, & there is no such relation between the contracting parties as would involve a common law duty in the performance, the non-performance of the act is not such a breach of duty as can be made the subject of an action of tort.

The third & fourth counts of a declaration set forth certain promises of deft. for a good consideration, & not connected with any common law duty arising from the relation between plff. & deft., & then alleged a breach of duty in deft. consisting solely in the neglect to do the acts which he had by such promises agreed to do, plff. having performed his part of the agreement. The last count was in trover. On general demurrer:—Held: the declaration was bad for misjoinder.—COURTENAY v. EARLE (1850), 10 C. B. 73; 1 L. M. & P. 764; 20 L. J. C. P. 7; 15 Jur. 15; 138 E. 149. False warranty.—Upon a declaration in case alleging a deceit to have been effected upon plff. by means of a warranty made by two defts. upon a joint sale to him by both of sheep, their joint property, plff. cannot recover upon proof of a contract of sale & warranty by one only as of his separate property; the action, though laid in tort, being founded on the joint contract alleged.—*WEALL v. 150. Waiver of rights under contract.—A person against whom a commission of bkpey. had been maliciously obtained, & to whom, after sup. the commission, the Lord Chancellor had assigned petitioning creditor's bond, having afterwards brought an action against petitioning creditor, & a rule of ct. having been made by consent referring the matters in dispute, except the bond assigned, to the award of an arbitrator, & an award having been made with an exception of the bond, an action cannot be maintained on the bond. An action on the case is a waiver of the right of action on the bond; to restore that right the agreement of the parties must be unequivocal.—HOLMES v. WAINSWRIGHT (1818), 1 Swan. 20; 36 E. R. 281.

Waiver of tort.—See CONTRACT.

SUB-SECT. 6.—AS NECESSARY PRELIMINARY TO WRIT.

A. In General.

151. No action before cause of action arises.—A promise was made for payment of a sum of money on Mar. 19; the action was brought on Mar. 16: Held: judgment must be reversed, since the action was brought before there was any cause of action.—EGLES v. VALE (1605), Cro. Jac. 69; 79 E. R. 59. S. C. No. 173, post.

Held: (1) the liability of deft. was only to arise on default of T.; (2) a declaration omitting to state that T. had not paid, by reason whereof a right against deft. accrued to plff., was defective.—PORTER v. GRAHAM, [1894] 13 I. L. R. 49 (Q. B.)—IR.

MORELAND* (1678), 2 Lev. 197; 83 E. R. 516.

153. — Premature action set aside.]—If an action be prematurely brought before the cause of action accrued the ct. will on a summary application set aside the proceeding.—KERR v. DICK, No. 168, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 168, post.

154. No relief in equity till title accrued.]—Pltf. was bound to establish a title to relief at the time of the filing of his bill in the old Ct. of Ch.; if he then had no title to relief his bill was improperly filed. General convenience has since relaxed the above rules in matters of account.

K., after bill filed, published a book by N. which B. alleged to be a piracy. It was only by pltf.'s bill that K. had notice of N.'s covenant making him responsible to pltf.:—Held: there was no case on which an injunction against K. could be continued.—BARFIELD v. KELLY (1828), 4 Russ. 355; 38 E. R. 839. S. C. No. 177, post.

155. Defect not cured by amendment.]—A judgment having been obtained in an action commenced before the debt became due, on a writ of error to reverse the judgment:—Held: the ct. would not allow the proceedings to be amended.—RUSSELL v. TONY (1694), 4 Mod. Rep. 367; 87 E. R. 447.

156. —.]—Where there was no title to sue at the time of filing an original bill or information, a decree in the Ct. of Ch. could not be founded upon a right of suit subsequently acquired & brought forward by a supplemental bill or under the new practice by way of amendment. This rule applied not only in cases where the title to sue in respect of the rents due under the kabullats. The kabullats stipulated that neither party should put an end to the lease prior to settlement of accounts:—Held: till the termination of the lease pltf. could not sue on the bond, his right of suit having been suspended during continuance of the ijara & dur-ijara.—DYA CHAND OSWAL v. MOORTEEDA DABEE (1870), 13 W. R. 24.—IND.

151 iv. —.]—A lease dated May 29, 1911, gave the lessee an option to purchase for cash the leased premises to the lessor stating that their client intended to exercise the option. This was followed by a request for preparation of a deed & some requisitions upon the title and the statement that their client would be ready to close "as soon as the papers were in shape." No reply was made to this letter, & on May 23 the sales. wrote to lessor that failing to hear on the following Monday they would issue a writ for specific performance. They so did on May 31. On June 1 lessee made a tender of the cash:—Held: there had been no acceptance of the offer embodied in the option; the option stipulated for cash which was not tendered until after issue of the writ.—MILLER v. ALLEN (1912), 7 D. L. R. 438; 4 O. W. N. 346; 23 O. W. R. 527.—CAN.

158 ii. —.]—K. su. a. N. for partition of the estate of V. (the father of N.) in the lifetime of V., who was alleged to be of unsound mind. N. objected that V. was alive. Before issues were settled, V. died, & the suit was tried, & K. obtained a decree. On appeal by N. on the ground that, when the plaint was filed, K. had no cause of action:—Held: the decree would not on this ground be set aside, seeing that the relief sought was justified by the facts on the record.—NARAYANA v. KRISHNA (1884), 1 L. R. 8 Mad. 214; 1 B. Dig. 617 (136).—IND.

g. Building contract.]—Pltf. sued for amount due under a building contract. Defts. had dismissed pltf. for defective work. The contract provided that after giving pltf. notice to remedy defects, defts. might make good such defects at of the whole matter of the suit had been acquired subsequently to the filing of the original bill, but also in cases where the title to sue in respect of any of the matters of the suit had been so acquired. The principle was that there must be a right of suit when the suit was commenced, & a supplemental bill was not commencement but continuance of the suit.—A.-G. v. AVON CORPN. (1863), 3 De G. J. & Sm. 637; 33 L. J. Ch. 172; 2 New Rep. 564; 9 L. T. 187; 11 W. R. 1050; 46 E. R. 783, C. A.

157. —.]—Pltfs. brought an action to restrain defts. from stopping the outlet of effluents of sewage into the river. An application was made to defts. after action brought for their sanction to new works:—Held: an amendment to the statement of claim relating to these new works, & claiming an injunction to restrain defts. from interfering with the effluent till it should be ascertained whether the new works were efficient, must be refused.

The amendment could not have been allowed inasmuch as it related to a cause of action which did not exist at the time when the writ was issued (BOWEN, L.J.).—TOTTENHAM LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH v. LEA CONSERVANCY BOARD (1886), 2 T. L. R. 410, C. A. S. C. No. 178, post.

158. Effect of judgment.]—Case for words spoken on Nov. 5. The declaration was generally, as of Michaelmas term, after verdict for pltf. with damages. Upon motion in arrest of judgment judgment was arrested because it appeared by the general memorandum that the action was commenced before the cause of it arose.—VENABLES (VENABLE) v. DAFTE (DAFT, DAST) (1689), Carth. 113; Holt, K. B. 38; 1 Show. K. B. 147; 90 E. R. 670.

159. —.]—In indebitatus assumpsit for money lent it appeared on the record after verdict that the promise was alleged to be made at a time after the writ issued. Upon motion in arrest of judgment:

pltf.'s expense:—Held: pltf. could not recover; his right was to recover the difference between the contract price and what it cost defts. to complete the work. Such difference was not ascertained until Sept., but pltf. instituted proceedings in the June preceding & before the work was completed.—BERESFORD v. HALLORAN CONSTRUCTION Co. (1914), 28 W. L. R. 208.—CAN.

h. Commission on sale.]—Deft. appointed pltf. sole agent to sell lands, & to pay him out of first instalment a certain percentage of gross selling price for commission. In Feb., 1912, deft. arranged with C. that a co. be formed & registered before March 30, 1912, to acquire property, including that covered by the agreement between pltf. & deft. Dft. sold the land to C. as "on & from Feb. 1st, 1912," payment to be made partly in shares and partly in cash. The agreement for sale provided for conveyance on or before May 30, 1912, or later, if agreed upon. The co. was formed & registered on March 12, 1912, and on March 25, 1912, bought the land from C. Pltf. commenced an action on April 22, 1912, alleging the sale of the land and claiming commission. At date of the writ, no shares had been allotted to deft., nor had any cash payment been received by him, although this was ultimately received before trial:—Held: if rights of parties were to be decided as on date of writ, pltf. could not succeed because deft. had not received purchase price or any part of it.

I know of no law giving a person a right to sue for money before it is due.—KENNERLEY v. HEXTALL (1913), 23 W. L. R. 205; 5 Alta. L. R. 192; 10 D. L. R. 501; 3 W. W. 699.—CAN.

Held: the date of the promise was immaterial, & it must be presumed that a cause of action which accrued before the issuing of the writ was proved at the trial.

If it be once assumed that the day is immaterial, it can only then be supposed that a cause of action, which accrued before the date of the issuing of the writ, was proved at the trial. In the case of an action on a promissory note, that could not be done, because there the date is material.—ARNOLD v. ARNOLD (1836), 3 Bing. N. C. 81; 2 Hodg. 189; 5 L. J. C. P. 338; 132 E. R. 340.

Annotation:—Folld. Re Richardson, [1915] 1 Ch. 353.

160. —.—[Pltfs., a firm of money-lenders, sued debt. on three promissory notes for certain sums, which—owing to default of instalments—became due respectively on Oct. 17, Dec. 17, & Dec. 25 (all in 1912). The writ was issued on Dec. 13. Pltfs. took out a summons under R. S. C., O. 14. Debt. by his solr. appeared in answer to such summons before the master. He did not take the point that the cause of action was incomplete when the action was commenced. The master gave judgment for a part of the sum claimed & gave leave to defend as to the balance:—Held: the judgment obtained cured the defect in the writ.—STIRLING & Co. v. NORTH (1913), 29 T. L. R. 216.

B. Cases where Principle Applied.

161. Debt falling due after action brought.—[In debt on a bond, conditioned for performance of covenants in a lease, debt. pleaded performance, & pltf. in his replication assigned a breach in non-payment of rent, due after commencement of the suit:—Held: bad.—CHAMPION v. SKIPWETH (1666), 1 Sid. 307; 82 E. R. 1123.

162. —.—[In an action on a fidelity bond, assuring payment by a rent collector of rents received by him within a month after he received them, pltfs. sued for money he had received before issue of the writ, but did not allege that he had received it more than a month before issue of the writ. On demurrer:—Held: pltfs. could not recover on this pleading.—BALL v. RICHARDS (1688), 1 Lut. 470; 125 E. R. 247.

164. Goods sold.—[A sale of goods took place on terms of "7½ per cent. discount, bill at 3 months, 10 per cent. discount, cash in 14 days." The sellers considering they had been induced by fraud to sell the goods to debt., held him to bail for the whole amount within the 14 days, & declared in indebitatus assumpsit for goods sold. The jury found that debt. did not intend to avail himself of the discount, but intended to take the longer credit:—Held: the action being in form ex contractu, was prematurely brought within the 14 days, though trover might have been brought within that period on rescinding the contract for fraud.—STRUTT v. SMITH (1834), 1 Cr. M. & R. 312; 4 Tyr. 1019; 3 L. J. Ex. 357; 149 E. R. 1099.

SMITH (1836), 1 M. & W. 542; 2 Gale, 114; Tyr. & Gr. 929; 5 L. J. Ex. 155; 150 E. R. 550.

166. —.—[Goods were sold on Oct. 5, to be paid for in 2 months:—Held: an action for the price could not be commenced until after expiration of Dec. 5.—WEBB v. FAIRMANER (1838), 6 Dowl. 549; 3 M. & W. 473; 7 L. J. Ex. 140; 2 Jur. 397; 150 E. R. 1231.

167. Money paid.—[Debt. employed B. to convey timber for him. Pltfs. were afterwards required to get the timber from where B. had placed it & remove it to London. B. declined to permit its removal until his charges for the cartage were paid, whereupon pltfs.' agent agreed to become personally responsible for their payment, & the timber was conveyed to London. Debt. paid pltfs. their charges, but refused to pay the amount their agent had agreed to pay B. Pltfs. brought an action on July 12 for money paid by pltfs. to recover from debt. this latter sum:—Held: as pltfs.' agent did not pay the amount to B. until July 17, the action could not be maintained.—THOMPSON v. ACOCKS (1850), 15 L. T. O. S. 69, 303.

168. Negotiable instrument.—[Debt. was sued on a bill of exchange before it became due & was arrested on mesne process:—Held: the ct. would set aside the proceedings entirely.—KERR v. DICK (1820), 2 Chit. 11. S. C. No. 153, ante.

Annotation:—Distd. Potter v. Macdonel (1835), 3 Dowl. 583.

169. — Days of grace not expired.—[The holder of a bill of exchange presented the bill at the bank during business hours on the third day of grace, & payment was refused. On the same day the writ in the action was issued:—Held: (1) the cause of action was not complete until after expiration of

PART I. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 6.—B.

161 i. Debt falling due after action brought.—[Where one of several notes was not due until near the end of the term in which process had been issued & returnable, but was due before filing the declaration, which was intitled generally of the term:—Held: such note could not be recovered on in the action.—KERR v. JENNINGS (1840).—CAN.

164 i. Goods sold.—[Pltf. sold debt. certain timber. Debt. agreed to pay by giving a note at 3 months. Without giving a note, debt. took possession of the timber. Before expiration of 3 months pltf. brought an action, having first called for the note, with no result:—Held: when a person sells goods upon a certain credit to be paid for by a bill he cannot maintain an action for goods sold until expiration of the period for which such bill would become due, because the goods are not agreed to be paid for until that time. If the bill be not given, pltf. can bring an action on the specific agreement because he is deprived of the security agreed upon.—MAGRATH v. TINNING (1842), 6 O. S. 484.—CAN.

164 ii. —.—[Appls. in Oct., 1899, offered hay to resps., subject to acceptance in 5 days; delivery in 6 months. Resps. wrote: "We will accept . . . etc.," but owing to postal delay the letter reached applts. on the day following the time allowed for acceptance. Applts. refused to treat this as an acceptance, and the hay was not sent to resps. Resps. owed applts. money for hay previously shipped, for which applts. brought action. Resps. counterclaimed for breach of the Oct., 1899, contract, before expiration of the 6 months mentioned for delivery of the hay:—Held: applts. had 6 months for delivery of the hay, & resps.' counterclaim within that period was premature.—OPPENHEIMER v. BRACKMAN & KER MILLING Co. (1902), 32 S. C. R. 699.—CAN.

169 i. Negotiable instrument—Days of grace not expired.—[A note read: "On or before Nov. 1, 1904, I promise to pay . . . etc." Suit thereon was commenced on Nov. 1, 1910:—Held: debt. had the whole of Nov. 1 in which to make payment, & pltf. had no right to sue until Nov. 2. Kennedy v. Thomas, [1894] 2 Q. B. 759, settled the law on the point. Where a bill is refused payment at any time on the last day of grace, although the holder can immediately give notice of dishonour, he has no cause of action until the expiration of that day, & an action commenced on the last day of grace must be dismissed as premature.—WILLOUGHBY v. WAINWRIGHT (1913), 24 W. L. R. 504; 4 W. W. R. 875.—CAN.

1. Debt not matured—Bankruptcy of debtor.—[A creditor whose debt has not matured may take proceedings to sequester the estate of his debtor to compulsory liquidation under Insolvent Act, 1869, s. 20.—Re PERKS (1870), 13 N. B. R. (2 Han.) 121.—CAN.

170. — Notice of dishonour not received.—In an action against the indorser of a bill of exchange issue was joined as to notice of dishonour. It appeared that a letter containing the notice was put into the post on the day on which the action was commenced, &, by the routine of the post office, would reach deft. between four & five in the afternoon of that day. No further evidence was given as to the time of notice. The offices of the ct. were open only till five in the afternoon of the day in question:—Held: pltf. must fail, it lying on him to show the right of action was complete before the suit was commenced.—CASTRIQUE v. BERNARD (1844), 6 Q. B. 498; 1 New Pract. Cas. 94; 14 L. J. Q. B. 3; 9 Jur. 130; 115 E. R. 186.

171. Policy-holder.—Pltf. effected with deft. co. a policy on 20 years' continuance of his own life. The policy provided that the capital stock of the co. should alone be liable to answer claims under the policy & that no director should be personally liable. The deed of settlement entitled policy-holders to participate in profits, & also contained provisions enabling the directors in certain events to dissolve the co. The directors—but not in accordance with their powers to dissolve the co.—transferred its funds & property to another co., who were to take their liabilities. Pltf., before the maturing of his policy, brought an action against the co., his insurers, charging them with having wrongfully alienated & transferred their property & ceased to carry on business, whereby he lost the moneys & profits he would otherwise have made from continuance of the contract:—Held: (1) pltf. had no claim on the co. until his policy became payable; (2) until that event happened the action was an action quia timet, & pltf. must be nonsuited.—KING v. ACCUMULATIVE LIFE FUND & GENERAL ASSURANCE CO. (1857), 3 C. B. N. S. 151; 27 L. J. C. P. 57; 30 L. T. O. S. 119; 3 Jur. N. S. 1264; 6 W. R. 12; 140 E. R. 696

172. ——P. insured his life with defts. & assigned the policy to pltf. After two premiums had been paid defts. refused to receive any further premium, & repudiated liability on the policy. Pltf. in P.'s lifetime brought an action claiming a declaration that the policy was valid, & an injunction to restrain defts. from repudiating it:—Held: (1) the action was premature; (2) on defts. undertaking that if an action was hereafter brought on the policy they would not rely as a defence on non-payment of premiums it would be dismissed.

There is no enforceable claim in respect of the policy, &, so long as he is not prejudiced by non-payment of his premium, he has no right at present to ask for a declaration in his favour that the policy is valid before any claim against the society has arisen (BUCKLEY, J.). — HONOUR v. EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY OF THE U.S., [1900] 1 Ch. 852; 69 L. J. Ch. 420; 82 L. T. 144; 48 W. R. 347; 44 Sol. Jo. 313.

173. Promise to pay.—EGLES v. VALE, No. 151, ante.

174. Rent—Re-entry for non-payment.—For the purposes of the Moratorium Proclamation under Postponement of Payments Act, 1914 (c. 11), s. 1 (1), rent due & payable before the date of the Proclamation could not be recovered in an action in which the writ was issued after the Proclamation & before the specified date because not due & payable at the date of the writ; & as the right given by the agreement of tenancy to re-enter for non-payment of rent is only a security for the rent it follows that the cause of action to enforce that right also did not exist at the date of the writ & could not be enforced in the action.—DURELL v. GREAD (1914), 84 L. J. K. B. 130, 132; 112 L. T. 126; 31 T. L. R. 22; 59 Sol. Jo. 7.

175. Stockbroker's account.—On default of his client pltf., a stockbroker, closed his account. He was not liable to pay his jobber till May 27, but brought his action on May 17:—Held: the action was premature.—HALSTEAD v. FREELAND (1904), Times, 25th July.

176. Tort—Detinue.—Deft., a jeweller, sold to pltf.'s wife a valuable antique gold watch which she presented to pltf. Some years afterwards it was stolen from pltf. abroad, deft. being informed by the wife of the theft shortly after its occurrence. The watch, which had been pawned, was sent to certain auction rooms in London, where it was sold as an unredeemed pledge, the purchaser selling it to B. The latter sent the watch to deft., of whom he was an old customer, for his opinion as to its genuineness, & deft., recognising it as the watch originally sold to pltf.'s wife, wrote to B. informing him of the circumstances, & asking him what he would take for it if deft. could buy it from him. B. replied that he would return it to the original owner if he paid the price it cost him. Deft. thereupon wrote to pltf.'s wife informing her of the watch being in his possession & of B.'s offer & asking her wishes. No reply was sent to this letter, but pltf.'s solrs., having issued a writ for wrongful detention of the watch, sent their clerk with it to deft.'s premises, who, after inspecting the watch & demanding it should be given over to him, immediately served deft. with the writ:—Held: there had been in the circumstances no such demand by pltf. & refusal by deft. as would give pltf. a cause of action in detinue before the date of issue of the writ.—CLAYTON v. LE ROY, [1911] 2 K. B. 1031; 81 L. J. K. B. 49; 105 L. T. 430; 75 J. P. 521; 27 T. L. R. 479, C. A. S. C. Nos. 469, 480, post.

179. Counterclaim—Rule applicable to.—Pltfs. sued to restrain deft. obstructing navigation in a river so as to prevent their ships from coming to their wharf. Deft. counterclaimed to restrain pltfs. from mooring their ships so as to obstruct access to his own wharf, & at the hearing claimed to be entitled to damages up to the date of his counterclaim:—Held: under R. S. C., O. 19, r. 3, deft. could not claim damages in respect of obstruction after the date of the writ in the original action.—ORIGINAL HARTLEPOOL COLLIERIES CO. v. GIBB (1877), 5 Ch. 180. — Rule not applicable to.—Relief can be given on a counterclaim in respect of a cause of action which accrued to deft. subsequently to issue of the writ in the original action.

Pltfs. sued to restrain deft. from holding himself out as partner in or selling the effects of pltf.'s business, which was carried on on premises in the occupation of deft. as manager: the writ was issued in Dec., 1879. Deft. counterclaimed for forcible entry by pltfs. in Jan., 1880, after issue of the writ, & for damage to his effects occasioned thereby:—Held: the counterclaim was properly made, by reason of Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 24 (3).—BEDDALL v. MAITLAND (1881), 17 Ch. D. 174; 50 L. J. Ch. 401; 44 L. T. 248; 29 W. R. 484.

181. ———.]—By R. S. C., O. 24, r. 3, whenever deft. in his defence, or in any further defence as mentioned in r. 1, alleges any ground of defence which has arisen after commencement of the action, pltf. may deliver a confession of such defence & sign judgment for his costs up to the time of the pleading of such defence:—Held: a counterclaim & set-off is a defence within this rule.—WOOD v. GOODWIN (1884), Bitt. Rep. in Ch. 167.

182. ———.]—Facts arising since action must be pleaded.]—A counterclaim founded on facts which have arisen since action brought must be pleaded as so arising, so that pltf. may be able to confess the plea; & if it is not so pleaded pltf. should take out a summons to strike it out, unless it be amended.—ELLIS v. MUNSON (1876), 35 L. T. 585, C. A.

183. ———.]—Nor to counterclaim in reply.]—T. brought an action to recover arrears of rent of a farm down to Midsummer, 1881. Deft. by his counterclaim, delivered after Sept. 29, claimed the amount due to him on a valuation as outgoing tenant. Pltf. in reply "by way of set-off & counterclaim" claimed the quarter's rent due on Sept. 29, & also a sum paid by him for the rent-charge left unpaid by deft. On application by deft. to strike out this reply:—Held: pltf. was entitled to set up such counterclaim in reply.—TOKE v. ANDREWS (1882), 8 Q. B. D. 428; 51 L. J. Q. B. 281; 30 W. R. 659.

184. ———.]—Except in respect of existing claim.]—In an action for money had & received deft. pleaded that he had expended all money received to pltf.'s use on her property as her agent, & counterclaimed for a sum of money expended on pltf.'s property as her agent in excess of the sum received to her use. Pltf. in her reply denied that deft. acted as her agent & counterclaimed if he had so acted for damages for negligence:—Held: the statement of claim must be amended, if a ground of claim was omitted which existed before the writ.—JAMES v. PAGE (1888), 85 L. T. Jo. 157.

185. ———.]—In respect of existing claim.—When merely protection against counterclaim.]—In an action for the price of goods supplied, defts. counterclaimed for damages for breach of contract by pltfs. Pltfs. denied that the contract was binding on them, & further alleged that, if it was binding, defts. had committed breaches of it which caused them loss, & they counterclaimed to set off the loss so sustained against defts.' counterclaim. Upon an application to strike out the counterclaim in the reply:—Held: as pltfs. did not rely upon the counterclaim in the reply as an independent claim, but merely as a protection against defts.' counterclaim, the counterclaim was properly raised in the reply & ought not to be struck out.—RENTON GIBBS & CO., LTD. v. NEVILLE & CO., [1900] 2 Q. B. 181 69 L. J. Q. B. 511; 82 L. T. 446; 48 W. R. 532 C. A.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

187. No right without a remedy.]—If pltf. has a right he must of necessity have a means to vindicate & maintain it, & a remedy if he is injured in the exercise & enjoyment of it; indeed, it is a vain thing to imagine a right without a remedy, for want of right & remedy are reciprocal. Every injury imports a damage though it does not cost the party one farthing; if men will multiply injuries actions must be multiplied too, for every man that is injured ought to have his recompense (HOLT, C.J.).—ASHBY v. 187 i. No right without a remedy.]—To a count alleging that deft. took pltf.'s property in a certain vessel, & negligently launched & managed the vessel so that she was damaged, deft. pleaded in answer joint ownership of pltf. & himself:—Held: the plea was no answer to the action; as long as tenancy in common exists, one tenant in common cannot maintain trover against the other; but when negligence of an active nature amounting to misfeasance is shown, one tenant in common is liable for misuse of the property, as it is a wrong for which there should be a remedy.—DOMVILLE v. O'BRIEN (1878), 18 N. B. R. (2 P. & B.) 656.—CAN.

189. Damnum & injuria.—Wherever there is damnum & injuria, an action lies at common law. A person who has been excommunicated by a ct. for contumacy in failing to appear has a right of action against the officer of the ct. who failed to summon him.—POLE v. GODFREY (1614), 2 Bulst. 264; 80 E. R. 1110.

—Refd. Ashby v. White (1703), 2 Ld. Raym.

190. — Injury defined.—On a submission of all debts, trespasses, & injuries, the award directed releases of all actions, debts, duties, trespasses, & demands:—Held: the award was valid.

The award here does not exceed the submission, for the word "injury" is a general & large word, & comprehends in itself all manner of wrongs: injuria & damnum are the two grounds for the having all actions, & without these no action lies: if there be damnum absque injuria, or injuria absque damno, no action lies, but where there is injury, injuria & damnum, & so both of them do run together, there an action well lies (DODDERIDGE, J.).—CABLE v. ROGERS (1625), 3 Bulst. 311; 81 E. R. 259.

191. —.—.]—The law will never suffer an injury & a damage without a remedy. There must be damnum cum injuria. By injuria is meant a tortious act; it need not be wilful & malicious. Though accidental, an action will lie (WILLES, C.J.).—WINSMORE v. GREENBANK (1745), Willes, 577; 125 E. R. 1330.

192. —.— "Wrongful."—An intent to "injure" connotes an intent to do wrongful harm. The term "wrongful" imports in its turn the infringement of some right (BOWEN, L.J.).—MOGUL S.S. Co. v. MCGREGOR, Gow, No. 249, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 249, post.

193. Lack of precedent.—In general immaterial.]—Case for falsely & maliciously suing out a commission of bkpey. afterwards superseded was a proper action at law, though the Chancellor had power to give £200 damages by statute.

This is an action of tort; torts are infinitely various, not limited or confined, for there is nothing in nature but may be an instrument of mischief (PRATT, C.J.).—CHAPMAN v. PICKERSGILL (1762), 2 Wils. 145; 95 E. R. 734. S. C. No. 200, post.

194. —.—.]—A false affirmation made by deft. with the intent to defraud pltf., whereby pltf. received damage, is the ground of an action upon the case in the nature of deceit. In such an action it is not necessary that deft. should be benefited by the deceit, or that he should collude with the person who was.

Where cases are new in their principle, it is necessary to have recourse to legislative interposition to remedy the grievance; but where the case is only new in the instance, & the only question is upon the application of a principle recognised in the law to such new case, it is as competent to cts. of justice to apply the principle to any case which may arise two centuries hence as it was two centuries ago (ASHURST, J.).—PASLEY v. If the House had been called on to establish a new & uncertain principle which had never been known or acted upon before, in that case legislation lone ought to administer the remedy required for an existing evil: but where a principle is precisely the same the case no more requires legislative interference than one half the cases every day occurring, where the old principle is applied to new combinations of circumstances, in order to circumvent the machinations of those who ingeniously are endeavouring by slight alterations to defeat or evade the decisions of the cts. 198. How right may be ascertained.—The nature of a right may often be ascertained by analysing the remedy for its breach. In an action for obstructing this right of way:—Held: (1) the way was a private, not a public way; (2) the obstruction, without actual damage, gave the grantee a cause of action, for it was an interference with his easement, which, if submitted to, would become a right.—

221 i. — — — Riparian owner.—H. had erected a mill in 1815, & about 10 years before the action, L. built a mill higher up on the same stream. The natural flow of water at many seasons of the year would not keep up a head of water sufficient to drive the mills, & deft. was in the daily habit of shutting his dam & stopping the water for considerable portions of time, when it was prevented from flowing to pltf.'s mill. The jury found for pltf., damages one shilling, pltf. not having sustained actual loss. A new trial was moved for, on the grounds (1) every riparian owner has a right to erect a dam, & detain water to fill it; (2) this was at most a mere injury to a right without actual damage:—Held: an action would lie without actual damage, & the rule for a new trial must be discharged.—*HOWATT v. 221. — — — Riparian owner.—Pltf. had immemorially enjoyed the benefit of irrigating certain meadows with the water of the Y., subject to the right of the occupier of a mill to detain the water for the use of his mill; & although the natural flow of the river was prevented by the exercise of the miller's right, the water came down at such times that pltf. was enabled to irrigate his meadows effectually. Of late deft. had, for the purpose of irrigating his own adjacent land, from time to time diverted the water after it had passed the mill & before it reached pltf.'s meadows; & although it did not appear that the quantity of water which ultimately reached pltf.'s meadows was thereby sensibly diminished, yet the effect was that the water was detained by the process of irrigation & did not arrive until so late in the day that pltf. was deprived of the power to use it fully:—Held: (1) this detention of the water by deft. was a use of it which was necessarily injurious to the natural rights of pltf. as a riparian proprietor, & a ground of action; (2) in such a case it is not necessary to show actual damage to pltf.'s reversionary interest; it is enough to show an obstruction of his right, & such obstruction being shown, the law will infer damage.—*SAMPSON v. sawdust, &c., in the stream, & pltf. was hindered from working his mill, &c., & fall. The damage was not appreciable, & the jury found for deft. generally. On a rule nisi for a new trial:—Held: (1) if denial of pltf.'s right to use the stream was sustained, deft. could continue to deposit sawdust, etc., therein; the injury would in time become serious, & 20 years' uninterrupted enjoyment would evidence an easement; (2) a new trial must be ordered.—*MITCHELL v. 223. ————— Inducing breach of contract.]—In order to support an action for maliciously inducing persons to break their business contracts with pltf. proof of specific damage need not be given; it is sufficient to prove facts from which it may properly be inferred that some damage must result to pltf. from deft.'s wrongful acts.

Under a contract made between pltf.s. & the Stock Exchange Committee valuable information of prices of stocks & shares during the day was collected on the Stock Exchange, & supplied to pltf.s., & printed on tapes & sheets of letterpress in their office. Deft. having surreptitiously obtained such information, published it in the same form before its publication by pltf.s.:—Held: pltf.s. had a right of property at common law in the information, & were entitled to restrain deft. from infringing that right by continuing to publish it.

The action is founded upon three main causes of action: (1) an attack made upon the proprietary right of persons in unpublished matter; (2) an attack upon the proprietary right of persons in matter which they have published; (3) an attack made upon the right or interest of persons in the business which they carry on. As to the first of such rights, no registration & no proof of damage is necessary to support the action; as to the second, registration is necessary, but not any proof of damage; as to the third, unless damage be shown to have been actually sustained, there is no right of action, the fact of damage being the only thing which brings deft. into any relation with pltf.s. (RIGBY, L.J.).—EXCHANGE TELEGRAPH CO., LTD. v. GREGORY & Co., [1896] 1 Q. B. 147; 65 L. J. Q. B. 262; 74 L. T. 83; 60 J. P. 52; 12 T. L. R. 18, C. A.

224. Cases where special damage necessary.]—There are certain acts which, though improper, give no cause of action unless & until a damage is occasioned thereby. Thus, if a servant is unjustifiably beaten, no action arises to the master until there is damage by the loss of the service. The same principle applies to slander by words not actionable per se & to negligence. Further, an act, though neither improper nor unlawful, may, by causing avoidable damage, constitute an invasion of the rights of another & thus give a cause of action. Thus, it is not unlawful for a person to make an excavation upon his own land, but if it causes a subsidence in the adjoining owner's land, a right of action arises, & there is a fresh cause of action in respect of every subsidence.—*DARLEY MAIN COLLIERY CO. v. 225. ————— Nature of special damage.]—The special damage necessary to support an action for defamation, when the words spoken are not actionable in themselves, must be the loss of some material temporal advantage.

Where words were spoken imputing unchastity to a woman, & by reason thereof she was excluded from a private society & congregation of a sect of Protestant Dissenters, of which she had been a member, & was prevented from obtaining a certificate without which she could not become a member of any other society of the same nature:—Held: such a result was not such special damage as would render the words actionable.—ROBERTS v. ROBERTS (1864), 5 B. & S. 384; 4 New Rep. 271; 33 L. J. Q. B. 249; 10 L. T. 602; 10 Jur. N. S. 1027; 12 W. R. 909; 122 E. R. 874.

226. ————— Aerial trespass.]—Where deft. nailed to his own wall a board which overhung pltf.'s close:—Semble: the remedy was case & not trespass.

I do not think it is a trespass to interfere with the column of air superincumbent on the close. I once had occasion to rule upon the circuit, that a man who, from the outside of a field, discharged a gun into it, so that the shot must have struck the soil, was guilty of breaking & entering it. I am by no means prepared to say that firing across a field in vacuo, no part of the contents touching it, amounts to a clausum fregit. Nay, if this board overhanging pltf.'s garden be a trespass, it would follow that an aeronaut is liable to an action of trespass quare clausum fregit at the suit of the occupier of every field over which his balloon passes in the course of his voyage. Whether the action may be maintained cannot depend upon the length of time for which the superincumbent air is invaded. If any damage arises from the object which overhangs the close, the remedy is by an action on the case (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—PICKERING v. RUDD (1815), 4 Camp. 219; 1 Stark. 56. S. C. 228. ————— Distress by landlord—Excessive claim.]—No action lies against a landlord who, in distraining for rent, claims or pretends that more is due than is really so unless the goods taken & sold under the distress are unreasonable in respect of the rent

228 i. Cases where special damage necessary—Distress by landlord—Excessive claim.]—The declaration in an action for excessive distress alleged that pltf. held land as tenant to deft. at a certain rent; that deft. wrongfully seized goods as a distress for arrears of rent alleged to be due, & sold same for the alleged arrears, whereas a small part only of the alleged rent was in arrear. There was no allegation that more goods were taken or sold than were necessary to produce the rent actually due:—Held: the declaration disclosed no cause of action, as, some rent being due, the distress itself was not a wrong, & the mere distraining & selling on a claim of more than was due was not actionable.—PRESTON v. SIMMONS (1867), 12 N. B. R. (1 Han.) 44.—CAN.

230. — — — — —.]—An action against a sheriff for a false return will not lie unless actual damage has been caused to pltf.

A sheriff returned to a writ of fi. fa. that he had seized the goods of the execution debtor, & kept them safe in his possession until he received an order from creditor's attorney to withdraw, whereupon he withdrew. In defence to an action for a false return by the execution creditor, the sheriff proved that the only goods which debtor appeared to have had been assigned by a valid bill of sale, & no damage had occurred to pltf. in consequence of the return:—Held: the circumstance of deft. being a public officer to whose services pltf. was entitled did not constitute the case an exception to the rule that, in an action for tort, actual damage must be proved or a presumption of law implying damage established.—STIMSON v. FARNHAM (1871), L. R. 7 Q. B. 175; 41 L. J. Q. B. 52; 25 L. T. 747 as restd. 20 W. R. 183.

SECT. 2.—INJURIA ABSQUE DAMNO.

231. Damage too remote.—]Pltfs.' tug was engaged in towing a ship from Antwerp to Port Talbot, under a contract which contained the clause "Sea towage interrupted by accident to be paid pro rata of distance towed." During the towage deft.'s vessel, by the negligence of those on board, collided with & sank the tow. The tug was uninjured. Pltfs. sued deft. to recover the amount of towage remuneration so lost:—Held: the damage sustained by pltfs. by reason of the towage contract being no longer performable in consequence of the sinking of the tow gave pltfs. no cause of action against deft.

Pltfs. have no cause of action. The obligation of deft. which was broken was the general one of navigating the seas with reasonable care. In order to give pltfs. a cause of action arising out of that breach they must show not only an injuria—viz., breach of deft.'s obligation—but also a damnum to themselves—that is, a damnum in a sense recognised by law. 'This they have failed to do (HAMILTON, J.).—SOCIETE ANONYME DE REMORQUAGE A

1. — — — — Distress damage feasant.—]In an action brought, not to establish a right nor in respect of an injuria involving contumelia or insult, but merely for the purpose of recovering damages for an injuria, pltf. must prove the actual damage sustained, & in the absence of such proof he will fail in his action, & will not be granted nominal damages. Deft. detained pltf.'s pigs, which had strayed on to his ground, until certain expenses should be paid, & eventually sent them to the pound. Pltf. sued deft. for the unlawful detention, but failed to prove actual damage:

232. No damage—Ostensible violation of right—Void act.—]Pltf. was a member of a mutual marine insurance assocn., of which defts. were the committee. According to the rules of the assocn. defts. might expel any member whose conduct was deemed to be suspicious. Pltf. alleged that defts. had improperly & collusively expelled him under the rules, & without an opportunity of being heard to explain his conduct, whereby he lost the benefit of an insurance of a vessel insured by him with the assocn., & damaged at sea:—Held: the action was not maintainable on the grounds (1) the expulsion was void, & pltf. ought to sue in Ch. on the insurance (KELLY, C.B. & AMPHLETT, B.); (2) the declaration showed no expulsion which was not legally justified by the rules (CLEASBY & POLLOCK, B.B.).

SECT. 3.—DAMNUM ABSQUE INJURIA.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

233. Absence of legal right.—]In an action by a registered voter, who by non-residence had lost the right to vote, against a returning officer for refusing his vote, & making an unauthorised scrutiny as to his right to vote:—Held:—the foundation of pltf.'s action was the injury to his right; he had no right, & suffered no injury.—PRYCE v. BELCHER (1847), 4 C. B. 866; 16 L. J. C. P. 264; 11 Jur. 675; 136 E. R. 749.

234. — — — — —.]—It is essential to an action in tort that the act complained of should, under the circumstances, affect the party complaining in some legal right. It is not sufficient that it merely does harm to his interests.

No such user was proved, but it appeared that pltf. had no legal right to use the way:—Held: the mere user by pltf. of the way in common with other parties, in the absence of any legal right, would not enable him to recover damages against deft. for obstructing the way.—ELLS v. BLACK (1886), 19 N. S. R. (7 R. & G.) 222; 7 C. L. T. 326; affd. (1887), 11 S. C. R. 710; 7 C. L. T. 390.—CAN.

Resps., who were engaged from day to day, were thereupon discharged, & the employers refused to employ them again. In the ordinary course their employment would have continued. There was evidence that these acts on the part of the boilermakers were done to punish resps. for what they had done in the past:—Held: applt. had violated no legal right of resps.—*ALLEN v. 236. —.]—The promoters of a dog show purported to assign the sole photographic rights in connection with the show. The assignee purported to assign to pltf. the sole Press photographic rights at the show. Defts., by an agent, took photographs of the show although previously informed that the promoters had assigned the exclusive right to do so. The promoters of the show did not cause any notice to be placed on the tickets of admission nor otherwise forbid the taking of photographs at the show. Defts. having published in an illustrated journal the photographs they had taken, pltf. brought an action for an injunction to restrain them from continuing to do so:—Held: the action would not lie, inasmuch as (1) an exclusive right to take photographs does not, in law, exist as property, & the promoters of the dog show had, in law, no exclusive right of photographing anything there, & could not assign that right as property; (2) their possession of the land on which the show was held would have entitled them to make their purported assignment effective by making conditions as to admission & stipulating that no one should enter unless he agreed not to take photographs, but they had not done so, & pltf. had failed to make out any cause of action.—*SPORTS (SPORT) & GENERAL PRESS AGENCY, LTD. v. 237. Mere damage insufficient.—]—Pltf. alleged in their statement of claim that their house had been called "Ashford Lodge" for 60 years, & the adjoining house, belonging to deft., had been called "Ashford Villa" for 40 years, & that deft. had recently altered the name of his house to that of pltf.' house. Pltf. alleged that this act of deft. had caused them great inconvenience & annoyance, & had materially diminished the value of their property; & they claimed an injunction to restrain deft. from continuing to use the name of their house:—Held: the alleged act of deft. in calling his house by the name of pltf.' house was not a violation of any legal right of pltf., & there being no allegation of malicious intention, a demurrer to the statement of claim was allowed.

An allegation of damage alone will not do. You must have in our law injury as well as damage. . . . 237. i. Mere damage insufficient.—]—Pltf. was possessed of a messuage which he had been accustomed to let to soldiers of the garrison, as a dance hall. He alleged that defts. unlawfully & unjustly induced the General commanding, by order, to prevent the soldiers from assembling in the hall. Defts. pleaded that pltf. kept a disorderly house, & that the General, on that account, placed the hall out of bounds for the military, etc.:—Held: the declaration did not disclose any cause of action, as although the city could be held liable for intentional acts of misfeasance it did not appear that there was any binding agreement conferring rights or interests upon pltf. which had been

239. Motive immaterial.—]—Upon an election of a knight of the shire for Parliament the sheriff returned both candidates as elected. Deft., by advice of counsel & others, made this double return, to prevent an action for a false return in case it should appear that some freeholders who voted for pltf. had insufficient freehold. Pltf., who had received the majority of votes, then sued the sheriff for damages for making a false & malicious return. Upon examination in Parliament, the election of pltf. was adjudged good & deft. committed for making the double return:—Held: the action could not be brought after Parliament had determined the election, for to that determination the sheriff was no party. A double return was a lawful means for a sheriff to perform his duty in doubtful cases. 249. Trade boycott.—With lawful object—Unlawful means not used.—Owners of ships, in order to secure a carrying trade exclusively for themselves & at profitable rates, formed an assocn. & agreed that the number of ships to be sent by members of the assocn. to the loading port, the division of cargoes & the freights to be demanded should be the subject of regulation; that a rebate of 5 per cent. on the freights should be allowed to all shippers who shipped only with members; & that agents of members should be prohibited on pain of dismissal from acting in the interest of competing shipowners; any member to be at liberty to withdraw on giving certain notices. Pltfs., shipowners excluded from the assocn., sent ships to the loading port to endeavour to obtain cargoes. The associated owners sent more ships to the port, underbid pltfs., & reduced freights so much that pltfs. were obliged to carry at unremunerative rates. They also threatened to dismiss certain agents if they loaded pltfs.' ships, & circulated a notice that the rebate of 5 per cent. would not be allowed to any person who shipped cargoes on pltfs.' vessels. Pltfs. having brought an action for damages against the associated owners, alleging a conspiracy to injure pltfs.:—Held: since the acts of defts. were done with the lawful object of protecting & extending their trade & increasing their profits, & since they had not employed any unlawful means, pltfs. had no cause of action.—*MOGUL S.S. 251. Advertising goods of plaintiff at undervalue. —As a general rule a trader may sell at any price whatsoever any goods, including goods of another's manufacture, which he either has in stock or expects to acquire, & may offer the same for sale by advertisement, although he thereby damages the trade of the manufacturer; & his motives for so doing cannot be inquired into.

Deft., a retail dealer, advertised for sale in a newspaper a new piano of pltfs.' manufacture of a specified character at the price at which pltfs. supplied the same to the trade, & thereby caused other dealers to give up dealing with pltfs.; he continued the advertisement after he ceased to have in stock any pianos of pltfs.' manufacture, & after pltfs. had refused to supply him, in the expectation of being able to acquire pltfs.' pianos from other dealers:—Held: (1) apart from any question of misrepresentation, deft. had a legal right to issue the advertisement though it amounted to an implied representation that he had in his possession a piano of the advertised description; (2) such misrepresentation was not the cause of the damage to pltfs.' trade, & gave no right of action.—AJELLO v. WORSLEY, [1898] 1 Ch. 274; 67 L. J. Ch. 172; 77 L. T. 783; 46 W. R. 245; 14 T. L. R. 168; 42 Sol. Jo. 212.

252. Telegraphic address appropriated.—Pltfs., Messrs. Street & Jackson, were advertising agents, with an extensive foreign connection. Their correspondents abroad had for some time been in the habit of telegraphing to them in the name of "Street, London." Defts., a co. incorporated in 1881, adopted as a cypher to indicate their name & address for the purpose of foreign telegrams the name "Street, London." Since that time foreign telegrams intended for pltfs. had been delivered to defts., so that inconvenience & pecuniary loss were sustained by pltfs., & they brought an action to restrain defts. from using the address, "Street, London," for telegraphic purposes, & from opening telegrams so addressed:—Held: the matter was merely one of inconvenience, which the ct. had no jurisdiction to restrain.—STREET v. UNION BANK OF SPAIN & ENGLAND (1885), 30 Ch. D. 156; 55 L. J. Ch. 31; 53 L. T. 262; 33 W. R. 901; 1 T. L. R. 554. S. C. No. 272, post.

249 i. Trade boycott.—With lawful object—Unlawful means not used.—The Coastal Retail Butchers' Assocn., of which defts. were the secretary & executive officers, entered into a combination with the Wholesale Butchers' Assocn. for the purpose of raising the price of meat, the latter agreeing not to supply retailers who sold below the Assocn. prices. Pltf., a butcher, refused to be bound by the Assocn. prices. Thereupon the wholesale butchers refused to supply him, apparently at the instigation of defts. Pltf. was compelled to close his business & brought an action against defts. for damages for conspiracy to injure him in his trade:—Held: defts. had not infringed any legal right of pltf.

249 ii. —[.]—Pltf., a bookmaker, alleged that he was wrongfully expelled from race tracks by defts., officers & members of a racing assocn. He asked for a declaration that their action was without lawful excuse, also for an injunction and damages:—Held: (1) defts. were authorised by various jockey clubs to represent them at the racing assocn.; (2) their action in expelling pltf. was necessary to the good government of the course; (3) defts. merely discharged their duty.—SCULLY v. MADIGAN (1912), 23 O. W. R. 876; 4 O. W. N. 394.—CAN.

249 iii. —[.]—Pltf., formerly Protestant incumbent of a parish, brought an action against certain parishioners, alleging that defts. entered into a conspiracy to deprive him of his income & compel him to resign the incumbency by abstaining from giving contributions to the Sustentation Fund. The jury found inter alia that defts. combined to abstain themselves from contributing, but did not combine or induce other parishioners not to contribute.—Held: the acts of defts. did not constitute any legal injury to pltf., & the action was not maintainable.—KEARNEY v. LLOYD (1890), 26 L. R. Ir. 268.—IR.

254. ——Pltf., a professional football player in the employment of defts., was offered employment by another football club, but the offer fell through owing to the transfer fee charged by defts. under the rules of the Football League. Pltf. claimed damages for loss of employment, alleging that defts. had maliciously charged an excessive transfer fee:—Held: (1) pltf. had no cause of action, even if the fee was excessive, as the course taken by defts. was justified by the terms of the employment; (2) there was no evidence of malice. Qu.: whether Trade Disputes Act, 1906 (c. 47), did not apply.

Where a man exercises an undoubted legal right, his motive in so doing is immaterial (LAWRENCE, J.).—KINGABY v. ASTON VILLA FOOTBALL CLUB (1912), Times, Mar. 28.

255. Loss of bargain.—Pltf., who had been served by defts. with notice to treat for his land under Elementary Education Act, 1870 (c. 75), afterwards discovered that they had already agreed to exchange a portion of the land included in the notice for other land, thereby securing to defts. additional land & other advantages, instead of allowing him to reap those advantages, which he would have done had he remained in possession of his land, & he moved that defts. might be restrained from using the land otherwise than for educational purposes:—Held: although he might have lost the chance of making a profitable bargain, such loss was no cause of action, but only a damnum absque injuria.—ROLLS v. LONDON SCHOOL BOARD (1884), 27 Ch. D. 639; 51 L. T. 567; 33 W. R. 129.

PART II. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 2.—B.

253 i. Prevention of contract.—Pltf. was engaged from hour to hour in discharging cargo. He could be discharged at any time, but had a reasonable expectation of being continued in his employment until the "job" was completed. Defs., secretary of a trade union, represented to pltf.'s employer that the employment of pltf. was a breach of a contract made by the employer with the union & warned him against further employing pltf., & the employer did not further employ pltf. Defs. was not actuated by any malice or desire to injure pltf., but acted in the interests of his union & the employer:—Held: pltf. had no cause of action.—BOND v. MORRIS (1912), V. L. R. 351.—AUS.

256 i. Loss of profit.—Pltf., an hotel keeper at Niagara Falls, furnished guides & dresses to persons going under the falls, & by consent of the Govt., had a stairway down the bank of the river; defts. also had a stairway for same purpose. Pltf.'s stairway was burned down, & while he was rebuilding it, defts., to injure him, as it was alleged, represented to the A.-G. that the land on which pltf.'s stairway was, was necessary for military purposes, & induced the A.-G. to permit the use of his name in filing an information to restrain pltf. Pltf. was delayed in completing his stairway until he obtained a licence from the Crown, & lost the profits of his business, etc. It was also alleged that defts. represented to the public wishing to go down the public stairway that they had a right to prevent them. On demurrer:—Held: no cause of action was shown; there was no violation of any right of pltf. nor malicious procuring of any breach of contract.—DAVIS v. BARNETT (1866), 26 U. C. R. 109.—CAN.

256. Loss of profit.—Defts., a waterworks co. under their Act laid down one of their mains along & under a turnpike road, made under an Act which declared the soil to be in the owners of the adjoining land, subject only to the right to use & maintain the road. K. was owner of land on both sides, at a spot where the road was carried across a valley on an embankment, & wanting to connect his land on either side, K. employed pltf., at an agreed sum, to make a tunnel under the road. In doing the work a leak was discovered in defts.' main higher up the road, & on pltf. digging out the earth, the water from the leak flowed down upon the work & delayed it, so as to cause pecuniary damage to pltf., for which he brought an action against defts.:—Held: assuming K. could have maintained an action against defts. for injury to his property (to which the ct. gave no opinion), the damage sustained by pltf. by reason of his contract with K. becoming less profitable, or a losing contract, in consequence of the injury to K.'s property, gave pltf. no right of action against defts.—CATTLE v. STOCKTON WATERWORKS CO. (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 453; 44 L. J. Q. B. 139; 23 T. L. R. 475; 39 J. P. 791. S. C. No. 334, post.

C. Interference with Land.

258. Adjacent owners—Seeding thistles.—An occupier of land is under no duty towards his neighbour to cut periodically the thistles naturally growing on his land, so as to prevent them from seeding, & if, owing to his neglect to cut them, the seeds are blown on to his neighbour's land & do damage, he is not liable.—GILES v. WALKER (1890), 24 Q. B. D. 656; 59 L. J. Q. B. 416; 62 L. T. 933; 54 J. P. 599; 38 W. R. 782.

259. — Dangerous tree—Trespassing horse.—Pltf. & defts. occupied adjoining fields separated by a fence & ditch belonging to defts. The ditch was on the side of the fence next to pltf.'s field, his boundary being the edge of the ditch. On defts.' side of the fence grew a yew tree, the branches of which extended over the fence & partly over the ditch, but no part of the tree extended over or up to pltf.'s boundary. Defts. were under no liability to fence against their neighbour's cattle. Pltf.'s horse ate of the branches extending over the ditch, & died therefrom. In an action to recover as damages the value of the horse:—Held: defts. were not liable, because there was no duty on them to take means to prevent pltf.'s horses from having access to the branches of the tree.—PONTING v. NOAKES, [1894] 2 Q. B. 281; 63 L. J. Q. B. 549;

258 i. Adjacent owners—Right to drive off locusts.—A swarm of unwinged locusts came upon pltf.'s farm. Pltf. drove them out in a southerly direction. Defs. owned property to the south of pltf.'s farm & he & his neighbours drove the locusts in an easterly direction parallel with pltf.'s southern boundary. Some of the locusts were thus checked from leaving the pltf.'s farm, & damaged his lands:—Held: though defts. had no right to go on pltf.'s land, if pltf. had the right to turn the locusts out of his lands with the result of turning them into his neighbour's farm, the neighbour had an equal right to do his utmost to keep them from his farm, even though the result should be to turn them back to pltf.'s land.—GREYVEN-STEIN v. 260. Percolating water.—The owner of land through which water flows in a subterranean course has no right or interest in it which will enable him to maintain an action against a landowner, who, in carrying on mining operations in his own land in the usual manner, drains away the water from the land of the first-mentioned owner & lays his well dry. Qu.: if the well had been ancient, whether there would have been any difference.—ACTON v. 261. —[The principles which regulate the rights of owners of land in respect to water flowing in known & defined channels, whether upon or below the surface of the ground, do not apply to underground water which merely percolates through the strata in no known channels.

Where A., a landowner & a millowner, who had for above 60 years enjoyed the use of a stream chiefly supplied by such percolating underground water, lost the use of the stream after an adjoining landowner had dug, on his own ground, an extensive well for the purpose of supplying water to the inhabitants of the district, many of whom had no title as landowners to the use of the water:—Held: A. had no right of action.—CHASEMORE v. D. Acts causing Death.

262. Damage caused by third person's death—Husband & wife.—In an action for negligence, whereby pltf.'s wife was killed, he is not entitled to any damages for the loss of her society, or for his mental sufferings on her account after the moment of her death.

In a civil ct. the death of a human being cannot be complained of as an injury (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—BAKER v. BOLTON (1808), 1 Camp. 493.

263. —Master & servant—Parent & child.—A master cannot maintain an action for injuries which cause the immediate death of his servant.

Declaration against deft. for injuries caused to E., pltf.'s "daughter & servant," by the negligent driving of deft.'s servant, by reason whereof she afterwards died; claiming as special damage the loss of E.'s services, & her burial expenses. Plea (inter alia) that E. was killed on the spot:—Held: the plea was good.—OSBORN (OSBORNE) v. 266. — — — — —.]—One of H.M.'s submarines was run into & sunk by a s.s., & the crew were drowned. In an action of damage by collision brought by the Admty. Comrs. against the owners of the s.s. defts. submitted to judgment on the basis of paying to pltf's. 95 per cent. of their damage to be assessed by the Admty. Registrar. Pltf's. claimed as an item of damage the capitalised amount of the pensions payable by them to the relatives of the deceased men:—Held: the claim failed (1) on the principle that in a civil ct. the death of a human being could not be complained of as an injury; (2) on the ground of remoteness, the pensions being voluntary payments in the nature of compassionate allowances.—ADMIRALTY COMRS. v. S.S. AMERIKA, [1917] A. C. 38; 86 L. J. P. 58; 116 L. T. 34; 33 T. L. R. 135; 61 Sol. Jo. 158; 13 Asp. M. L. C. 558, H. L.; affy. S. C. sub. nom. THE AMERIKA, [1914] P. 167, C. A. S. C. 267. — — — — —.]—When recoverable—Independent cause of action.]—Pltf. brought an action against defts. to recover damages for breach of warranty on the sale of a tin of salmon unfit for human food, which caused the death of pltf.'s wife. At the trial the jury found for pltf. & awarded to him as damages an amount which included £200, for the loss of his wife's services through her death:—Held: (1) where there was a cause of action, independently of the wrong causing the death, such as a breach of contract, damage arising from the death of a human being might be included as an element in ascertaining the damages; (2) pltf. was entitled to recover the damages.—JACKSON v. WATSON & SONS, [1909] 2 K. B. 193; 78 L. J. K. B. 587; 100 L. T. 799; 25 T. L. R. 454; 53 Sol. Jo. 447, C. A.

PART II. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 2.—E.

m. Society—Exclusion from.]—A suit will not lie to force defts. to admit pltf. into their society.—RADHOO NISSEE v. RAM JUNOO NISSEE (1862), 2 Hay 83.—IND.

n. — — — — —.]—In a suit for a decree declaratory of right to membership of a soma (society), upon the allegation that the other members had excluded pltf.:—Held: as such exclusion neither deprived pltf. of caste nor affected any right of property, it was not cognisable by the civil ct. The members of a society are the sole judges whether a particular person is entitled to continue as a member or not.—SUDHARAM PATAR v. SUDHARAM (1869), 3 B. L. R. A. C. 91; 11 W. R. 457.—IND.

o. Agreement to withdraw case—Case accidentally tried—Publication of judgment—Without defendant's malice or fraud.]—K., debt. in a case in a magistrate's ct., paid the amount due to his creditor D., who promised to withdraw the case. In accordance with his promise, D. posted a letter to the magistrate's clerk withdrawing the case, which letter never reached its destination. The case was heard, & judgment given against K. This judgment appeared in a gazette supplied to business men, & K. in consequence suffered damage to his credit. K. thereupon sued D.:—Held: in the absence of malice or fraud on the part of D., the injury suffered by K. was damnum absque injuria, & K. was not entitled to succeed in tort.—KHAN v. DEENIK (1907), 24 S. C. 396; 17 C. T. R. 53.—S. AF.

268. Communication of libellous publication.]—No claim can be maintained by the publishers of a libellous work against a person informing the individuals libelled of the publication who bring actions against the publishers resulting in recovery of damages.—SAUNDERS v. SEYD & KELLY'S CREDIT INDEX CO., LTD., SEYD & KELLY'S CREDIT INDEX CO., LTD. v. SAUNDERS & CHAPMAN (1896), 75 L. T. 193; 12 T. L. R. 546, C. A.

269. Interference with administrator.]—H. died intestate leaving no children or kindred, & the King appointed pltf. to take out administration. Deft., though he knew there was no kindred, entered caveats & put pltf. to great charge, & for this cause pltf. brought an action. Semble: the action would not lie; although there was a damnum it was absque injuria.—MANNING v. NAPP (1892), 1 Salk. 37; 91 E. R. 38.

270. Use of name—Divorced husband peer—Wife using title.]—Where the marriage of a commoner with a peer of the realm has been dissolved at the instance of the wife, & she afterwards, on marrying a commoner, continues to use the title acquired by her first marriage, she does not thereby, though having no legal right to the user, commit such a legal wrong against her husband, & so affect his enjoyment of the incorporeal hereditament which he possesses in his title, as to entitle him, in the absence of malice, to an injunction to restrain her use of the title.—COWLEY (EARL) v. COWLEY (COUNTESS), [1901] A. C. 450; 70 L. J. P. 83; 85 L. T. 254; 50 W. R. 81; 17 T. L. R. 725, H. L. S. C. No. 196, ante.

274. Mere threats—No damage.]—Deft. claimed pltf. as his villein & with force & arms lay in wait for him to take, imprison, & use him as his villein so that he could not go about his business, whereupon pltf. brought an action on the case:—Held: pltf. had no cause of action, there being

Neither the claim nor the threat gives a cause of action. How can that which follows give an action? It was pltf.'s folly that he did not go out upon his affairs. There are various cases in our law

& interested in the due observance of Customs Act, 1906, & that deft., as Treasurer of the Colony, was permitting to be imported printed catalogues in parcels under a certain weight without payment of duty, prayed for a declaration that deft. was not entitled to give such permission, & for an interdict:—Held: in the absence of any averment of infringement of any right belonging to pltf., the declaration disclosed no cause of action.—BAGNALL v. COLONIAL GOVT. (1907), 24 S. C. 470; 17 C. T. R. 689.—S. AF.

274 i. Damage due to plaintiff's act.]—Where pltf.'s cattle, wrongfully on the lands of deft., have been lawfully distrained for poor rate, etc., due by deft., the trespass, even though not wilful, precludes pltf. from recovering from deft. the amount he has paid in order to release his cattle.—BERESFORD v. Sect. 3.—Damnum absque injuria: Sub-sect. 2, where a man has damnum sine injuria, such as if two conspire to indict a man, he has no remedy, unless he be in fact indicted & also acquitted thereon; so in this case (NEEDHAM, J., & BILLING, C.J.).—BROWN v. HAWKINS (1477), Y. B. Trin., 17 Edw. 4, p. 3, pl. 2.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

275. Former attitude of court.—Court of Common Law.]—T. was lessee & pltf. under-lessee of premises at a rent of £10 a year. T. leased to other defts., H. & Co., who gave notice to pltf. to pay over his rent to them as landlords, & he paid them the rent for that year. Then T. sued pltf. for that & for other years' rent due to him; pltf. paid the first 4 years' rent into ct. & filed a bill asking that defts. might interplead as to the last year's rent:—Held: the trifling sum for which the suit was brought prevented the ct. from giving a decision.—SMITH v. TARGET (1795), 2 Anst. 529; 145 E. R. 957.

276. ——— Where real claim trivial.]—The ct. will stay proceedings in an action of contract, where it clearly appears to be brought to recover a sum under 40s., although the sum claimed in the writ exceed that amount—especially if there has been, in addition, an abuse of the process of the ct. in issuing the writ prematurely.—STUART (STEWART) v. CAUSE (1859), 5 C. B. N. S. 737; 28 L. J. C. P. 192; 32 L. T. O. S. 256; 5 Jur. N. S. 650; 7 W. R. 187; 141 E. R. 296.

277. ——— New trial—Verdict against evidence.]—A verdict was given for deft. against the evidence, but the action was frivolous & trifling & the real damage little or none:—Held: a new trial must be refused.—MACROW v. HULL (1764), 1 Burr. 11; 97 E. R. 161.

278. ———.]—A fire broke out on premises in part of which pltf. carried on the business of a licensed victualler, but pltf.'s goods were not destroyed by the fire. In an action against defts. for the wrongful conversion of pltf.'s goods by their servants, men of the fire brigade, the jury found that the fire brigade had custody of the premises for the purpose of extinguishing the fire; that the injury to pltf.'s goods was caused by the felonious acts of the men of the fire brigade, that the officers were guilty of negligence in not preventing the felonious acts by the men; & they assessed the damages at £15:—Held: it was the custom of the ct. not to grant a new trial on the ground that the verdict was against the weight of evidence where the damages did not exceed £20, except under peculiar circumstances, such as the trial of a right, or where the personal character of a person might be injured.—JOYCE v. METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS (1881), 44 L. T. 811; 45 J. P. 667.

279. ——— Misdirection.]—Where the ground of application for a new trial is misdirection, the amount of the verdict is not regarded.—HAINE v. DAVEY (1836), 4 Ad. & El. 892; 6 Nev. & M. K. B. 356; 111 E. R. 1019.

PART II. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 1.

q. General rule—Duty of court.]—A suit instituted to recover a very small amount should be dismissed, as being beneath the dignity of the ct.—CHAIKE v. DUNGANNON (1854), 6 Ir. Jur. 174.—IR.

r. ———.]—A writ of summons which claimed a sum of £1 7s. 11d. was set aside as being beneath the dignity of the ct., on account of the smallness of the sum claimed.—KILLEN v. GARVEY (1883), 17 L. T. 62.—IR.

s. ——— Nonsuit—Dismissal of appeal.]—Where a nonsuit was erroneously granted by the ct., & it appeared on appeal that pltf. was entitled to recover $1.86, the ct., acting on the above maxim, dismissed the appeal without costs.—WOODWARD v. FREDERICKTON CITY (1888), 27 N. B. R. 211.—CAN.

Pltfs. moved for an inquiry into the sum of money standing in the names of defts., who were the churchwardens at the time the money was transferred, & for a scheme for the appointment of proper trustees. It was admitted that the church had been duly warned:—Held: no case was made out which made it necessary for the ct. to interfere.—RE MITCHELL'S CHARITY (1838), 2 Jur. 837.

283. ———.]—Prior to R. S. C., 1883, the High Ct. of Justice would not entertain an action claiming that a sum under £10 might be declared a charge upon land, since the action was not one which, before Jud. 289. Infringement of copyright.—Pltf. was the owner of the copyright of a number of reports of legal cases, & defts. were the author & publisher of Smith's Leading Cases. The ct. refused to interfere to prevent the infringement of a right producing no mischief.—SAUNDERS v. SMITH (1838), 3 My. & Cr. 711; 7 L. J. Ch. 227; 2 Jur. 491, 536; 40 E. R. 1100. S. C. In an action for damages, delivery up of copies, & an injunction, the jury awarded pltf. a farthing damages:—Held: as far as the common law right was concerned there was no ground for an injunction.—HOLMES v. LANGFIER (1903), Times, 9th Nov.

B. Claims involving trivial Amounts.

291. Odd farthings.—Deft. sold to pltf. £52 worth of oats at 10s. 9d. a quarter. Pltf. sued on the contract, claiming that deft. should have delivered 96 quarters, 6 bushels. On deft. alleging that the quantity claimed came to £52 0s. 0½d.:—Held: the breach alleged by pltf. was good; the difference was inter minima, just as the odd hours are not accounted in the year, which has 365 days & 6 hours.—LASTLOW v. THOMLINSON (1614), Hob. 88; Jenk. 287, p. 22; 80 E. R. 237.

latter of $20, for giving up his rights in land, pltf. abandoning any claim for damages for any cutting of trees previous to a certain Saturday afternoon, an action was brought by pltf. against deft. for damages for subsequent cutting; the evidence established the cutting of one tree at a later hour on same Saturday afternoon. No value was fixed for this tree, or for what deft. did after taking the $20:—Held: (1) the damage must have been very trivial, & such as formed no justification for bringing the action; (2) pltf. should have judgment for damages at 20 cents, without costs, on account of the frivolous character of the action.—MELANSON v. WRIGHT (1890), 40 N. S. R. 598.—CAN.

286 ii. — Obstruction of highway.—Harbour Trust Commrs. leased to deft. council land as a site for a boat shed below high-water mark. The shed was erected on beams which rested for about a foot on the end of a public highway abutting on the harbour. The public were free to pass through the boat shed for the purpose of obtaining access to the water, & vice versa:—Held: the obstruction caused by the ends of the beams resting on the public highway was too trifling to justify interference of the ct.—A.-G. ON RELATION OF ROSMAN v. MOSMAN MUNICIPAL COUNCIL (1910), 11 S. R. (N. S. W.) 133; 28 N. S. W. N. 41.—AUS.

292. Premium 6d.—Ad valorem stamp.—Under 8 Anne, c. 9, s. 32, the stamp on an indenture of apprenticeship where 6d. only was the sum given with the apprentice was so small as to fall under the above maxim, and the indenture did not need to be stamped.—BAXTER v. 293. Application of maxim—Question of degree.—In harvesting barley about 30 bushels per acre were collected by the first raking. The rakings left on the ground amounted to about 3 bushels per acre, so that on setting up the tithes of the 30 the parson would have an eleventh part only:—Held: tithes were payable in respect of the rakings left. Semble: the quantity left at the second raking was too small to be worth attention.—GLANVILL (GLANVILLE) v. STACEY (1827), 6 B. & C. 543; 4 Dow. & B. 626; 5 L. J. C. No. 317, post.

294. ——[Semble: the ct. will not quash a rate because in the total rental of the place amounting to several thousand pounds there have been omissions of a trivial amount, such as £5; to do so would be to act in defiance of the above maxim:—Held: a difference of one-twelfth of the whole is material & not within the above maxim.—WHITE & JACKSON v. BEARD (1839), 2 Curt. 480. S. C. No. 313, post.

PART II. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 2.—B.

u. General rule—Duty of defendant.—The rule & policy of the ct. is to discourage suits for trifling amounts.

Where a bill was filed in respect of a small sum, including interest, the ct., without reference to the merits of the demand, dismissed the bill, but without costs, as deft. ought, in the circumstances, to have demurred or moved to take the bill off the file.—WESTBROOKE v. BROWETT (1870), 17 Gr. 339.—CAN.

v. — Action for board & lodging.—An action for £2 15s. for board & lodging is beneath the dignity of the Superior Ct. Semble: the ct. would, on application of deft., order the writ to be taken off the file.—MULLIGAN v. GRIMES, M'GONIGLE v. GRIMES (1880), 15 I. L. T. 7.—IR.

w. — Suit for tithes.—In a suit to recover £6 1s. 5d. for tithes, the bill may be demurred to or be dismissed at the hearing, on account of the smallness of the demand.—DISNEY v. TAAFE (1837), 1 Dr. & Wal. 94.—IR.

293 i. Application of maxim—Question of degree.—By an error, the arrears of taxes, £2.30, were carried into treasurer's book as $2.50 & property worth from $600 to $800 was sold for $6.06. In an action to set aside the sale:—Held: (1) the difference might appear small, but the error represented 10% of tax, while purchaser had only paid 1/10th value of land, and the above maxim did not apply. In such cases the proportion should rather be looked at than the actual amount. The assessment was perfectly legal, but the amount for which it was sold was in excess; (2) pltf. entitled to a decree setting aside sale. On appeal the judgment was reversed on other grounds.—CLAXTON v. SHIBLEY (1885), 9 O. R. 451; 10 O. R. 295.—CAN.

293 ii. ——[Pltfs. agreed to sell to deft. "all the lambs shorn" the produce of pltf.'s flock on certain land. Pltfs. were to tend & care for the lambs to the best of their ability until delivery. Pltfs. tendered 2,942 lambs in performance of the contract, of which 156 were not shorn, & 153 not docked. Deft. refused to accept delivery. At the trial of the action, the jury found that the lambs "substantially speaking" were shorn and tendered, but negatived the existence of a custom, whereby a purchaser was bound to accept a small number of unshorn or undocked lambs:—Held: (1) the seller having tendered a quantity substantially less than he contracted to sell, the buyer might reject the whole; (2) the finding of the jury must be disregarded, as it is only when the excess or deficiency is so slight as to be negligible, that the court will apply the above maxim. Harland & Wolff v. Burstall & Co. (1901), 84 L. T. 324, folld.; Ship-ton, Anderson & Co. v. Well Bros. & Co., (1912) 1 K. B. 574, distd.—FARLEY & FARLEY v. LOUGHTNAN (1917), N. Z. L. R. 588.—N.Z.

He made no attempt to obtain work elsewhere on those days & applied for 7s. 10d. compensation in respect of them, saying his injury prevented him earning wages elsewhere during this period. The ct. judge refused to award any compensation & merely granted a declaration of liability:—Held: without deciding whether or not the man was entitled to compensation during this period, & assuming everything in his favour, he would only be entitled to the difference between his average weekly earnings before & after the accident, & the effect of so short a time upon the calculation of his average weekly earnings after the accident was so trivial that the award of the ct. judge was justified.—WOODHOUSE v. CROMWELL (1594), Cro. Eliz. 353; 78 E. R. 601.

301. Right to cut heather, etc.—Effect of cutting grass & young shoots therewith.—In an action of trespass deft. proved that for 60 years previous to commencement of the suit his predecessors & himself in a farm exercised the right by themselves & their servants to cut, during certain months of the year, brake, fern, heather & litter to be used upon the farm:—Held: he had not thereby proved the exercise of a right to mow the grass where there was no heather, nor of a right to cut down anything which could be fairly & reasonably called fir trees, even of young growth.

If in cutting the heather he cut what some people may call young fir trees, that is, the shoots of a year's growth, or things which are really not noticeable & which nobody could distinguish from the heather, or if he cut grass which was growing among the heather, it would be idle to suppose he is prevented from cutting the heather, because he may cut a few blades of grass or these very young trees (BRETT, L. A. Questions of Right.

304. No actual damage.—In an action for refusing to admit an elector's vote where the persons for whom he offered to vote were elected:—Held: the action lay.

This is not so inconsiderable a right as to apply the above maxim to it; an injury imports a damage when a man is thereby hindered of his right. If a man gives another a cuff on the ear, though it cost him nothing, no, not so much as little diachylon, yet he shall have his action (HOLT, C.J.).—ASHBY v. 305 i. Amount of damage immaterial.—Pltf. claimed a perpetual injunction for damage by overflow of water from deft.'s lands on to his to the extent of under £2 per annum:—Held: the amount of the damage being so trifling was no ground for refusing a perpetual injunction, pltf. having established a legal right by an action of trespass against a former owner of deft.'s land.—WRIGHT v. & proof.]—Pltf. had agreed to drive all logs remaining at a named date on a river past the mouth of a brook. In an action to recover the price therefor he averred in his declaration that the whole of the logs were so driven:—Held: an averment of performance.

This does not mean that pltf. should have proved that the whole of the logs were driven in the strictest literal construction of the words, as this would be harsh and unreasonable & impossible of performance. The maxim "de minimis non curat lex" might apply, to be used however with caution (per & limb:—Held: a party was damaged by imprisonment whether for felony or trespass, though penalty in the one case was not as great as in the other; accordingly his damage was less, but the law would take care that damage even to the smallest extent would be remedied (SCROPE, J.).—(1329), Y. 306. Trivial damage—Right of common.—A commoner may maintain an action on the case for an injury done to the common by taking away from thence the manure which was dropped on it by the cattle, though his proportion of the damage be found only to the amount of a farthing; at least, the smallness of the damage found is no ground for a nonsuit.—PINDAR v. In an action for disturbance of the right of common the commoners recovered a farthing damages:—Held: a farthing damages would sustain an action of this sort.—KITCHEN v. KNIGHT (1824), M'Cle. 373; 148 E. R. 156.

308. Liberty of subject affected.—The ct. will not allow itself to be biased one way or the other by any consideration either of the technical character or the minuteness or apparent insignificance of points raised by counsel, if it appears that the requirements of the law in a case affecting liberty have not been complied with (LORD SELBORNE, C.).—GREEN v. B. Disputes as to Land.

309. Obstruction.—Pltf. purchased two of several plots of building land of which deft. was mtgee. in fee. The conveyance to which deft. & mtgor. were both parties, contained a grant of a right of way "along the roads or intended roads & ways delineated in the plan," & also a covenant by deft. that he had not incumbered the premises. Another plot had previously been sold to A. In the conveyance to A. (to which deft. as mtgee. was a party) mtgor. covenanted with A. that he would at his own expense "pave & complete & make fit for use, & at all times maintain in good repair, a private road marked 'Private Road A. B.' on the plan drawn in the margin of these presents [describing it], & will make such road of a width not less than 40 feet throughout its entire length." This was the road over which a right of way was granted to pltf. in his conveyance. In this deed was also a proviso that it should be lawful for A. "to erect & maintain a porte-cochere or projection extending over the foot pavement of the private road marked A. B. provided that the plan thereof be submitted to mtgor. & approved of by him." This portico when finished projected about 2 ft. into the carriage-way of the private road A. B., but there was ample space left for the convenient enjoyment by pltf. of the way granted to him:—Held: there being no substantial interference with the right of way or easement granted to pltf., he was not entitled to maintain an action against deft. upon his covenant.

"I wish to guard myself from saying that in any dispute as to land the maxim de minimis can have application. I think this is not so, but if pltf. had had the soil of this road, he would have a right of action for ever so little encroachment upon it" (BRETT, J.).—CLIFFORD v. HOARE (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 362; 43 L. J. C. P. 225; 30 L. T. 465; 22 W. R. 828.

310. Trespass—Discretion of court.—The ct. may refuse to grant an injunction to restrain persons from trespassing on land if the landowner is not injured thereby.

Pltf. bought land on an unfrequented part of the coast, & stopped up several paths which defts. asserted were public highways. Defts. removed the obstructions placed by pltf., who brought an action against them for an injunction to restrain them from trespassing on his land:—Held: (1) as between pltf. & defts., there were no public rights of way; (2) pltf. was entitled to a declaration to that effect, & defts. must pay nominal damages; (3) as pltf. was not, in the present state of the neighbourhood, injured by the public use of the ways in question, no injunction ought to be granted.—BEHRENS v. RICHARDS, [1905] 2 Ch. 614; 74 L. J. Ch. 615; 93 L. T. 623; 69 J. P. 381; 54 W. R. 141; 21 T. L. R. 705; 49 Sol. Jo. 685; 3 L. G. R. 1228.

311. Will—Gift to charity including trivial interest in land.—A testator, who died before the coming into operation of Mortmain & Charitable Uses Act, 1891 (c. 73), gave so much of his residuary estate as might by law be applicable to charitable legacies to two charities. Part of this estate consisted of debentures in two Australian land cos. In the case of one co. the debentures were charged on all the real & personal property of the co. at maturity, & in the case of the other by way of floating security on all its undertaking & all its real & personal property. By Australian law money charged on land could be validly given to charities. At testator's death the only interests in land in England which the cos. possessed were leasehold offices of no appreciable value:—Held: (1) the debentures could not be given to charity, as, being charged upon the English leaseholds, they were "an interest in land" within Mortmain & Charitable Uses Act, 1888 (c. 42); (2) the maxim was not applicable, & there could be no apportionment.—Re DAWSON, PATTISON v. 312. Question of degree—Distribution of booty.—In considering the distribution of prize or booty taken by a joint British & Portuguese force in French Guiana:—Held: the Admty. Ct. need not entertain British claims in all cases where the slightest assistance had been rendered by British subjects; but the value in question being £32,000 & one hundred & forty-one British subjects asserting claims, the matter was not within the above maxim.—THE FRENCH GUIANA (1817), 2 Dods. 151.

to America in breach of the revenue laws. It was said the prohibited amount was not more than three tons:—Held: it being alleged to be the practice in the island, it could not be overlooked, & the ship was rightly condemned.

If the deviation were a trifle, which if continued in practice, would weigh little or nothing on the public interest, it might be overlooked. Three tons of wood perhaps would not be what the ct. could regard as a trifle (SIR W. SCOTT).—THE REWARD (1818), 2 Dods. 265.

316. — Shareholder's interest.]—In a suit by pltf. on behalf of himself & all other shareholders & scrip-holders in a ry. co. except debts against the directors for an account of all their dealings:—Held: the small value of pltf.'s interest, viz., £62 10s. at the utmost, subject to deductions of indefinite amount, so that it was very doubtful whether anything at all would come to him, was not so clearly below the dignity of the ct. as to prevent him from suing.—WILLIAMS v. 318. Disqualification of member of local authority.]—A member of a board of guardians agreed with the board to collect on their behalf rent receivable by them in respect of a certain house. There was no express agreement as to any fee or commission to be paid to the member for so doing. He collected the rent until the house was sold, & then paid to the board the amount of the rent received by him, less a sum which he claimed to be entitled to retain as commission, but afterwards he paid to the board the sum which he had retained. After receiving it the board declared the member's office of guardian to be vacant, on the ground that, by reason of charging commission for the collection of the rent, he had become disqualified under Local Government Act, 1893 (c. 73), s. 4 (1) (c), for being a member of the board:—Held: the fact that before the declaration of vacancy the employment had terminated, & the amount of commission had been paid by the member to the board, did not prevent him from being disqualified, & the office was vacant.—R. v. ROWLANDS, [1906] 2 K. B. 292; 75 L. J. K. B. 501; 95 L. T. 502; 70 J. P. 463; 4 L. G. R. 983.

319. Trivial nuisance becoming serious—Original acquiescence.]—If works likely to become a nuisance are erected, & carried on without any objection, the owners of adjoining estates, who acquiesced so long as no perceptible injury was sustained, are not precluded, when injury arises, from objecting to an extension of the works, or from pursuing their legal remedy to recover damages for injury sustained by such works; & when an action has been brought & damages recovered the ct. will not restrain execution to obtain payment of the amount, or prevent pltf. in the action from taking other proceedings at law.—BANKART v. HOUGHTON (1859), 27 Beav. 425; 28 L. J. Ch. 473; 23 J. P. 260; 5 Jur. N. S. 282; 7 W. R. 197; 54 E. R. 167.

These statements & others in the advertisements were false. In 1904 D. began to sell liver pills under the name of "D.'s Bile Beans." The co. raised an action of interdiction against him, claiming exclusive use of the words "Bile Beans":—Held:

On general demurrer:—Held: the matters stated in the plea were sufficient to negative the existence of a valid copyright in pltf., & to preclude him from maintaining any action for piracy.—*WRIGHT v. 324 iv. ——— Stipulation for Commission by agent from third party.—A clerk of works with full charge of certain buildings in course of erection, unknown to his principal, stipulated with a measurer, as a condition of the latter's employment, for a commission on the tradesmen's accounts, as brought out in the measurements. The measurer having been employed, the clerk of works sought to recover his commission:—Held: the alleged contract for a commission was pactum illicitum, and action dismissed as irrelevant, with expenses to neither party.—*MACDOUGALL v. z. Illegal consideration.—Compromise of penal action without leave of court.—18 Eliz. c. 5 prohibits the compromise of a qui tam action without leave of the ct. Where a pltf., who had brought a qui tam action, agreed to discontinue it upon being paid his costs, & in a subsequent action for those costs recovered much less than he thought the jury should have given him, the ct. refused a new trial.—*BLECKER v. tion will be held illegal, & the declaration bad.—HART v. MEYERS (1850), 7 U. C. R. 416.—CAN.

325 i. Illegal purpose.—Contract for.—Contract to stifle prosecution.—Deft. being indicted for an assault occasioning actual bodily harm to pltf. & for common assault, a civil action for the assault was brought against him; this action was settled by deft. giving a note indorsed by B., for $1,000 for the damages sustained by pltf., & a fine was inflicted for common assault merely, the former charge in the indictment being withdrawn. The settlement was made & the note accepted by pltf. at deft.'s instance, & the judge, in sentencing deft., forbore to imprison because deft. had made compensation to pltf. In an action on the note:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover, as there was no illegality of consideration, since the settlement was merely for pltf.'s private damage, & in no way affected the public interest, the law having been vindicated by the imposition of substantial punishment.—KNEESHAU v. COLLIER (1879), 30 C. P. 265.—CAN.

325 ii. ——— Intention to defraud creditors.—The ct. will not assist a pltf. who is seeking to carry out an illegal purpose, or who has already carried out such purpose in whole or in part; but, if the illegal purpose still rests in intention only, the objection of illegality does not apply. Taylor v. Bowers (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 219, apprvd.

A husband by agreement with his wife caused the title to real estate, purchased with his funds, to be put into her name, and money of his to be lodged in the savings bank in her name, & the land & money were in her name at her death. The land was so dealt with to secure a home in the event of his falling in business; but, in fact, no creditors of the husband had been defeated by the agreement. In an action by the husband against the exors. of the wife to recover the real estate & money on the basis of a trust:—Held: (1) the real estate & money belonged to the husband; (2) as the purpose of defeating pltf.'s creditors had not been carried out, pltf. was not barred by the intended illegality.—PERPETUAL EXORS. & TRUSTEES OF ASSOC. OF AUSTRALIA, LTD. v. WRIGHT (1917), V. L. R. 372.—AUS.

325 iii. ——— Evasion of statute.—In an action by a principal against his agent for damages for misrepresentation made by him regarding land, it appeared that the agent had been employed to stake land. The names of certain persons had been used in staking the land. These persons were not really intending purchasers from the Govt., but were simply utilised to secure for pltf. a number of sections contrary to the Land Act, which provided for the purchase of one section at a time:—Held: the ct. would not aid pltf. with regard to any agreement entered into for the purpose of carrying out this fraud on the Land Act.—*CLARK v. b. Trespass to person.—Communication of venereal disease.—The communication of venereal disease during illicit sexual intercourse is not an actionable wrong if the act of intercourse has been voluntary; & consent to the intercourse is not vitiated by the fact that it had been induced through wilful concealment of the disease. On the principle ex turpi causa non oritur actio, such action is unsustainable.—HEGARTY v. SHINE, [1878] 2 L. R. Ir. 273; 4 L. R. Ir. 288.—IR.

334. Limits to maxim—Whole transaction not affected.]—The soil of a turnpike road was by Act of Parliament declared to be in the owners of the adjoining lands. K., the owner of land on both sides at a spot where the road was carried across a valley on an embankment, employed pltf. to construct a tunnel under the embankment. This was constructed by digging through half the width of the then illegal as to prevent pltf., who was engaged on it, from recovering damages for a wrong sustained during progress of the work:—CATTLE v. STOCKTON WATERWORKS Co., No. 256, ante.

335. — — — — — Independent transaction.]—Pltf., a bookmaker, placed a sum of money, the proceeds of street betting, in a house occupied by a person who assisted him in his betting transactions. The house in question having been searched by the police under a warrant issued under Betting Act, 1853 (c. 119), s. 11, the money & a number of betting slips were seized & retained by the police for the purposes of certain proceedings taken against pltf. & his employee. In those proceedings pltf.'s employee was convicted, but pltf. was acquitted, & he now sued deft. for detaining the money:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover.

The maxim has no application, as pltf. is not asking the ct. to enforce any illegal contract or to grant relief dependent in any way on any illegal transaction on his part, but is basing his claim solely on the unjustifiable detention by deft. of the money (MOULTON & BUCKLEY, L.JJ.).—*GORDON v. 338. Prince Consort.—Queen Victoria & pltf. allegedly had occasionally for their amusement made drawings & etchings. SUB-SECT. 2.—PERSONS SUING THEMSELVES.

A. In General.

339. No right of action against oneself.—Where pltf. sued as exors., & defts. pleaded that the promises in the declaration were made jointly with pltf.:—Held: a good plea in bar of the action.

How can a man sue himself in a ct. of law? It is impossible to say he can do so (BULLER, J.).—MOFFAT (MOFFATT) v. MILLENGEN (MULLENGEN) (1787), 2 Bos. & P. 125, n.; 2 Chit. 539; 126 E. R. 1193, n.

341.—J.—Defts. pleaded in bar to an action to recover a penalty for breach of Sunday Observance Act, 1780 (c. 49), a judgment in favour of a third party for the same penalty. That judgment was obtained in an action which was commenced in the name of R., with his consent, while pltf.'s action was pending, & was carried through to judgment by intervention of a solr. employed by defts. & without R.'s interference; it was commenced for the protection of defts. from any action brought or to be brought in respect of the penalty claimed in it, & for the purpose of taking the Home Secretary's opinion whether he would remit the penalty:—Held: the judgment recovered was no bar to an action for the same offence by a different pltf. on the ground the judgment had been recovered in an action in which the present defts. were both *pltf.*s. & defts. (BRETT & COTTON, L.JJ.).—GIRDLESTONE v. BRIGHTON AQUARIUM CO. (1879), 4 Ex. D. 107; 48 L. J. Q. B. 373; 40 L. T. 473; 43 J. P. 428; 27 W. R. 523, C. A.

B. Covenants with Oneself.

343. Not actionable—If joint.—J.—No action will lie on a covenant by C. to pay a sum of money to A., B. & himself C., or the survivors or survivor of them on their joint account.—FAULKNER v. LOWE (1848), 2 Exch. 595; 11 L. T. O. S. 245; 154 E. R. 628.

344.—J.—A tenant for life purported, in exercise of the powers of Settled Estates Act, 1877 (c. 18), s. 46, to demise the settled premises to himself & his two partners for 21 years, the lease containing the usual lessee's covenants entered into by the three lessees jointly. A certain rent was reserved by the lease, but dehors the lease it was arranged between the partners that the tenant for life should be allowed to occupy the house rent free, & should receive an additional rent as compensation in the event of his ceasing to reside there. In an action by the remaindermen, after the death of the tenant for life, to recover possession of the premises from an assignee of the lease:—Held: the lease was void for non-compliance with the requirements of the above sect., because the covenants in the lease, being joint covenants by a man & others with himself, were not enforceable at law, & were not proper covenants within the sect., or such as the reversioners were entitled to have inserted in the lease.—BOYCE v. EDBROOKE, [1903] 1 Ch. 836; 72 L. J. Ch. 547; 88 L. T. 344; 51 W. R. 424.

345.—J.—X., having assigned a life policy to A., B., & C., the trustees of his marriage settlement, he & A. & B. covenanted with A., B., & C., but not with them severally, that they, X., A., & B., or some of them, would pay the premiums on the policy. The premiums not having been paid, D., who had become a trustee in the place of C., & in whom, with A. & B., the benefit of the covenant had been vested, brought an action against X., A., & B., to enforce the covenant:—Held: (1) objection to the validity of the covenant on the ground that two of the covenantors were also covenantees was one of substance, not merely one of form; (2) no action would lie upon the covenant either at law or in equity; (3) the action must be dismissed.—ELLIS v. KERR, [1910] 1 Ch. 529; 79 L. J. Ch. 29; 102 L. T. 417; 54 Sol. Jo. 307.

Sect. 1.—In general: Sub-sect. 2, B. & C. Sects. 2, 3 & 4: Sub-sects. 1 & 2, A. (a)

346. ———.]—A covenant by one with himself & others jointly is void. If a lessee purports to covenant with himself & other lessors jointly, although the covenant, if valid, is of such a kind as to run with the land, yet an assignee of the term is not bound in law or in equity.—NAPIER v. WILLIAMS, [1911] 1 Ch. 361; 80 L. J. Ch. 298; 104 L. T. 380; 55 Sol. Jo. 235.

347. When actionable—Between other parties.]—By an indenture between A. & B., & B.'s wife & C., of one part, & D. & E., & C., of another part, it was recited that F., also party to the deed, had requested to have a certain farm given up to him, in which B.'s wife was interested, he, F., giving sureties, namely, D., E., & C., for payment of an annuity to B.'s wife; it was witnessed that, in consideration of the covenants entered into by A., B., & his wife, & C., & of 10s., D., E. & C. covenanted with A., B., & his wife & C., to pay the annuity. There followed covenants by A., B., for himself & his wife, & C. for quiet enjoyment, & for executing an assignment to F. when required. The deed was not executed by A. or B. In an action brought by A. & B. after the death of C. for breach of the covenant to pay the annuity:—Held: after C.'s death A. & B. might sue D.'s exors. (D. & E. being also dead) for non-payment of the annuity, though the covenant for such payment was entered into by & to C.—ROSE & WHITE v. POULTON (1831), 2 B. & Ad. 822; 1 L. J. K. B. 5; 109 E. C. Other Contracts.

348. Joint bailment—Action by joint bailors—Defence of delivery to one.]—Action by J. & two other plffs. on a contract, on the deposit of goods by the three plffs. with deft., not to give them up without the joint order of the three plffs. Breach, that they were given up without the joint order. Plea, that they were given up to J., one of present plffs., at his request. On demurrer:—Held: a good plea; for J., being disabled from suing for what he himself procured, could not at law sue, though joining other plffs. with him.—BRANDON, ELLIS & HAIM GUEDALLA v. SCOTT & ROBINSON (1857), 7 El. & Bl. 234; 26 L. J. Q. B. 103; 3 Jur. N. S. 362; 5 W. R. 235; 119 E. R. 1234.

350. ———.]—Pltf., holder of shares in a co., drew bills on the directors of the co. for goods furnished by him & his brother. The bills were accepted "for the directors" by the co.'s secretary, who had authority to accept bills drawn by pltf.'s brother:—Held: pltf. could not recover on these bills against the co.—NEALE v. TURTON (1827), 4 Bing. 149; 12 Moore, C. P. 365; 5 L. J. O. S. C. P. 133; 130 E. R. 725.

351. ———.]—A member of a joint-stock co. was employed by the co. as its agent to sell goods & received commission of 2 per cent. for his trouble, & 1 per cent. del credere for guaranteeing the purchaser. Having sold goods on account of the co., he drew on purchaser a bill of exchange, payable to his (the drawer's) own order, & after it had been accepted he indorsed it to the actuary of the co. The latter indorsed it to another member, managing director, who purchased goods for the co.; the co. was then indebted to him in a larger amount than the sum mentioned in the bill. The acceptor having become insolvent before the bill became due, the drawer received from him 10s. in the pound upon the amount of the bill by way of composition:—Held: (1) the indorsee being a member of the co., could not sue the drawer on the bill, as it was drawn by the latter on account of the co.; (2) he could not recover the sum received by the drawer on the bill, because that money must be taken to have been received by him in his character of a member of the co., & not on his own account.—TEAGUE v. HUBBARD (1828), 8 B. & C. 345; Dan. & Ll. 118; 2 Man. & Ry. K. B. 369; 6 L. J. O. S. K. B. 326; 108 E. R. 1071.

352. Partnership transactions—Private debt to firm.]—A. being indebted in his individual capacity to a house in trade, of which he himself was partner, in a sum of money the amount of which could not be exactly ascertained, covenanted to pay the firm all his then debts, & such other debts as should accrue. A. died without having satisfied the original debt, & having contracted further debts subsequent to execution of the deed:—Held: his exors. two of whom were partners in the house of trade, could not plead either of these debts by way of retainer, or as an outstanding specialty debt.

Upon this deed no action could have been maintained in a ct. of law against testator himself while living, or against his exors. after his decease, even if all the exors. had been strangers to the partnership (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—DE TASTET v. After his decease the surviving partners of one house may sue the surviving partners of the other upon transactions subsequent to the decease of the common partner.—BOSANQUET v. (a) In General.

354. Right to sue.—At law and in equity.—M., as agent for the King of Spain, received from the French Govt. a sum of money, which that Govt. had agreed to pay to the King of Spain in satisfaction of the claims of certain Spanish subjects in France. M. brought the money to England, & deposited a considerable portion of it in the hands of H. & Co., of L. The King of Spain applied to M. for the money, & M. refused to deliver it, on the pretence that he was bound to pay only to such subjects of Spain as should be found ultimately entitled to it. Bill in the name of the King of Spain against M. (out of the jurisdiction) & against H. & Co. for discovery, & payment of the money into ct. A demurrer to the bill for want of parties, etc., but chiefly on the ground that it had never been held that a foreign sovereign could sue in equity in England, was overruled. A foreign sovereign has a right to sue in England in equity as well as at law. In this case, the King of Spain was the only party entitled to the money in the first instance.—*HULLETT v. 361. Rights of legitimate sovereign.—Claim to property.—During a revolution in Sicily the revolutionary Govt. sent defts., natives & inhabitants of Sicily, as envoys to England, & afterwards remitted to them moneys, which had been contributed by many thousands of the inhabitants of Sicily, with directions to purchase a steamship therewith, & defts. applied the moneys accordingly. The lawful sovereign of Sicily, after he had re-established his authority, filed a bill claiming the ship, which still remained in the port of London. Defts., in their answer, admitted the possession of documents relating to the matters in the bill, but said they held them as agents on behalf of the persons who entrusted them with the moneys, & submitted, in the absence of such persons, they ought not to be ordered to produce the documents:—Held: (1) production would be ordered, because ptf. represented the contributors of the moneys, & the revolutionary Govt. being at an end, defts. had either ceased to be agents or trustees for any one or had become agents or trustees for ptf.; (2) the King, who had re-established his authority, was

362. — Protection of currency.]—The actual reigning sovereign of a foreign State in amity with Gt. Britain is entitled to sue in this ct. & to obtain an injunction to prevent the issuing of monetary notes manufactured in England, purporting to be notes of that foreign State, but having no sanction from its Govt., if the ct. is satisfied that some substantial injury will thereby accrue to the property of such foreign State & to that of pltf.'s subjects, whom he has a right to represent.

Monetary notes having been manufactured in England, purporting to be sanctioned by the State of Hungary, & signed by K., a native of Hungary, resident in England, "in the name of the nation," but which were unauthorised by the existing Govt., an injunction was granted to restrain their issue, & they were ordered to be delivered up to be cancelled at the suit of the Emperor of Austria as King de facto of Hungary.

363. — Limitations on rights.]—Where the sovereign power in a State is for a time de facto exercised by an usurping individual or body the original sovereign on restoration is entitled on the ground of jus in rem to all public property which existed before the usurpation, & is found in specie after its termination, & he also becomes entitled jure successionis to all other public property of the usurper. In an English ct. of equity the latter right can only be enforced subject to the same correlative rights & obligations as if the usurper himself were seeking to enforce it. The original sovereign cannot have a decree for an account against an agent of the usurper, unless he submits to be bound by all such obligations as would have been binding upon the usurper if pltf.—U.S.A. v. ment of June, 1876, & consequential relief. Defts. moved under R. S. C., O. 25, r. 4, to strike out the statement of claim, which sought relief on the footing that a compromise of certain disputes between a foreign de facto Govt. (recognised by this country) & defts. was not binding upon pltf's. the succeeding de jure Govt.:—Held: the statement of claim must be struck out as (1) the acts of a foreign de facto & recognised Govt. by their duly authorised agents must be treated by the tribunals of this country as binding upon their de jure successors; (2) the de jure Govt., after retaining with full knowledge of the facts the money paid to their predecessors as one of the terms of compromise, could not afterwards repudiate the arrangement.—PERU REPUBLIC v. (c) Proceedings by Agents.

365. Action maintainable—Contract with agent in official capacity.]—There is no such rule as that the monarch or other titular head of a foreign sovereign State is the only person who can sue here in respect of the public property or interest of that State.

The Spanish Minister of Marine in Madrid & two other persons brought an action in the Ct. of Sess. against resp. for damages for failure to deliver warships within the time stipulated by contract. The parties to the contract were described as "The Chief of the Spanish Royal Navy Commission," & "the Commissary of the Commission (mentioning their names) both in the name & representation of the Spanish Minister of Marine in Madrid, hereinafter called the Spanish Govt. on the one part," & resp's. 367. Evidence of authority.]—Application was made for a grant of administration to the agent of the Elector of Hesse, a foreign prince, for recovery of a debt due to the late Elector from the estate of the late Duke of York:—Held: administration should be granted for the purpose of substantiating proceedings in Ch.; but the ct. declined to extend it to the receipt of the debt without some further authority from the Elector or his Minister of State than mere instructions to recover the debt. Subsequently a power of attorney from the Minister of State executed by the directions of the Elector of Hesse was produced, & the ct. revoked the administration granted as above & decreed a new administration limited to further proceedings in Ch. & to the receipt of the said debt.—In the Goods of HESSE, (ELECTOR) (1827), 1 Hag. 376. — Limitations on Liability.]—Where in an action for the appointment of new trustees of a fund deft. counterclaimed for damages for libel:—Held: (1) the ct. would, as a rule, strike out the counterclaim & leave deft. to bring an independent action in respect of the libel; (2) the fact that pltf. were a foreign Govt. against whom deft. could not bring an action for libel was not sufficient reason for allowing him to proceed by counterclaim so as to take advantage of the circumstance that pltf. had, by bringing their action, submitted to the jurisdiction of the ct., & pltf. should be treated as having submitted to the jurisdiction only as regards matters properly raisable in their action; (3) as a matter of discretion in the particular case, a counterclaim so foreign to the subject-matter of the action must be struck out under R. S. C., O. 19, r. 3, independently of the question of jurisdiction.—SOUTH AFRICAN REPUBLIC v. LA COMPAGNIE FRANCO-BELGE DU CHEMIN DE FER DU NORD, [1897] 2 Ch. 487; 66 L. J. Ch. 747; 77 L. 378. —.]—A loan raised in 1833 for Don Miguel, as King of Portugal, for the use of his Govt., consisted partly of bills of exchange, in two parts, drawn upon bankers in London, who accepted the first parts in the course of their business for a customer. The second parts, having been remitted to the treasury of Portugal, indorsed to the treasurer of the royal treasury there, on account of the loan, came, after the dethronement of Don Miguel, into the possession of Queen Donna Maria, and were by her orders indorsed by the treasurer to S. in London, with instructions to recover the amount. An action having been brought by S. on the bills against the acceptors, they filed a bill of discovery, in aid of their defence, against him and the Queen of Portugal, charging that she was interested in the bills of exchange:—Held: as the Queen of Portugal was not a party to the record at law, she was not a proper party to the bill of discovery.—PORTUGAL (QUEEN) v. B. As Defendants.

(a) In General.

384. Immune from jurisdiction.]—An action cannot be maintained in any English ct. against a foreign potentate for anything done or omitted to be done by him in his public capacity as representative of the nation of which he is the head; & no English ct. has jurisdiction to entertain any complaints against him in that capacity.

Where a plaintiff was entered in the Lord Mayor's Ct. against the Queen of Portugal "as reigning sovereign & supreme head of the nation of Portugal" to recover a debt alleged to be due from the Portuguese Govt., & a foreign attachment had issued according to the custom of London, the ct. made absolute a rule for prohibition to restrain proceedings in the action & in the attachment. The same principle was applied to a case where a plaintiff was entered in the Lord Mayor's Ct. against the Queen of Spain, not expressly as reigning sovereign & head of the Spanish nation, but where it appeared by affidavit that plff.'s sole cause of action arose upon a Spanish Govt. bond purporting to have been issued under a decree of the Cortes sanctioned by the Regent of Spain, in the name of the Queen, then a minor. The writ of prohibition may in such cases be granted on the application of the Queen (deft.) before she has appeared to the action in the Lord Mayor's Ct.; or on the application of the garnishee, either before or after he has pleaded nil debet.—*WADSWORTH v. (b) Exceptions to the Rule.

389. Administration of fund—Counterclaim.]—To attempt to make a foreign sovereign or State amenable to the jurisdiction of our cts. would be offensive to the spirit & principles of international law, & a foreign sovereign or State cannot be served with a writ or other process of our cts. The only apparent exceptions to this rule are: (1) Where a foreign sovereign or State has come into our cts. to seek redress against deft., in which case deft. may assert any claim he has by way of counterclaim or cross-action in order that complete justice may be done. (2) Where both plff. & a foreign sovereign or State have claims upon funds in the hands of third persons within the jurisdiction of the English cts., in which case the foreign sovereign or State may be joined as deft. in order to be enabled to assert any claim to the funds in question.—*STROUSBERG v. 390. —.]—If a foreign Govt. or State having notice of a suit instituted in England for the administration of a fund in which it is entitled to claim an interest does not appear & submit its rights to the jurisdiction of the ct., the ct. will proceed in its absence.

Rajah to have it declared that with respect to certain land forming portion of the possessions of the Rajah, he was entitled to the post of Jubaraj & to succeed to such land on the death of the Rajah:—Held: the British Cts. had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, it not being one for immovable property.—BRER CHUNDER MANIKKYA v. RAJ COOMAR NOBODREP CHUNDER DEB BURMONO (1883), 1 L. R. 9 Calc. 535; 12 C. L. R. 465.—IND.

In Nov., 1870, the French Govt. instructed their bankers in London to open a special credit in favour of pltf. for £40,000, to be paid to him rateably as certain goods contracted to be supplied by pltf. should be delivered. Part of the contract was performed, & a proportionate part of the money was paid to pltf., but a dispute having arisen as to the rest of the contract, pltf. filed his bill against the bankers & the French Republic for a declaration & performance of the trusts of the residue of the £40,000. The French Republic did not appear:—Held: the ct. had jurisdiction over the fund, & in the absence of the French Republic would proceed to ascertain as it best could the rights of the parties who appeared.—*MORGAN v. 391. Waiver.—Deft., having entered an appearance in person as "C. F. A. W., Duke of Brunswick & Luneberg, sued as C. F. A. W. D'Este, commonly called Duke of Brunswick," delivered a plea to the jurisdiction, with an affidavit of verification, respectively intitled "C. F. A. W., sovereign Duke of Brunswick & Luneberg, sued as C. F. A. W. D'Este, commonly called Duke of Brunswick." Pltf., treating the plea as a nullity, signed judgment. 392. — Extent of.]—Pltf. brought an action to restrain K., & his agent in England, & A. & Co., agents for the Japanese Govt., from infringing pltf.'s patent for the manufacture of shells & projectiles. Shells, alleged to be infringements of the patent, had been made by K. in Prussia, & had been purchased there for the Japanese Govt., & brought to England to be put on board Japanese ships of war & taken to Japan. In Dec., 1877, an injunction was granted restraining A. & Co. from allowing removal of the shells. In May the Mikado of Japan obtained leave to be added as deft. to the suit so far as it might be necessary for applying for leave to remove the shells. The M.R., on the application of the Mikado, having made an order giving him leave to remove the shells notwithstanding the injunction, pltf. appealed:—Held: (1) the ct. had no jurisdiction to interfere with the property of a foreign sovereign in this country; (2) the Mikado was at liberty to remove the shells; (3) the Mikado, in submitting to be made a deft. in the action for the purpose of obtaining leave to remove his property, did not thereby lose his rights as a foreign sovereign.—*VAVASSEUR v. 394. — Time for—Acts not constituting.]—A foreign sovereign cannot submit to the jurisdiction until the jurisdiction is involved. The fact that a foreign sovereign has been residing in this country, & has entered into a contract here, under an assumed name, does not amount to a submission to the jurisdiction, or render him liable to be sued for breach of the contract.—*MICHELL v. 395. — Unauthorised act of agent.]—A vessel, the property of a foreign sovereign, was arrested in an action for damage by collision. Thereupon the local agent for the vessel in England, without the knowledge or authority of the foreign sovereign, instructed solrs., who procured the release of the vessel by giving an undertaking to put in bail, & also entered an appearance in the action unconditionally. Pltfs., on being informed of the facts, refused to allow the action to be dismissed:—Held: the action must be dismissed with costs.—THE JASSY, [1906] P. 270; 75 L. 397. —.]—A bill was filed against a firm in London, as agents of the Peruvian Govt., & receivers of moneys from that Govt., which were to be applied by them as trustees in accordance with the terms of the Peruvian Loan, 1862. The Peruvian Govt. was not made a party to the bill:—Held: the bill was demurrable for want of parties.—SMITH v. WEGUELIN (1867), 15 W. R. 558.

398. — Action not maintainable against agent.]—The bond of a foreign Govt. creates nothing but a debt of honour, & the promise contained in it cannot be enforced in the cts. of this country against English agents of the Govt. who have funds belonging to it in their hands, even though the Govt., after notice of an action by the bondholder against the agents, makes no claim to the funds. If such an action against the agent could be maintained, it would amount to an assumption of a jurisdiction over the foreign Govt. As the latter cannot be sued in the cts. of this country, neither can its agents be sued in the absence of the principals.—TWYXCROSS v. DREYFUS (1877), 5 Ch. D. 605; 46 L. J. Ch. 510; 36 L. 400. Service on ambassador—R. S. (d) Questions of Status.

401. Time when immunity attaches—Time of action brought or plea pleaded.]—To an action on an annuity deed deft. pleaded that at the time of making the deed he was reigning sovereign Duke of Brunswick & Luneberg; that the deed was made by him within his dominions; & that from the time of the making until action brought he had been & still was justly entitled to all rights, prerogatives, & privileges appertaining to him as such. On demurrer to the replication:—Held: the plea was bad for not stating that deft. was reigning sovereign duke at the time of action brought or plea pleaded. Semble: the defence that the contract was made by deft. in character of a sovereign prince would be a good plea in bar, but not a good plea to the jurisdiction.—MUNDEN v. BRUNSWICK (DUKE) (1847), 10 Q. B. 656; 2 New Pract. Cas. 213; 6 State Tr. N. S. 403; 16 L. J. Q. B. 300; 9 L. T. O. S. 532; 11 Jur. 801; 116 E. R. 248. S. C. Nos. 386, 391, ante.

402. — Territory annexed—Devolution of liabilities before annexation.]—Pltfs., residents in India, filed a bill against the Secretary of State for India praying that certain bonds upon which money had been lent to the then King of Oude in 1794 by persons whom they now represented might be declared to create a charge on the revenues of Oude, & that the Secretary of State for India might be declared liable to pay to pltfs. the amount due on such bonds:—Held: as the debt was not enforceable against the King of Oude before the annexation, it was not enforceable now.—DOSS v. 403. Sovereign prince—Also British subject.]—General demurrer to a bill filed by the Duke of Brunswick against the King of Hanover, as Duke of Cumberland & a British subject residing within the jurisdiction, claiming an account of property received by deft. as pltf.'s guardian under a settlement effected in 1833 by William IV., & the reigning Duke of Brunswick, purporting to act as the legitimate agnati of pltf., & in pursuance of authority entrusted to them by a decree of the German Diet:—Held: (1) (by H. L.) a foreign sovereign coming to England cannot be made responsible in the cts. here for acts done by him in his sovereign character in his own country, even though such sovereign be also a British subject residing within the jurisdiction; (2) (by LORD LANGDALE, M.R., no opinion being expressed in H. L.) such a foreign sovereign, being a subject of the Queen, is liable to be sued in this country in respect of any acts done by him as a subject, but acts done out of this realm, & doubtful acts, are to be attributed to his sovereign character, & it is for pltf. to show that the act complained of was done in the character of a subject.—BRUNSWICK (DUKE) v. Horse-race—Steward's decision.—Where the rules of certain races provided that all disputes should be settled by the stewards, & two stewards had been named, one of whom, on a dispute arising as to which horse was entitled to the stakes of a race, gave his opinion in writing that pltf. was entitled to them:—Held: pltf. could not recover the stakes on the award of that steward alone, although it appeared the other steward had stated he would acquiesce in whatever his colleague did; to make the sole award of the latter available, it must be clearly shown that both the disputing parties & the stakeholder also submitted to his sole authority.—MARRYAT v. BRODERICK (1837), 2 M. & W. 369; Murph. & H. 96; 6 L. J. Ex. 113; 1 Jur. 242; 150 E. R. 799.

412. — — —.]—Deft. was stakeholder of a race, which was to be decided by the award of four stewards. After the race the stewards met, but were unable to agree, two being in favour of pltf.'s horse & two in favour of another horse. In an action by pltf. to recover the stakes:—Held: (1) it was a condition precedent that there should be a decision of the stewards if practicable; (2) pltf. could not submit the question to the jury or recover back the amount of contribution.

Pltf. is not entitled to call evidence that his horse won, because certain persons have been appointed by all parties to decide which horse was the winner (MARTIN, B.).—BROWN v. OVERRURY (1856), 11 Exch. 715; 25 L. J. Ex. 169; 20 J. P. 454; 4 W. R. 252; 156 E. R. 1018.

Pier Co., & a member of the local board of health at M., in this latter capacity attended a meeting of the board & voted upon a question upon which the M. Pier Co. was interested:—Held: assuming deft. to have incurred by so doing the penalty imposed by s. 19 of the above Act, an action for such penalty could not be brought against him by a person who, not being a party grieved otherwise than as one of the public, had not obtained the consent of the A.-G. pursuant to s. 133.—BOYCE v. HIGGINS (1853), 14 C. B. 1; 23

PART IV. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 4.

c. Treasury—Amount of gratuity to be fixed by—Amount not in dispute.—T town clerk appointed by the Commrs. of C. having, on the passing of Local Government (Ir.) Act, 1898, become clerk of the C. Urban District Council, was dismissed by the council for "misleading the council." The clerk brought an action by civil bill against the council for £42 "gratuity" under s. 116 of the above Act:—Held: (1) the existence of the "misconduct or incapacity," which would be an answer to pltf.'s action, was a question of fact to be tried, the resolution reciting such misconduct or incapacity not being decisive of the matter; (2) the only jurisdiction of the Treasury was as to the "amount" in case of "dispute," & where there was no dispute the fixing of the amount by the Treasury could not be a condition precedent to a right of action; (3) in such case an action was the appropriate remedy, & an application for a mandamus would not be successful.—REILLY v. COOTEHILL URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (Q. B.) (1900), 35 I. L. T. 33.

d. Presbyterian Church committee—Infirm ministers' benefit to be approved by.—A fund established by the Presbyterian Church in Victoria called "The Infirm Ministers' Fund" consisted of rates paid by ministers, donations, bequests, & surplus revenue. All ministers were invited to become contributors. The revenue alone of the fund was available for allowances to beneficiaries. By r. 9 "all contributors seeking to become beneficiaries transmit" (sic) "their applications to the committee through their presbyteries, & the committee after due consideration & inquiry forwards their decision to the Assembly for final approval." Pltf. brought an action against defts. as representing the Church & the General Assembly thereof, alleging that he was a contributor to the fund; that he became incapacitated by infirmity & applied through the presbytery to the committee to be placed on the fund as a beneficiary; but that the General Assembly wrongfully neglected to put him on the fund; & he claimed that the Assembly be ordered to place him as a beneficiary upon the fund, & that those administering the fund should pay the moneys due to him:—Held: r. 9 constituted a condition precedent to the right of pltf. to bring an action, & it was necessary first to obtain the decision of the committee in pltf.'s favour & the subsequent approval of such decision by the General Assembly.—ELLIOTT v. JOHNSTONE (1902), 28 V. L. R. 259.—AUS.

MARSHALL* (1858), 2 H. & N. 755; 27 L. J. Ex. 235; 30 L. T. O. S. 334; 22 J. P. 210; 6 W. R. 365; 157 E. R. 311.

418. ——— Express provision.]—In an action against a member of a local board to recover a penalty for acting without qualification, the penalty being by Sched. II., r. 270, of the above Act, made recoverable by any person:—Held: (1) the provision of r. 70 that the penalty might be recovered by any person was an express provision to which the words in s. 253 "except as in this Act expressly provided" were intended to refer; (2) in actions for penalties under that rule the consent of the A.-G. was not necessary.—FLETCHER v. HUDSON (1880), 5 Ex. D. 287; 49 L. J. Q. B. 793; 43 L. T. 404; 45 J. P. 5, C. A.

421. Penal action—Consent of party to whom moiety of penalty is to be paid.]—The consent of the party to whom the moiety of a penalty is to be paid (not being pltf.) is not necessary in prosecuting a qui tam action.—v. SMITH (1815), 2 Chit. 392.

SECT. 3.—DEMAND OR REQUEST.

Actions based on a request, express or implied, by defendant: see CONTRACT.

SUB-SECT. 1.—DEMAND NOT A CONDITION PRECEDENT.

A. Demand on Defendant unnecessary.

422. General rule—No demand necessary—Whether debt payable on demand—Or at given time or place.]—Where a man engages to pay on demand what is to be considered his own debt, he is liable to be sued upon that engagement without any previous demand, & a tender, or readiness to pay, must come from deft. But if he engages to pay on demand what is not his debt, what he is under no obligation to pay, what, but for such engagement, he would never be liable to pay to any one, a demand is essential, & part of pltf.'s title. Further, the fixing a special time & place for payment does not make an actual demand at that time & place necessary, as part of pltf.'s title, in a case in which otherwise the demand would not be necessary, a tender or readiness to pay at the time &

PART IV. SECT. 2.

417 i. Consent of Attorney-General—Public Health (Ireland) Act, 1874 (c. 93)

—Where consent not necessary.]—The Comrs. of the township of B. laid sewage pipes along or in the bed of a stream which ran into the contiguous one of K., where, partly covered as a sewer & partly open in its course, it eventually joined a public main sewer which communicated with the sea. The K. Comrs. having filed a bill shortly before the passing of Public Health (Ireland) Act, 1874, to restrain the discharge of the B. sewage into their district or sewers:—Held: as the suit was not solely connected with the preservation of the public health or the suppression of a public nuisance, it was properly instituted by A.-G.'s sanction was unnecessary.—KINGSTOWN TOWNSHIP COMRS. v. BLACKBROCK (1876), 10 Eq. 160.—IR.

419 i. Consent of Local Government Board—Consent must be pleaded.]—In an action by poor law guardians for recovery of rates brought in one of the Superior Cts. against the immediate lessor of lands, pltf. must aver in their statement of claim that the Local Govt. Board has given its consent to the institution of the action.—CLAREMORRIS UNION GUARDIANS v. MARTIN (1882), 10 L. R. Ir. 342.—IR.

e. Consent of Advocate-General—Code of Civil Procedure (India)—Form of *consent.]—*The "consent in writing" of the Advocate-General or other officer appointed by the Local Govt. Board for the purpose required by s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure is a condition precedent to the institution of the suit to which such consent relates. If no valid consent is given before institution of the suit, the mistake cannot subsequently be rectified, unless by means of withdrawal of the suit with permission to institute a fresh suit. The consent in writing must be a specific permission given to two or more persons by name; a permission given to one appt. by name "& another" is not a sufficient compliance with the sect.—*GOPAL DER v. 423. ———.—]—In assumpsit an innkeeper declared & proved that debt, brought his horse to him & agreed to pay 6d. per day and night by way of livery. A debt of £20 was thus incurred. In his declaration pltf. pleaded licet scipius requisitus without alleging any request de facto :—Held : good ; for the ground of the action was a debt, in which case the law presumes a promise & the request is not part & parcel of the consideration, as distinguished from an action founded on a collateral matter, in which case a request must be expressly alleged.—HOSTLER'S CASE (1605), Yelv. 66 ; 80 E. R. 46.

For full anns., see INNS & INNKEEPERS.

424. ———.—]—In debt & detainee the bringing of the action & demand of the writ is a demand & request ; but in action upon the case & upon debt a request must be laid ; so if the request is made part of the contract, it becomes part of the debt & ought to be alleged.—HERN & STUB'S CASE (1627), Godb. 400 ; 78 E. 425. ———.— Unless special stipulation.]—A request for payment of a debt is immaterial, unless the parties to the contract have stipulated that it shall be made ; if they have not, the law requires no notice or request, but the debtor is bound to find out the creditor & pay him the debt when due (PARKE, B.).—*WALTON v. 430. ———.—]—In the case of money lent, payable upon request, with interest, no demand is necessary before action. There is no obligation in law to give any notice, though if the parties choose to make it part of the contract that notice shall be given they may do so. The debt which constitutes the cause of action arises instantly on the loan (PARKE, B.).—NORTON v. ELLAM, Nos. 434, 460, post.

433. ———.— Though joint maker surety.]—The rule that, where a man agrees to pay on demand a debt, not his own, demand is necessary to create a right of action against him, does not apply to the case of a joint & several promissory note in which one of the makers is known to join only as a surety for the other.—Re MAYOR, Ex p. WHITWORTH (1841), 2 Mont. D. & De G. 158.

Though payable with interest.—
Difference where payable at sight.]—A promissory note, payable on demand, is a present debt, & payable without any demand ; & Stat. Limitations begins to run from the date of it. The fact that the note is payable with interest makes no difference ; but it is otherwise in the case of a note payable at sight, because there, by the terms of the contract, it must be shown before action brought (PARKE, B.).—NORTON v. ELLAM (1837), 2 M. & W. 461 ; Murph. & H. 69 ; 6 L. J. Ex. 121 ; 1 Jur. 433 ; 150 E. R. 839. S. C. No. 430, ante ; No. 460.

Act, 1882 (c. 61),

ss. 52 (1), 56 (1).

436. ———.— Collateral undertaking.]—Deft., being indebted to pltf. upon two bills of exchange, signed the following undertaking : "I hereby debar myself from all future plea of Stat. Limitations in case of my being sued for recovery of the amount of the said bills, & of the interest, etc., & I hereby promise to pay them separately or conjointly with the full amount of legal interest, whenever my circumstances may enable me to do so, & I may be called upon for that purpose." In assumpsit upon this undertaking, to which Stat. Limitations was pleaded :—Held : (1) no demand was necessary before the bringing of the action ; (2) the deft. was not bound to give notice of his ability to pay ; (3) the time limited by the stat. began to run from the fact of his ability taking place, though pltf. had no knowledge of it.—WATERS v. THANET (EARL) (1842), 2 Q. B. 757 ; 2 Gal. & Dav. 166 ; 6 Jur. 708 ; 114 E. R. 295.

437. Enforcement of guarantee.]—P. borrowed a sum of money from a loan society of which he was a member, & debts., who were not members, joined him in a bond & promissory note for the amount. By the terms of the loan P. was to repay the money by weekly instalments. One of the society's rules directed the managing committee to inform the sureties when the instalments were four weeks in arrear, & empowered them to commence legal proceedings against the sureties. P. died in 1859, having repaid a portion of the loan, but being at the time of his death more than four weeks in arrear. Defts. were not informed of this till an action was brought in 1862 on the bond & note :—Held : the rules of the society formed no part of defts.' contract so as to afford them any ground of equitable defence.—*PRICE v. debtor.]—Pltf., drawer of a bill of exchange accepted by deft., agreed with deft. & the rest of deft.'s creditors to take a composition of 8s. in the £, to be secured by promissory notes to be given by deft. payable on days certain, certain debts to be assigned to the creditors, upon which they were to execute a general release. The assignment was executed, & all the creditors except pltf. received their composition & executed the release. Pltf. might have received his promissory notes if he had applied for them, but it did not appear that he had ever done so or that deft. had ever tendered them to him. Pltf. afterwards, when the days of payment of his promissory notes had expired, sued deft. on the bill of exchange:—Held: he was not precluded by the agreement from recovering.—CRANLEY v. j. Claim for rent.]—Several natives, tenants in common of a parcel of land, joined in a lease to deft. for the term of years, & the lease contained this covenant by the lessee: "It is agreed that the lessee shall have the sole & full right at all times to fell, cut, remove, etc., all timber & trees upon the land; & also that the lessee shall pay to the lessors as the price for such timber & trees a sum equal to £10 per acre, & will pay on account of the price a fixed annual sum of £1 per acre until the price shall have been fully paid; such fixed annual sum shall be payable," etc.—Held: the sum mentioned was not merely purchase-money for the timber, but was rent reserved upon an addition to the demise of the land; & it was not necessary as a condition to an action for recovery of the land for default in payment of such money to make the demand—TR by Property Law Act, 1908, s. 94.—TR PEWEE v. i. Dower—Claim for.]—Pltf. filed a bill to establish claim to dower in certain lands. Deft. admitted claim, asserting that he had not refused, but consented to the dower, and submitting that pltf.'s remedy was at common law. Before suit, pltf. made a written demand of dower.—Held: under the existing law no demand of dower was necessary.

—GRIEVE v. WOODRUFF (1877), 1 A. R. 617.—CAN.

441 i. Conversion.]—D. conveyed two horses to pltf. by bill of sale, D. retaining possession of the horses. During the continuance of the security deft. took the horses upon an alleged distress for rent against D. In an action of trover by pltf. against deft. for converting the horses:—Held: the property being in pltf., he was not bound under the plea of not guilty to show a right to present possession, nor was any demand of possession necessary.—COATES v. GOSLIN (1880), 20 N. B. R. 323.—CAN.

450. Contract to pay on demand.—Where the defeasance of a bond was to pay a sum of money on demand:—Held: pltf. must prove a demand before he could succeed.—CARTER v. RING (1813), 3 Camp. 459.

453. Contract to save harmless.—In assumpsit on a promise to save pltf. harmless of all damages & losses, etc., a declaration that deft. had not saved him harmless, but suffered him to be sued, whereby he was enforced to lay out divers sums of money, etc., is bad, & not aided by the verdict; for he ought to have alleged a special request, shown where, for what, & how much he was damnified.—*PALMER v. Collateral sum payable on demand.—It is not necessary to allege a request in a declaration in an action on the case for a debt; but if it is for a collateral sum, the day of the request must be alleged, and a general averment of "sæpius requisitus" is not sufficient.—*BIRKS (BERKS) v. to bringing the action; but where there is a covenant or promise to pay a collateral sum on demand—e.g., in a covenant by a surety for the principal debtor—request must be made before action brought, or before the money can be considered as owing by the collateral debtor.

tge. of Sept., 1807, contained a joint & covenant by a father & son to pay the £3,000 "on demand," & that they would, "in the meantime from the date hereof," pay interest on same at the rate therein mentioned. The father, who had joined as surety only, died in Nov., 1872, & his estate was being administered in an action commenced in Apr., 1880. No claim or s estate in respect of his liability on the covenant in the mtge. until July, 1889. The mtgee. now claimed to be let in as a creditor of the father's estate in respect of the amount due on the mtge., which the son was unable to pay.—Held: (1) the right of action did not accrue against the father's estate until July, 1889, when demand was first made; (2) mtgee. was entitled to come in & prove his claim against the father's estate without disturbing any dividends already distributed.—Re BROWN'S ESTATE,

k. Mortgage.—Notice demanding payment.—Deft. produced a mtge. in fee given by pltf. to C. By the mtge. the mtgr. was to remain in possession until 3 months' notice in writing, after default, demanding payment. The mtge. had been discharged by certificate registered a week after the commencement of the action, & it was contended that pltf. had no legal title when he began his suit.—Held: he might nevertheless recover, for no notice was proved to have been given as required by the mtge., & he was entitled to possession against mtgee.—SIDNEY v. HARCADISTE (1854), 11 U. C. R. 162.—CAN.

l. Contract to take property.—In an action for specific performance of an alleged agreement, the allegation was that deft., on selling land to pltf., promised to make them a profit of $30,000 within 60 days, or take the property himself.—Held: this was an alternative promise to make pltf. a profit within a certain time, or take the property himself. The action which had been taken on the first part, relating to the profit, should have been taken on the promise as a whole. Had the action been brought on the whole promise, pltf., before commencement, should have drawn up an agreement, or assignment, and tendered it to deft. for execution. Before pltf. could sue they must satisfy the ct. that they did put the option to deft., either to pay or take the property.—FLETCHER v. HOLDEN (1914), 27 W. L. R. 896.—CAN.

465.—*Pltf. advanced money to a borrower under an agreement providing for repayment within three months of the receipt of a written notice requiring repayment, & deft. guaranteed repayment of the loan "as per" the agreement. The borrower died, leaving no estate, & no letters of administration were taken out. No written notice requiring repayment was ever given by pltf. In an action against his surety.—Held*: (1) the giving of the notice was a condition precedent to repayment; (2) as the condition had not been performed, repayment never became due; (3) deft. was not liable.—*RICKABY v. n. Action against sheriff for overplus.]—In an action against a sheriff for the overplus of money levied under an execution, pltf. must prove a demand of the money before action brought.—RUGGLES v. BEIKIE (1833), 3 O. S. 276.—CAN.

o. Action against district council.—Account stated.]—Where a district council was sued upon the common money count on account stated.—Semle: (1) it was not necessary before action to give a notice to the treasurer of the district of the claims of pltf. against the district; (2) it was necessary, in order to a right of action, to aver a request from pltf. to deft. to pay over the money due.—HURON DISTRICT COUNCIL v. LONDON DISTRICT COUNCIL (1847), 4 U. C. R. 302.—CAN.

p. Action against Public Works Commissioners.]—In order to institute an action against the Commrs. of Public Works in Ireland, it was necessary, under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 33, s. 91, to apply to the Ct. of Exchequer for liberty so to do; but previous to granting such canal co. by way of ascertained damages a liquidated sum according to the time during which the obstruction should continue; and that in default of payment on demand made on the ry. co.'s treasurer, etc., the canal co. might recover the sum by action of debt or on the case. It was also enacted that no action should be brought for anything done or omitted to be done in pursuance of the Act, or in execution of the powers or authorities given by it, without 20 days' notice nor unless the action should be brought within 6 calendar months next after the act committed, or in case there should be a continuation of damage then within 6 calendar months next after the doing such damage should have ceased. The declaration stated that the canal, by means of defts.' works, became obstructed on a certain day & continued so obstructed for 99 hours next following, & that defts. refused payment when demanded:—Held: (1) an action of debt for liquidated damages incurred by obstructing the canal was an action for something done in pursuance of the Act; (2) the limitation clause applied; (3) the time of limitation ran from the last obstruction, not from the demand of payment.

The demand may indeed be necessary to maintain the action; but it cannot be considered as the cause of it (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—KENNETT & AVON CANAL NAVIGATION PROPRIETORS v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1845), 7 Q. B. 824; 4 Ry. & Can. Cas. 190; 14 L. J. Q. B. 325; 9 Jur. 788; 115 E. R. 698.

467. Money paid by mistake.—To enable a pltf. to maintain an action for money paid by mistake as money had & received by deft., notice of the mistake must have been given to deft. & a demand made (MARTIN & BRAMWELL, BB.).—FREEMAN v. JEFFRIES (1869), L. R. 4 Exch. 189; 38 L. J. Ex. 116; 20 L. T. 533.

468. Failure of consideration—Annuity void through informality.—The grantee of an annuity void on account of an informality in the deeds cannot maintain an action for money had and received to recover back the money until he has demanded fresh deeds from the grantor. But it is not necessary for grantee to tender back the old deeds previous to the commencement of such action.—WIDDLE v. LYNAM (1798), Peake, Add. Cas. 30.

469. Detinue.—Pltf.'s watch, which had been bought some years previously at deft.'s shop, was stolen from pltf., who gave information of the theft to deft. The watch was subsequently purchased by B., who sent it to deft. for an opinion as to whether it was a genuine antique watch. Deft. wrote both to pltf. & to B. telling them that it was the watch which had been stolen & inquiring as to their wishes in the matter. No answer was sent by pltf. to deft.'s letter, but a few days afterwards a clerk of pltf.'s solrs. called at deft.'s shop, & on being shown the watch demanded that it should be then & there handed over to him, and, on this request being refused, at once served deft. with a writ in detinue which he had taken out on pltf.'s behalf about two hours previously. Upon the facts given in evidence:—Held: (1) there had been no wrongful refusal on deft.'s part to return the watch to pltf. before the date of issue of the writ; (2) pltf. had no cause of action against deft. either in detinue or in trover.—CLAYTON v. LE ROY, No. 176, ante; No. 480, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 176, ante.

470. — Illegal pledge.—Under M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 50, a pledge by the master & sole owner of a ship of the certificate of registry, though for a good & sufficient consideration, is illegal & void; & an action will lie by the master & sole owner against the person detaining it, after a demand made upon him to return it for purposes of navigation.—WILEY v. CRAWFORD (1861), 1 B. & S. 265; 30 L. J. Q. B. 319; 4 L. T. 653; 25 J. P. 516; 7 Jur. N. S. 943; 9 W. R. 741; 1 Mar. L. C. 653; 121 E. R. 713, Ex. Ch.

471. Conversion—Where demand necessary.—Pltf.'s goods & servants were on land which deft. recovered in ejectment. Deft., on entering under the writ of possession, turned pltf.'s servants off the land & would not let them remain to remove the goods. There being no subsequent demand or refusal:—Held: the jury might find that there was no conversion.

Deft. had a right to turn off pltf.'s servants. Pltf. certainly had a right to the goods; but he should have sent some one with proper authority to demand & receive them; if deft. had then refused to deliver them or to permit pltf. or his servants to remove them, there would have been clear conversion (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—THOROGOOD v. ROBINSON (1845), 6 Q. B. 769; 14 L. J. Q. B. 87; 115 E. R. 290.

472. ——A. agreed to build an organ for B. and to fix it in the parish church of C. for £768 to be paid by certain yearly instalments, the property in the organ remaining in A. until the instalments were paid. The instalments being unpaid, A. demanded the organ of the vicar of C. and the churchwardens. The vicar kept the church door locked and refused to allow the organ to be removed, claiming a lien upon it. The churchwardens did nothing:—Held: the vicar was liable in trover, and not the churchwardens.

To entitle pltf. to maintain this action, it must be shown that deft. refused to deliver up the organ after pltf.'s right to demand it had accrued (WILLES, J.).—WALKER v. CLYDE & WREN (1861), 10 C. B. N. S. 381; 142 E. R. 500.

r. Action of account.—Pltf. declared that deft. was his tenant in common, & received in respect of rent the sum of £48 15s. more than came to his just share & proportion. s. Replevin—Wrongful seizure of goods.—Pltf. brought replevin for goods seized under a warrant of distress for water rates, & the writ alleged an unjust detention, but contained no allegation of an unlawful taking. Deft. denied the detention, & justified under a distress for water rates, to which pltf. replied disputing the liability:—Held: as there was no complaint in the writ of an unlawful taking, & no proof of a demand of the goods by pltf., he could not recover in this form of action.—*INGLIS v. C. Sufficiency of Demand.

(a) What constitutes Demand.

473. Commencement of action—Not sufficient.]

—Where a demand is necessary to give a right of action, commencement of the action is not of itself a sufficient demand (ABBOTT, C.J.).—SIMPSON v. ROUTH (1824), 2 B. & C. 682; 2 Dow. & Ry. M. C. 193; 4 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 181; 2 L. J. O. S. K. B. 163; 107 E. R. 536. S. C. No. 477, post.

474. Demand of different thing—Not sufficient.]

Under a contract to deliver a share in a co. on demand, a demand of the price of the share is not a sufficient demand to deliver the share.—GREEN v. MURRAY, No. 454, ante.

475. Demand without production of authority—Not sufficient.]

—In a case in which a demand before action was necessary, the demand relied on was made by a stranger, who, on being asked if he had authority from pltf. to make the demand, said he had a written authority in his pocket, but refused to produce it, saying there was no need for him to show it:—Held: the demand was not sufficient.—CHARINGTON (CHARINGTON, CHARRINGTON) v. JOHNSON (1845), 13 M. & W. 856; 14 L. J. Ex. 299; 4 L. T. O. S. 398; 9 J. P. 279; 153 E. R. 359.

(b) Evidence of Demand.

476. Letter referring to previous demand—Surrounding circumstances.]

—To an action of trover for wine, commenced Oct., 1833, Stat. Limitations was pleaded. The wine, in pipe, had been deposited by C. for pltf. in deft.'s cellar by her leave. C. became bkpt., & his assignees claiming the wine, pltf.'s solrs. warned deft. by letter in Dec., 1826, not to give it up to any person unauthorised by them. Deft. kept the wine, & bottled part of it at, or soon after, the end of 1826, at which time it was becoming injured by remaining in the wood. Afterwards, but it did not appear when, she consumed part of the wine so bottled. In Nov., 1827, pltf.'s solrs. again wrote to deft. saying they were instructed to proceed at law against her, & referring to a demand of the wine, stated in the letter to have been made upon her by them in the preceding Mar., but offered to indemnify her against the claim of any other person if she would deliver the wine within a week; in default of which they stated that the proceedings would be commenced. The application was not noticed. A subsequent demand & refusal were proved. The jury having found for pltf.; on motion to enter a nonsuit:—Held: on this evidence the jury was not bound to conclude that there had been a demand & refusal more than six years before action brought.—PHIL-

POTT v. KELLEY (1835), 3 Ad. & El. 106; 4 Nev. & M. K. B. 611; 1 Har. & W. 134; 4 L. J. K. B. 139; 111 E. R. 353.

477. Admission of demand—Plea of tender nct.]

—Where a demand is necessary to give a right of action, a plea of tender does not admit the demand.

If it had appeared that pltf. had demanded a settlement generally, & the tender had been made upon that, or if the tender had been made in pursuance of any meeting for the purpose of settling accounts, it might have superseded the necessity of any other demand (BAYLEY, J.).—SIMPSON v. ROUTH, No. 473, ante.

478. Presumption of demand—After verdict.]

—34 Geo. 3, c. 85, enacted, by s. 7, that a moiety of the money to be allowed to a clerk should be paid by the proprietors for the time being of one portion of a navigation; & by s. 9, that if any proprietor should neglect or refuse to pay the sums allowed & due to the clerk on demand made, etc., such sums might be recovered by action of debt in the name of such clerk against the proprietor, with double costs:—Held: as no right of action was given to the clerk against a proprietor except on demand & refusal to pay, it must be presumed after verdict on a count by the clerk against a proprietor without stating a demand, & nil debet pleaded, that a demand was proved. Qu.: whether such a count, not stating a demand, would have been good on special demurrer.—TIBBITS v. YORKE (1835), 4 Ad. & El. 134; 5 Nev. & M. K. B. 609; 5 L. J. K. B. 54; 111 E. R. 738.

—An arbitrator awarded that a party should on or before Mar. 23 next execute a certain indenture. No demand of execution of the indenture was made on or before that day, but was made at subsequent times, when execution was refused:—Held: an attachment ought not to be granted. Qu.: whether in the circumstances an action would lie against the party for his refusal to execute the indenture.—DOE d. t. Between solicitor & client.]—An intimation from a client to his attorney, who has collected money, that the client wishes it paid over, is a sufficient demand to support an action for money had & received. It is not necessary that the demand should be made at the attorney's residence or place of business, unless he objects on that ground.—GILBERT v. PALMER (1850), 6 N. B. R. (1 All.) 667.—CAN.

u. Demand without authority.]—A notice to an attorney demanding payment of money received by him in his professional capacity, signed by a person who was not shown to have had any authority to make the demand, & served by one who had no authority to receive the money, is not a sufficient demand to support an action for money had & received, though the person who signed the notice was afterwards the attorney in the suit.—ROBINSON v. PALMER (1851), 7 N. B. R. (2 All.) 223.—CAN.

v. Reasonable time before action.]—Pltf. deposited £100 with deft. as stake holder, to abide the result of a race to be run on Nov. 5 between the horses of pltf. & K.; the race was not decided, & on Nov. 11 pltf. demanded the money, which deft. refused to pay, stating that K. claimed it as the winner of the race: an action for the money was brought on Nov. 22:—Held: a reasonable time had elapsed between the demand & the commencement of the suit, & deft. was liable.—KINNEY v. STUBBS (1858), 9 N. B. R. (4 All.) 126.—CAN.

482. Demand sufficient—Plaintiff entitled at time of demand—Title acquired after wrongful delivery.]

—In an action for wrongfully depriving plffs. of goods it appeared the goods had been consigned to England from a colony. The bills of lading provided that the goods were to be delivered to the order of the consignor or his assigns. The consignor drew bills of exchange on the consignee against the consignment, & sold them with the bills of lading annexed, which he had indorsed in blank, to a colonial bank, who sent them to a bank in London with a hypothecation note empowering the London bank to sell the goods if the bills of exchange were not accepted or not paid at maturity. The goods arrived in England and were delivered to defts., a ry. co., to be delivered to the order of the shipowners. The consignee paid the freight & other shipping charges & accepted the bills of exchange, but before the bills became due he induced defts. wrongfully to deliver the goods to him without producing a delivery order from the shipowners. When the bills became due the consignee requested plffs. to advance the money & take up the bills. They did so, & received the bills of exchange & the bills of lading from the London bank, & ultimately obtained delivery orders from the shipowners in exchange for the bills of lading. When they presented the delivery orders to defts. they found that the goods had been already given up to the consignee, & they thereupon commenced the present action:—Held: (1) plffs. must be taken to be pledgees of the goods, & had a property sufficient to entitle them to maintain the action independently of Bills of Lading Act, 1855 (c. 111); (2) plffs.' right of action was not affected by the fact that at the date of the wrongful delivery they had not acquired their title to the goods.—BRISTOL & WEST OF ENGLAND BANK v. MIDLAND RY. CO., [1891] 2 Q. B. 653; 61 L. J. Q. B. 115; 65 L. T. 234; 40 W. R. 148; 7 T. L. R. 627; 7 Asp. M. L. C. 69, C. A.

483. Demand not sufficient—Goods in custodia legis.]—In an action of trover for a chaise it appeared B. had hired the chaise in question from plff. & had placed it at livery with deft., & that whilst it was in deft.'s possession in London it was attached by process out of the Sheriff's Ct. Plff. demanded the chaise, but deft., alleging that it had been attached, refused to deliver it:—Held: there was no evidence of a conversion by deft., the chaise being at the time of the demand in the custody of the law, & not of deft.—VERRALL v. ROBINSON (1835), 2 Cr. M. & R. 495; 4 Dowl. 242; 1 Gale, 244; 5 Tyr. 1069; 150 E. R. 213.

484. Persons jointly entitled—Demand to be made by all.]—If an award directs a document to be delivered to three persons they must all make demand at the same time or execute a power of attorney authorising one person to make it, so that deft. may know the demand to be made by their joint authority.—*SYKES v. 485. Persons jointly liable—Demand on some sufficient.]—In an action by A. against C. and D., as overseers, to recover a penalty under Disorderly Houses Act, 1751 (c. 36), it appeared A. & B. had given the requisite notices with respect to a disorderly house kept by E., & that E. was prosecuted & pleaded guilty, whilst F. & G. were overseers, & that after C. & D. came into office E. was sentenced. A. thereupon demanded in writing the penalty from C. & D., who refused to pay it:—Held: (1) the demand was properly made on C. & D., & not on their predecessors F. & G.; (2) it was not necessary to make any demand on the churchwardens as well as on C. & D.; (3) it was not necessary for the demand to be in writing; (4) no objection having been taken to the form of the demand either at the trial or on obtaining a rule nisi to enter a nonsuit, it was too late to do so upon the argument in support of such rule.—BURGESS v. BOETEFEUR & BROWN (1844), 7 Man. & G. 481; 8 Scott, N. R. 194; 13 L. J. M. C. 122; 8 Jur. 621; 135 E. R. 193.

SECT. 4.—NOTICE OF ACTION.

The Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61), s. 2 (c), repeals so much of any Public General Act as enacts that in any proceeding to which the Act applies notice of action is to be given. The earlier cases dealing with notice of action under Public General Acts are therefore omitted from this title, but will be collected, so far as they are still of importance, under PUBLIC AUTHORITIES & PUBLIC OFFICERS. Cases under Private Acts which are not affected by the above Act will be dealt with under their appropriate title.

SECT. 4.—ACTIONS IN RESPECT OF FELONIOUS TORTS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

490. Explanation & extent of rule.—Three different views have been held at different times & by different authorities, namely: (1) the private wrong & injury has been entirely merged & drowned in the public wrong, & no cause of action ever arose or could arise; (2) although there was no actual merger, it was a condition precedent to the accruing of the cause of action that the public right should have been vindicated by the prosecution of the felon; (3) there is neither a merger of the civil right, nor is it a strict condition of precedent to such right, that there shall have been a prosecution of the felon: but there is a duty imposed upon the injured person not to resort to the prosecution of his private suit to the neglect & exclusion of the vindication of the public law. This last view is the correct one.—MIDLAND INSCE. v. SMITH, No. 540,

491. —.—] Civil right merged in felony.—If a man beats A.'s servant so that he dies, A. has no action against the other for the battery & loss of service, because, the servant dying of the extremity of the battery, it is now become an offence to the Crown, being converted into felony, & that drowns the particular offence & private wrong offered to A. before, & his action is thereby lost (TANFIELD, J.).—HIGGINS v. BUTCHER (1606), Yelv. 89; 80 E. R. 61.

492. —.—] No action even after conviction.—Deft., on the prosecution of pltf., had been convicted of bigamy. Subsequently pltf. brought an action against deft. for inducing her to marry him, he being in fact married to another woman at the time, & recovered £200 damages. In arrest of judgment it was objected that the charge amounted to felony & that the action was merged in the felony:—Held: entry of judgment upon the verdict must be stayed till further order.—PROCTOR v. BURY (1742), Barnes, 450; 94 E. R. 999.

493. —.—] Limited to trespass or tort.—The law, proceeding on principles of public policy, has wisely said that, where a case amounts to felony, you shall not recover against the felon in a civil action, but that rule does not appear by any printed authority to have been extended beyond actions of trespass or tort, in which it is said that the trespass is merged in the felony. Whether this rule extends to any case after the offender is brought to justice or whether at any time it may be resorted to in an action between persons guilty of no crime are questions upon which I have formed no opinion (BULLER, J.).—MASTER v. MILLER, Nos. 550, 631, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 525, post.

495. —.—] Qualifications on rule.—The maxim that "the civil right is always merged in the felony" is not universally correct, & must be taken with qualification. The object of the rule is to cause public justice to have the prior claim to satisfaction; & whenever public justice has been satisfied, the private right becomes restored.—STONE v. MARSH, Nos. 501, 518, 534, post.

496. —.—] Prosecution condition precedent to action.—In an action of trespass against deft. for breaking into pltf.'s house & taking £3,000 in money deft. pleaded that pltf. procured him to be indicted & convicted for having burglariously broken into the house & feloniously taken same sum which was the said trespass. Pltf. demurred:—Held: the demurrer was good on the ground of a defect in pleading, since deft. had not pleaded precisely that he had been actually indicted & convicted, but only that pltf. procured him to be indicted & convicted.

Although deft. had been convicted of feloniously taking the goods, nevertheless the owner could have an action of trespass & recover damages; if a man took the goods of A. he could sue him civilly in an action of trespass, or by way of an appeal of felony, criminally, but if he brought an appeal of felony & another, can be maintained under the Act, when the wrong complained of amounts to a common law felony.—DUDGEON v. BURKE, [1847] 10 I. L. R. 10.—IR.

was nonsuited, he could not afterwards bring an action of trespass (DODRIDGE & WHITLOCK, JJ.).

If the goods were taken animo furandi the only proper remedy of the owner was by appeal of felony or by indictment; although, if he brought an action of trespass, deft. could not plead that he had stolen them or taken them animo furandi, for he cannot aver his own intention (JONES, J.).—*MARKHAM v. 503. ———.]—Whatever may have been thought in the early part of the seventeenth century, or even in Lord Ellenborough's day, it is now quite clear that the rule of public policy which, in cases of felony, admittedly requires the person aggrieved to institute criminal proceedings before pursuing any civil remedy against the felon, only suspends & does not require the destruction of the civil remedy. Before any question of public policy can arise it has first to be ascertained whether civil proceedings will lie at all. Most felonies involve a wrong less than a felony, & for such a wrong civil proceedings will lie when once the demands of public policy have been satisfied. But there may be felonies where the only wrong is the felony itself, & it may well be that the felony cannot be made the subject of complaint in civil proceedings (LORD PARKER).—*ADMLTY. COMRS. v. 505. ——— Prosecution by third person.]—The civil remedies for suing the felon, which belong to the person whose property has been feloniously taken, are suspended, after discovery of the commission of the offence, until the conviction of the felon in order that the dignity of the law may be vindicated by the prosecution & conviction of the felon. 506. Method of enforcement formerly doubtful.]—Though there are many dicta of high authority to the effect that, when there has been a private injury to a civil right which may also be the subject of criminal prosecution for felony, it is the duty of the person injured to prosecute for the criminal offence before he can bring action for the private injury, it does not appear by what means the duty is to be enforced.—*WELLS v. 512. Duty of judge—To nonsuit.]—Where in a civil action it appears that the wrong complained of involves a charge of felony, the proper course is not to proceed with the trial, but to prosecute for the criminal offence.

PART V. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 2.

512 i. Duty of judge—To nonsuit.]—In an action for seduction, pltf.'s daughter having sworn that the intercourse between her & deft. was accomplished by force, deft.'s counsel called for a nonsuit, the evidence establishing a rape, & the civil injury being merged in the felony. The judge refused to nonsuit, & told the jury that, even though they should believe that the only intercourse was accomplished by force, yet pltf. was not thereby precluded from maintaining her action. Pltf. having obtained a verdict, upon motion to set it aside:—Held: (1) in order to defeat the action, the evidence should be such as to satisfy the judge that deft. might properly be tried & convicted of a felony; (2) the evidence in the case being insufficient, the judge was right not to nonsuit; (3) the direction to the jury was wrong, & the verdict should be set aside, for the question whether there was sufficient evidence of a rape was a question for the judge, who, if he thought there was, should have nonsuited pltf.—HAYES v. SMITH (1825), Sm. & Bat. 378.—IR.

512 ii. —.]—In an action for debauching pltf.'s daughter & servant, it appearing that the injury was committed under circumstances of violence, which made it a proper case for a prosecution for a rape, & the judge having directed the jury to find for deft., in case they were satisfied that a rape had been committed:—Held: this was not the proper course; he should have nonsuited pltf.—QUINLAN v. BARBER (1825), Batty, 47.—IR.

512 iii. —.]—In an action for seducing pltf.'s daughter, when the evidence was such as to satisfy the judge that a rape had been committed, pltf.

In an action for an assault the evidence proved that deft. had committed a rape on pltf. The judge at the trial then considered the ground of complaint involved a charge of felony & nonsuited pltf.:—Held: the nonsuit was rightly directed.—WELLOCK v. CONSTANTINE (1863), 2 H. & C. 146; 2 F. & F. 791; 32 L. J. Ex. 285; 7 L. T. 751; 9 Jur. N. S. 232; 159 E. R. 61.

513. — Question for jury.]—In an action for money had & received, if it appears deft. received the money from pltf. to carry to a bank, & that, instead of so doing, deft. kept it, the judge will leave it to the jury to say whether deft. received it with intent to steal it & then feloniously converted it; & if the jury finds this in the affirmative, the judge will direct a verdict to be entered for deft. & that deft. shall be tried for the felony on this finding.—PROSSER v. ROWE (1820), 2 C. & P. 421.

514. — To strike out allegation.]—Semble: where an action is brought by a person injured by a felonious act against the person committing it, without having previously prosecuted him, the ct. will strike out the allegation of felony from the statement of claim.—APPLEBY v. FRANKLIN, No. 532, post.

515. — To proceed—Intervention of Attorney-General.]—Where at a trial for a civil injury pltf. proves facts which may amount to a felony, it is not the duty of the judge to nonsuit pltf. or to direct the jury that if they find a felony has been committed by deft. they must find against pltf. It does not lie in the mouth of deft. after the trial, while denying the felony, to question the judge's ruling on the ground that he should have nonsuited or so directed the jury. Semble: in such a case an application to the summary jurisdiction of the ct. to stay the action might be made by the A.-G. Qu.: whether by deft. himself.—WELLS v. ABRAHAMs (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 554; 41 L. J. Q. B. 306; 26 L. T. 433; 36 J. P. 710; 20 W. R. 659; 36 J. P. Jo. 260. S. C. Nos. 502, 506, 510, ante.

was nonsuited:—Held: the question as to the sufficiency of evidence of a rape in such cases was one for the judge, & should not be left to the jury.—GORDON v. FLUSKEY (1811), Arm. Mac. & Og. 155.—IR.

512 iv. —.]—In an action against a carrier for non-delivery of a package of money, pltf.'s agent proved that within a week after delivering the parcel to deft. he found that deft. had absconded; that he then sued out an attachment against deft. as an absconding debtor; & that, as he believed, deft. was at the time of the trial in gaol, charged with stealing the money:—Held: the evidence sufficiently showed a felony, as deft. upon it might, as a bailee, be properly convicted of larceny under C. S. c. 92, s. 55, & a nonsuit must be ordered.—LIVINGSTONE v. MASSEY (1863), 23 U. C. R. 156.—CAN.

516. — To stay action.]—An action for damages based upon a felonious act on the part of deft. committed against pltf. is not maintainable so long as deft. has not been prosecuted or a reasonable excuse shown for his not having been prosecuted, & the proper course for the ct. to adopt in such a case is to stay further proceedings in the action until deft. has been prosecuted.—*SMITH v. In the bkpcy. of the bank:—Held: the owners of the stock were entitled to prove against the joint estate.

Where pltf., who claimed to be a creditor for the amount paid by him on a forged cheque, had commenced a prosecution upon which a true bill was found & prisoner was arraigned, but prosecutor had abstained from bringing on the trial by a direction of the judge, who thought the ends of justice satisfied by sentencing prisoner for another forgery to which he had pleaded guilty:—Held: (1) pltf. had done enough to satisfy the rule of law; (2) his civil remedy revived.—*DUDLEY & WEST BROMWICH BANKING CO. v. 516 i. — To stay action—Felonious assault.]—Pltf.'s action was for damages for assault by deft. Pltf. also caused an information & complaint to be laid charging deft. with having committed a felony. The same assault was the basis of the action & of the charge of felony:—Held: the policy of the law required that before the party injured by any felonious act could seek civil redress for it the matter should be heard & disposed of before the criminal tribunal in order that the justice of the county might be first satisfied in respect to the public offence; & the judge should stop a civil action as not yet ripe for trial until the question of the felony should be tried & determined.—*TAYLOR v. 516 ii. —.]—In an action by an infant, suing by her next friend the statement of claim averred that deft. assaulted & beat pltf., an infant, under 16 years, & had carnal knowledge of her. Dft. moved to stay proceedings on the ground that the only cause of action disclosed by the statement of claim was a felony, for which deft. had not been prosecuted:—Held: (1) the statement of claim did not unequivocally or necessarily charge a felony; (2) the ct. in the exercise of its discretion ought not to stay proceedings. *Smith v. 516 iii. — Bankruptcy proceedings.]—In a case of embezzlement, the right of action is not merged in the felony, but is suspended merely. The ct. is not bound to interfere by stopping civil proceedings in every case of felony; & ought not to do so, unless there is a probability of criminal justice being defeated through them. The comrs. refused to allow the trustees to prove against bkpt.'s estate until they prosecuted him for embezzlement, upon which they preferred five several indictments against him, but failed in convicting him through their inability to prove an embezzlement of any specific sum according to the requisites of the law. Upon a second application of the trustees to prove the comrs. refused to admit their proof for any sums which were not included in the indictments:—Held: the trustees, having bonâ fide prosecuted the indictments against bkpt. & used their best endeavours to convict him of the felony, were entitled to prove for the whole amount of the sum he had embezzled.—*Re JONES, Ex p. The drawer then indorsed the bill to an innocent indorsee for a valuable consideration. Afterwards the bill was accepted, but it did not appear that there was an intent to defraud any particular person:—Held: (1) the facts found by the jury did not amount necessarily to a felony; (2) the making of the bill was not so criminal that the policy of the law would not suffer an action to be founded upon it; (3) the innocent indorsee might recover against the acceptor as on a bill payable to bearer; (4) perhaps also in such case he might recover against the acceptor as on a bill payable to the order of the drawer, or on a count stating the special circumstances.—GIBSON & JOHNSON v. C. Actions by or against Third Persons.

531. No duty to prosecute—Plaintiff not victim of criminal act.]—Where a master claims damages for loss of service, it is no defence that the act causing the loss was felonious, since there is no greater duty in pltf. than in any one else to prosecute for the felony (BRAMWELL, B.).—OSBORN v. GILLETT, No. 203, ante; No. 539, post.

Annotations:—Apld. Appleby v. Franklin (1885), 17 Q. B. D. 93. The principle upon which this rule is founded seems to be that the interest of the public requires that the law shall be vindicated, before the individual who is wronged shall be permitted to have recourse to a civil remedy. There is, no doubt, strong authority in support of the rule, but it only applies to the party injured by the felonious act of deft. This is clearly pointed out in Osborn v. Gillett. I think we are bound by the decision in Osborn v. Gillett (HUDDESTON, B.). Reid. Admiralty Comrs. v. S.S. Amerika, [1917] A. C. 38, H. L.
For full anns., see S. C. No. 263, ante.

532. — — —.]—The rule that no action is maintainable to recover damages caused by a felonious act until the person committing it has been prosecuted only applies where pltf. is the person to whom the wrong constituting the felony is done & deft. the person committing the felonious act. A master may maintain an action against a person causing injury to his servant by administering noxious drugs to her with intent to procure abortion without having previously prosecuted that person.—APPLEBY v. FRANKLIN (1885), 17 Q. B. D. 93; 55 L. J. Q. B. 129; 54 L. T. 135; 50 J. P. 359; 34 W. R. 231; 2 T. L. R. 170. S. C. No. 514, ante.

PART V. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 3.—B.

526 i. Failure to prosecute—Where prosecution impossible.]—Where the facts alleged disclose a criminal offence, as well as an actionable civil wrong, but deft. is not within the jurisdiction of the criminal ct. & refuses to submit to trial & abide the issue, a civil action will not be stayed upon his application pending the disposition of criminal proceedings.—A.-G. v. KELLY (1915), 32 W. L. R. 518, 771; 9 W. W. R. 83, 243, 492, 863; 24 D. L. R. 297, 660; 25 Man. R. 621, 696.—CAN.

533. — Trustee in bankruptcy of person injured.—S., a banker's clerk, committed a felony by embezzling his employer's moneys & absconded & was afterwards made bkpt. The bankers carried in a proof for the sum S. had embezzled & subsequently became bkpt. :—Held: (1) assuming the bankers were debarred from proving until they had prosecuted S., the obligation to prosecute did not extend to their trustee in bkpcy., even though the bkpcy. occurred after they had themselves tendered a proof; (2) the proof ought to be admitted. Qu.: whether a voluntary assignee of the injured person would be relieved from the obligation.—*Re SHEPHERD, Ex p. Annotations:—Consd. Midland Insee. v. Smith (1881), 6 Q. B. D. 561. The question was once more discussed in the case of Re Shepherd, Ex p. Ball, when the doctrine that it was a condition precedent to the enforcing a civil remedy, that the felon should first have been prosecuted, if it ever had any solid foundation, was finally exploded (WATKIN WILLIAMS, J.); Rooke v. D'Avigdor (1883), 10 Q. B. D. 412. Reid. Re Guerrier, Ex p. Leslie (1882), 20 Ch. D. 131, C. A.; Appleby v. Franklin (1885), 17 Q. B. D. 93. Mentd. Admiralty Comrs. v. S.S. Amerika, [1917] A. 534. Innocent third persons—Partners.—A. forged a power of attorney, under which stock, which stood in the names of certain trustees, was sold out & transferred to the buyers. The sum produced by the sale was carried to a fund belonging jointly to A. & his partners. Two of his three partners knew of the money thus produced being carried to their partnership fund, but did not know it was produced by a forgery. A. was afterwards convicted & executed for another forgery; no laches bank's agents, & were appropriated by F., who was afterwards executed for other forgeries. The partners of F. were ignorant of the fraud, but might, with common diligence, have known it:—Held: K. could maintain an action against the partners for money had & received on the grounds (1) the partners had no privity or share in F.'s felonious act, & there was no felony committed by them in which the civil right arising against them could merge or be suspended; (2) F. having been executed for a similar forgery before action brought, it became impossible without any default in K. that he should be prosecuted & convicted for this felony.—*MARSH v. Ct. has rightly explained the law in the case of Stone v. Marsh, to which I have already referred. The law must be taken with this distinction, that the rule of public policy, by which a person is prevented from asserting a civil right, where a felony has been committed with respect to the supposed subject of that right, applies only to proceedings between that party & the felon, or at most, the felon & the persons with whom he must be sued; & that, where the action is brought against a third party, who has nothing to do with the matter, the rule does not apply (POLLOCK, C.B.); *Wickham v. 539 i. Action when maintainable—Master.—Declaration under C. S. C., c. 78, by the administratrix, M., that deft. by his servant wrongfully & in violation of Temperance Act, 1864 (c. 18), in the township of A., there in force, furnished & gave W., while in deft.'s inn, intoxicating liquors, whereby he became & was intoxicated, & while so intoxicated did assault the intestate, whereby he was immediately killed:—Held: the Act gave the civil remedy, at any rate against the innkeeper, notwithstanding a felony might have been committed which had not been prosecuted for.—MCCURRY v. SWIFT (1866), 17 C. P. 126.—CAN.

539 ii. — Principal.—Under the terms of a contract between a contractor & a Local Board the President of the Board imposed on deft. a fine of £20 in respect of illegal excessive collections made by his agent. Deft. not having paid the fine, the President instituted a civil suit for the amount of the fine:—Held:

the suit was maintainable, although the acts of deft.'s agent amounted to a criminal offence & no criminal proceedings were taken against the agent. The doctrine that a person injured by a felonious act cannot seek civil redress without prosecuting the felon in the criminal cts. does not apply where a principal is sued in the civil cts. in respect of the wrongful acts of his agent.—*TALUK BOARD, KUNDAPUR, PRESIDENT v. SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

SUB-SECT. 1.—MAINTENANCE.

A. Definition and Scope of Term.

546. Definition.]—Maintenance exists when a man maintains an action in order to have a part or the whole of the thing about which the action is brought, or to have any other thing for the sake of maintaining the same quarrel, or if a man has no reason or no lawful pretext for meddling except his own bad will; in all these cases he is a maintainer

For full anns., see S. C. No. 638,;

547. — —.]—It is not lawful for a stranger to request any one to be of counsel for, say, my adversary; for he has no business to meddle in the matter (NEWTON, C.J., & PASTON, J.).—POMEROY v. BUCKFAST, Nos. 579, 651, 652, 668, 674, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 668, post.

548. — Champerty included.]—All champerty is maintenance, & where a party may have a writ of maintenance he may as well have one of champerty.—ROTHEWEL v. PEWER, No. 546, ante; Nos. 638, 649, 650, 654, 667, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 638, post.

549. Application of doctrine.]—The law of maintenance is confined to cases where a man improperly, & for the purpose of stirring up litigation & strife, encourages others either to bring actions, or to make defences they have no right to make (LORD ABINGER, C.B.).—FINDON v. PARKER, Nos. 644, 655, 661, 669, 692, post.

*Annotations:—Reid. Re Cambrian Mining Co. (1882), 48 L. T. 114; British Cash & Parcel Conveyors v. Lamson Store Service Co., [1908] 1 K. B. 1006, C. A.
For full anns., see S. C. No. 661, post.

550. — In ancient times.]—It is curious, and not altogether useless, to see how the doctrine of maintenance has from time to time been received in Westminster Hall. At one time not only he who laid out money to assist another in his cause, but he that by his friendship or interest saved him an expense which he would otherwise be put to, was held guilty of maintenance. Nay, if he officiously gave evidence it was maintenance; so that he must have a subpoena, or suppress the truth. That such doctrine, repugnant to every honest feeling, should be soon laid aside must be expected. A variety of exceptions was soon made, & amongst others, it was held that if a person has any interest in the thing in dispute, though on contingency only, he may maintain an action on it (BUTLER, J.).—MASTER v. MILLER, No. 493, ante; No. 631, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 631, post.

551. — Maintenance distinguished from instigating actions.]—A declaration alleged that deft. unlawfully & maliciously did advise, procure, instigate, & stir up T. to commence & prosecute an action against pltf., wherein certain issues were joined, as to which pltf. was acquitted:—Held: no cause of action appeared, the declaration not showing maintenance, as the action appeared not to have been commenced when deft. interfered, & not alleging want of reasonable & probable cause.—FLIGHT v. LEMAN (1843), 4 Q. B. 883; 1 Dav. & Mer. 67; 12 L. J. Q. B. 353; 1 L. T. O. S. 287; 7 Jur. 557; 114 E. R. 1130.

552. — Bankrupt cannot bring action for maintenance.]—A bkpt. cannot bring an action for maintenance on the ground that deft. incited & supported bkpy. proceedings in which he had no common interest, since the cause of action (if any) passed to the trustee in bkpy.; & such an action may be summarily dismissed upon summons as frivolous & vexatious.—METROPOLITAN BANK v. POOLEY (1885), 10 App. Cas. 210; 54 L. J. Q. B. 449; 53 L. T. 163; 49 J. P. 756; 33 W. R. 709, H. L.

PART VIII. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 1.—A.

548. i. 549. i. Application of doctrine—In modern times.]—The Acts against maintenance & champerty have fallen into

553. —.]—No person can bring an action for maintenance unless he has been a party to the proceedings maintained.

In bkpy. proceedings the trustee of bkpt.'s estate rejected two proofs. A solr. acting for an interested party induced the creditor to appeal, & undertook, if the appeal was unsuccessful, personally to indemnify him against the costs of the appeal. On appeal one proof for a sum of £68,295 was allowed, & the second proof was withdrawn by consent. In an action by bkpt. against the solr., claiming damages for alleged maintenance by the solr., the judge in chambers struck out the statement of claim as disclosing no cause of action, & as being frivolous & vexatious:—Held: the order appealed from was right.—BOTTOMLEY v. BELL (1915), 31 T. L. R. 591; 59 Sol. Jo. 703, C. A.

554. — Criminal proceedings.]—The doctrine of maintenance is confined to civil actions, & does not apply to criminal proceedings, the "maintaining" of which is therefore not illegal. Where a person gives a guarantee whereby he agrees to indemnify a solr. in respect of the costs of criminal proceedings to be undertaken against another person, & such proceedings are taken & costs incurred, the solr. can maintain an action on such guarantee, & the person sued thereon cannot set up as a defence that the agreement was void as being tainted with the illegality of maintenance.—GRANT v. THOMPSON (1895), 72 L. T. 264; 43 W. R. 446; 11 T. L. R. 207; 18 Cox, C. C. 100; 15 R. 290.

561. Maintenance no defence to maintained action.—A domestic servant having met with injury by accident in the course of her work, applied to her approved society under National Insurance Act, 1911 (c. 55). The society instigated proceedings by her for compensation under Workmen's Comp. Act, 1906 (c. 58), induced her to sign a retainer to their solrs., gave her a partial indemnity against costs, & found the out-of-pocket expenses. The cty. ct. judge held that the proceedings were taken by the woman, & awarded her compensation:—Held: (1) this was a finding of fact that could not be interfered with; (2) although possibly the society might be exposed to an action based on maintenance, the fact that the woman had been "maintained" by the society would be no answer to the proceedings under the latter Act.—SKELTON v. B. Facts constituting Maintenance.

562. Money given for maintenance—Not so expended.—An action may lie for maintenance, though the money given for maintenance be not in fact so expended. A. gives money to B. to distribute for a suit between C. and D. B. does not distribute it. A. is nevertheless punishable in an action for maintenance, because if B. had distributed it they had both been punishable.—ANON. (1452), Jenk. 101; 145 E. R. 72. S. C. Nos. 675, 718, post.

563. Agent acting for principal—Not maintenance.—If an action is commenced against a town by agreement the town can appoint some one to prosecute it & to disburse money for the purposes of the suit, & this is not maintenance.—WANLANCE v. PHILIPSON (1614), 1 Roll. Rep. 57; 81 E. R. 325.

564. Action in another's name.—No action lies against a creditor for suing his debtor, though the result is to draw all the other creditors upon debtor; but where a third person brings an action in the name of another & without his privity, this is maintenance, which is a tortious act, & an action lies.—THURSTON v. 567 ii. Unwilling co-litigant.—On a motion on behalf of deft. to strike case out of list on ground that appl., although in his name, was neither on his behalf nor in his interest, but was by churchwardens and others who had no interest in the matter sufficient to give them a right to intermeddle in the litigation, & were acting contrary to his wishes, the ct. disagreed on the question of indemnity against costs being maintenance, & the motion was held over.—LANGTRY v. a. Absence of common interest.—Pltf., who had been a shareholder of a mining co., agreed with deft., the principal shareholder of the co., to give him assistance for the purpose of enabling him to win a suit pending between deft. & another shareholder in relation to an option originally held by the co. In consideration of the proposed assistance, deft. agreed to pay pltf. a sum in cash in the event of winning the suit, & a further sum when a sale of the property was effected. At the time of the agreement pltf. had ceased to be a shareholder, & had no interest, legal or equitable, to justify his interference:—Held: the contract was illegal on the ground of maintenance.—CRAIG v. b. Contract for loan to carry on suit.—Specific performance was decreed of a lease, though the lease formed part of an arrangement whereby, as a consideration for the lease, pltf. was to lend deft. money to enable him (inter alia) to commence legal proceedings against the then tenant of the subject-matter of the intended lease.—PITCHAKUTTI CHETTI v. After commencement of the action, deft. gave to C. a bond by which he indemnified C. against all costs & expenses C. should incur or become liable to pay in the action or in any way relating thereto; but deft. could claim no right to nor interest in the penalty, should it be recovered. It was proved that C. had consented to the use of his name, but he would not have authorised the action but for the bond:—Held: (1) deft. & C. had no common interest in the result of the action for the penalty; (2) deft.'s conduct constituted maintenance, for which an action would lie at the suit of pltf.; (3) pltf. was entitled to recover as damages all the costs he had been put to in resisting C.'s action, amounting to a complete indemnity for every loss occasioned by the maintenance of deft.

To bind oneself after commencement of a suit to pay the expenses of another in that suit, more especially if that other be a person himself of no means, & the suit be one he cannot bring, is still, as it always was, maintenance; & for such main-

SUB-SECT. 2.—BARRATRY, ETC.

572. Barratry—Common barrator defined.—A common barrator is a common mover or stirrer up or maintainer of suits, quarrels, or parties, either in cts., or in the country, in cts. of record, & in the cty. hundred, & other inferior cts. In the country in three manners: (1) in disturbance of the peace; (2) in taking or detaining of the possession of houses, lands or goods, etc., which are in question or controversy, not only by force but also by subtilty & deceit; (3) by false invention & sowing of calumny, rumours, & reports, whereby discord & disquiet arises between neighbours.—CASE OF BARRATRY (1588), 8 Co. Rep. 36b.; 77 E. R. 528.

573. ———.]—A barrator is one who stirs up suits among his neighbours.—MAN'S CASE (1627), Palm. 450; 81 E. R. 1165.

574. ———.]—The word "barrator" is a word of art & should be employed where one is indicted for promoting suits & being a common oppressor of his neighbours. Proof that one is a common oppressor of his neighbour is good evidence of barratry.—R. v. HARDWICKE (1666), 1 Sid. 282; 82 E. R. 1107.

575. ———.]—If a counsellor at law encourage a man to bring false actions through malice & for purposes of oppression, he may be indicted as a common barrator.—R. v. — (1680), 3 Mod. Rep. 97; 87 E. R. 62.

576. ———.]—The ct. is bound to protect strangers against the injury arising from the stirring up of quarrels & lawsuits, & ought to repress every tendency to that offence, which is called, in legal language, barratry. The fact that a suit has been, in a great measure, instituted & possibly instigated by pltf.'s attorney is not sufficient. It is extremely difficult to draw the proper boundary between advice, encouragement, & instigation of a client to institute a suit, & all these may proceed from an earnest desire to redress the wrongs suffered by a poor & uninfluential person. If the suit be substantially that of the attorney, & the client can neither gain nor lose by it, the case would be very different.—WILLIAMS v. PAGE (1858), 24 Beav. 654; 27 L. J. Ch. 425; 30 L. T. O. S. 360; 4 Jur. N. S. 102; 53 E. R. 510.

577. Unlawful instigation of action—Without reasonable & probable cause.—A count in case charging that deft. unlawfully, maliciously, & without any reasonable or probable cause, & without having any interest in the suit therein mentioned, instigated A., a pauper, to commence & prosecute an action against pltf., by reason whereof A. did commence & prosecute such action, etc., whereby pltf. suffered damage, is good.—PECHELL v. WATSON, Nos. 719, 720, post.

Sect. 1.—In General: Sub-sect. 3.]SUB-SECT. 3.—CHAMPERTY.

581. Definition.]—Champerty is a species of maintenance, being a bargain with a plff. or deft. to divide the land, campum partiri, or other matter sued for between them, if they prevail at law, whereupon the champertor is to carry on the party's suit at his own expense (WILLIAMS, J.).—RADCLIFFE v. For full anns., see S. C. No. 587, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 607, post.

584. —.] Application to Prize Court.]—Champerty is the unlawful maintenance of a suit in consideration of a bargain for part of the thing, or some profit out of it, & is not confined to cts. of common law, but extends to the Prize Ct. An assignment to Navy agents of part of the subject of a prize suit then depending was held void as amounting to champerty.—STEVENS v. BAGWELL (1808), 15 Ves. 139; 33 E. R. 707. S. C. 585. Champertous agreements—Agreement to procure or give evidence.]—A contract by a person to communicate information on terms of getting a share of any property that may thereby be recovered by the person to whom the information is to be given, & nothing more, is not champerty or void. But if the arrangement is not merely that information shall be given, but also that the person who gives it, & who is to share in what may be recovered, shall himself recover the property or actively assist in recovery of it by procuring evidence or similar means, the arrangement is contrary to the policy of the law. In such a case the agreement is not the less contrary to the policy of the law because the property is in the hands of trustees or in ct., & no hostile action may be necessary to recover it, though the criminal offence of champerty may not have been committed.—REES v. DE BERNARDY, Nos. 592, 738, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 592, post.

586. —.]—Where a person undertakes to make out the title of another to an estate, and is to have a part of the lands as a satisfaction for his trouble, though the agreement for this purpose is artfully drawn in order to keep it out of the stats.

PART VIII. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 3.

581 i. Definition—No application to India.]—Although the English law of champerty does not apply in India, champerty or maintenance to be open to objection must have the qualities attributed to it by the English law, i.e., it must be something against policy & justice, something tending to promote unnecessary litigation, something that in a legal sense is immoral & to the constitution of which a bad motive is in the same sense necessary. To determine that, it is necessary to look at the substance & not merely the language of the instrument. The test to be applied is whether the transaction is merely the acquisition of an interest in the subject of the litigation bona fide entered into, or whether it is an unfair or illegitimate transaction got up for the purpose merely of spoil or litigation, disturbing the peace of families and carried on from a corrupt or improper motive. A fair agreement to supply funds to carry on a suit in consideration of having a share in the property if recovered ought not to be regarded as per se opposed to public policy. But agreements of this kind ought to be carefully watched.—GOSAIN RAMDHUN PURI v. GOSAIN DILMIR PURI (1909), 14 C. W. N. 191.—IND.

consideration of receiving a share of the property to be recovered, is not illegal if no suit is depending & no stipulation is made for the commencement of any suit. But it is illegal to agree for such a consideration to supply evidence sufficient to enable a person to recover property in case of its being necessary to resort to legal proceedings for its recovery.

T. died a bachelor & intestate, possessed of personal property, without any known relation, & administration was granted to the solr. of the Treasury as nominee of the Queen. Pltf. informed deft., who was unaware that he was next of kin to T. or entitled to the property, that he would give such information & evidence, if it became necessary for deft. to institute proceedings for recovery of the property, that by means of such information & evidence deft. should recover the property, provided he would enter into an agreement to pay pltf. one-fifth of the property so recovered. An agreement was entered into, proceedings were taken for recovering the property, pltf. gave information & evidence in pursuance of the agreement, & deft. recovered the property as next of kin to T., but failed to pay pltf. his agreed share:—Held: the agreement was void for maintenance.

592. ———.]—Deft., a next of kin agent, discovered that certain real estate in New Zealand passed on the death of an intestate to two coheirresses-at-law, widows in poor circumstances unacquainted with business affairs, aged 70 & 72 respectively. The property was of considerable value, & was in the hands of the public trustee at Wellington, New Zealand, where an order had been obtained in favour of another claimant of the property whose claim had been prosecuted by deft. After obtaining from this claimant a promise not to communicate on the subject with the coheirresses deft. had an interview with them at which he informed them that they were entitled to certain property, but he did not disclose its value. Deft. then induced them to sign two documents whereby they agreed that he was to have one-half of the property recovered. The women had no independent advice and were allowed no time for consideration. From the evidence it appeared that, though the documents did not so stipulate, deft. represented to the women & induced them to believe he would recover the property for them, & also that if they once signed they could never escape from the contract. The agreement was made in May, 1880, & was never repudiated by the two women, who both died in 1893. From time to time they received payments in respect of the property on the footing of the agreement. In an action brought by the respective legal personal representatives of the two coheirresses-at-law to set aside the agreement:—Held: the agreement was in the nature of champerty & void.—*REES v. The suit was brought, & deft. obtained possession of half the property. Pltf. sued to recover possession of the half on the ground that the agreement was illegal & void:—Held: the agreement was unfair, unreasonable, extortionate, & contrary to public policy within Contract Act (IX. of 1872) (India), s. 23, & pltf. was entitled to recover possession of the land in suit on payment of compensation for the advances made by deft. in the former litigation, with interest at 12 per cent. per annum.—*HUSAIN BAKHSI v. Pltf. advanced to R. the sum of £30 upon his signing an undertaking to pay to pltf. one-third of the amount of any damage he, R., might recover in an action against a certain ry. co. R. had already recovered a verdict against the ry. co., but a new trial had been granted. In the second trial he obtained a verdict for £130. Before pltf. gave notice to the ry. co. of his charge upon the verdict the co. had been served with a garnishee order nisi obtained by defts., who had recovered judgment against R. in default of appearance for £200 7s. The ry. co. was ordered to pay the sum of £43 6s. 8d., that being one-third of the amount recovered by R., into ct.; & an issue was directed to try the rights of pltf. to this sum against deft.:—Held: the agreement between pltf. & R. amounted to champerty, & was void.—*BALL v. 598. ———.—Bonus.—Pltf., who was in very poor circumstances, & pressed by creditors, was party to proceedings in the Probate Ct. in which he claimed to be entitled, as heir, to a share of real estate. He entered into an agreement with defts. for the advance of a sum of money, & for further advances to meet his immediate necessities & to enable him to prosecute his claim in the probate suit, & he agreed to employ the solr. named by defts. & to pay them a bonus of £225 in case he should succeed in establishing his claim, & he charged the advances, with interest at 5 per cent., & the bonus upon the property which he should recover. Pltf.'s title was established. He brought an action to redeem upon payment of the advances & interest, but without payment of the bonus:—Held: (1) the agreement savoured of champerty; (2) the bonus could not be recovered.

c. ———.—Agreement to divide proceeds of suit.—By deed of 1832 between B., V. & V.'s brother, C., reciting that to avoid litigation & expense in establishing their rights & to forward the prosecution of a suit then depending to recover certain property, & for the purpose of determining all questions & differences existing between the parties, they agreed, if the suit succeeded, to divide between them the whole of such property, & the estates were conveyed to V. & C. upon trust to carry on the suit & upon its termination to assign one moiety to B.; V. & C. meanwhile to be, as to a moiety, trustees for B., who covenanted to give his full & active personal aid & assistance in all matters relating to the suit. Afterwards V. & C. filed a bill of revivor & supplement against the original defts.:—Held: the contract under the deed of 1832 amounted to champerty; on that ground the bill must be dismissed with costs.—MOORE v. CREED (1838), 1 Dr. & War. 521 (C.).—IR.

d. ———.—Agreement to pay costs of proceedings.—Pltfs. having a judgment against B. & P., agreed with deft. that if such judgment, or any portion of it, should be realised from property pointed out by him, he, deft., should have one-third of the amount so realised: "all costs incurred to be payable by him if successful, the amount to be a first charge on any proceeds; the net balance to be divided." Goods pointed out by deft. having been seized, were found, on an interpleader issue, to be claimant's. Pltfs. thereupon sued deft. on the agreement:—Held: if such agreement extended to the costs it was illegal as being contrary to public policy, if not within the definition of champerty; & if it did not so extend pltfs. could not recover.—KERR v. BRUNTON (1865), 24 U. C. R. 390.—CAN.

e. ———.—Agreement to pay costs of election petition.—A political association may agree to pay the costs of an election petition without infringing the principles of law which prohibit champerty.—NORTH SIMCOE ELECTION, EDWARDS v. COOK (1874), 1 H. E. C. 617; 10 C. L. J. 232.—CAN.

If, then, a party to a champertous agreement must rely upon the illegal agreement to sustain an action, he fails; but if he, although a party to such agreement, can make out his case without calling in the agreement, the existence of the invalid agreement does not void the right of action he has without it.—*COVILLE v. i. ———.—Inadequate consideration for sale—Speculative suit.—A suit having been dismissed on the ground that a sale upon which it was based had been made for a consideration so inadequate as to support the belief that it was in the nature of champerty:—Held: the elements required to bring the case within the authorities on the law of champertous transactions in India were wanting. It was not a case in which an improper interest had been acquired in the unrighteous litigation of other people. The fact that a suit may be speculative does not render it champertous.—SIVA RAMAYYA v. EL. LAMMA (1898), 1 L. R. 22 Mad.

C., the eldest son of the testator A. & B., while out of possession, conveyed the land, & all his interest in it, as heir-at-law, to the lessor of ptfr. — Held: C.'s deed to the lessor of ptfr. was void, both at common law & by the above Act. Semble: the above Act applies in Ontario, as well to tenants for years, as to estates in fee.—*DOE d. It appeared that J. in 1842 "bought the possession" from H. & was succeeded by his son & by deft., who had cleared about 18 acres; & that in 1845 he had negotiated for the purchase of the fee.—Held: not sufficient to avoid the deeds under the above Act, for the evidence showed rather that the parties in possession did not claim the fee. Semble: the objection at all events could have applied only to the 18 acres cleared.—*SMITH v. In 1841, while M., who had entered on the land, was in possession, King's College conveyed it to G. In 1849 G. conveyed to the wife of M., who signed the conveyance though not a party to it. In an action by the successors in title of M.'s wife to recover possession, dofts claiming title through M. alleged that the conveyance to G. in 1841, the grantor not being in possession, was void under the above Act.—Held: (1) the possession of M. begun before the grant from the Crown, M. could not avail himself of the above Act, as he would have to establish disclaim of the grantor, & the Crown could not be disclaimed; nor would it avail against the patentee, as the original entry, not being tortious, the possession would not become adverse without a new entry; (2) if the possession began after the grant, the deed to G. in 1841 was not absolutely void under the Act, but only void as against the party in possession, & M. being in possession, a conveyance to him would have been good under s. 4, & the deed to his wife, a person appointed by him, was equally good.—*WEBB v. r. — Sale by administrator. — A sale by an administrator of a "pretended right of title" to premises of a term in which the intestate died possessed, but of which the administrator never had possession, is within the prohibition of the above Act. A., possessed of a term, died in 1828. B., who had during A.'s life resided on part of the premises, at A.'s death claimed & took possession of the whole & retained it till he died in 1829, having by his will devised the premises to C., who remained in undisturbed possession until 1841, when A.'s next of kin took out letters of administration & sold his right or title in the premises to D. — Held: the conveyance was void by the Act.—*DOE d. The indenture was executed accordingly. Neither A. nor any person under whom he claimed had had possession of the premises or the reversion or remainder thereof, or taken the rents or profits within a year before such execution. B. was not the heir of S. & had no interest in her life or death, unless by the above agreement. Soon after the mtge. M. gave to B. a bond for a deed, on certain conditions to be fulfilled by B., who took possession. In 1850, ptfr. went in under an agreement for purchase from B., who had not fulfilled the conditions of his bond. In 1851, deft. took an assignment of B.'s mtge., & in same year he claimed before the heir & devisee commission, the usual affidavit of ignorance of any adverse claim, & obtained a patent. Ptfr. brought an action founded (inter alia) on the above Act in respect of the buying M.'s pretended right:—Held: admitting ptfr.'s allegations to be true, no ground of action would be shown.—*SHIELDS v. 601. Assignment of right to sue—For fraud.]—

An assignment of a bare right to file a bill in equity for a fraud committed on the assignor is contrary to sound policy & void. Cts. of equity will give no encouragement to contracts which savour of maintenance or champerty, though such contracts may not be within the strict legal limits assigned to those offences.

Where A., who was entitled to certain property under his father's will, for a valuable consideration assigned the whole of that property (except a reversionary interest in the funds) to B., his father's exor., & afterwards assigned the whole of his interest under his father's will (including the reversionary interest) to C.:—Held: C. could not maintain a bill to set aside the first assignment on the ground of fraud committed by B. against A., the latter refusing to join as pltf. in the suit.—*PROSSER v. 602. — For damages.]—The law of champerty & maintenance is not affected by Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25 (b); a mere right of action to recover damages for breach of contract, or damage arising by parties out of possession to proceed in a ct. of equity to recover & to divide lands, etc., when recovered, is contrary to the above Act.—CHOLMONDELEY (EARL) v. CLINTON (LORD) (1821), 4 Bli. 1.—ENG.

a. — Lease of tithes—Involving enforcement of payment.]—Agreement to lease the rectorial tithes of a parish, including the tithes of 90 acres supposed to be within the parish, but which had not paid tithes to the lessor during his incumbency, with a stipulation that the intended lessee would, within a given time, take such legal proceedings for the recovery of the tithes of the 90 acres as his counsel should advise:—Held: not within the above Act.—WHITE v. GARDNER (1835), 1 Y. & C. (Ex.) 385.—ENG.

b. — Sale of pretended right.]—A testator died, leaving a will, by which he directed that his debts should be paid as soon as practicable after his decease, & gave & bequeathed to his extrix. & exors. all his real & personal property in trust, to sell, etc., such tracts or parcels of land as might be necessary for carrying his intention into effect. He then gave the residue of his real & personal property to his wife during her life, & after her death to such of his children as might then be living—share & share alike. About 20 years after his death his widow (who had married again) & W., for three of the children then living, conveyed a lot to R. in fee; & R. conveyed to L. who was in possession when deft. took his deed. About same time the widow & one of the sons conveyed another lot to pltf., who was in possession when deft. took his deed for ths lot. About 16 years after these deeds were made deft. took a deed of bargain & sale of both lots from all the

*ry.]—*A., owner of lands, conveyed to pltf. by deed, which was never recorded; pltf. conveyed to others, who registered their deeds; deft., A.'s son & heir-at-law, subsequently released to S., the release being recorded; deft. had never been in possession, but the persons to whom pltf. conveyed were. Pltf. sued deft. for the penalty under the above Act for selling a pretended right:—Held: (1) 14 & 15 Vict. c. 7 would not apply in deft.'s favour, for that only allowed the sale of a right of entry, & as his father's deed was binding upon him, he had no such right; (2) by the registration of the deed to S. the conveyance to pltf. became fraudulent in its inception, & he could not recover. Semble: the effect of the later Act was to repeal the earlier Act, & not merely to permit the sale of a right of entry subject to the penalty.—BABY v. L. WATSON (1855), 13 U. C. R. 531.—CAN.

d. — — Penal action—Compromise.]—Leave was given to compromise a penal action under the above Act for buying pretended titles, on paying the Crown's share into ct.—MAY v. DETTRICK (1836), 5 O. S. 77.—CAN.

e. — — When buyer not liable.]—The true owner of an estate is not liable to the penalty under the above Act when the person in possession of the land is in privity with him, either as an overholding tenant, or as a person let

In July, 1898, W. sold the ship to defts., the building of the ship, owing to strikes, being uncompleted, together with the benefit of the contract with pltfs. as & from the date of delivery of the ship. In an action by pltfs. for work & labour done, defts. counterclaimed for damages for the improper way in which the work had been done:—Held: (1) the claim for damages was a legal chose in action, & was assignable; (2) defts. were entitled on the counterclaim to such damages as W. would have been entitled.—EARLE'S SHIPBUILDING ENGINEERING CO. v. ATLANTIC TRANSPORT CO. (1899), 43 Sol. Jo. 691.

605. — — — Right to proceed with winding-up petition.]—A creditor of a co. being unable to obtain payment of his debt presented a petition to wind up the co. Before the petition was heard he sold his debt & the right to proceed with the petition to a shareholder of the co., who obtained leave to amend the petition by making himself a co-petitioner:—Held: (1) the sale of the right to proceed with a winding-up petition ought not to be allowed; (2) the petition must be dismissed.—RE PARIS SKATING RINK CO. (1877), 5 Ch. k. Agreement to sue & divide proceeds recovered.]—A claim was assigned to pltf. by a document authorising assignee to sue & recover & out of proceeds, first to pay costs, and then divide what remained equally between assignor & assignee:—Held: champerty of the plainest kind. When an action is brought by an assignee in his own name & the assignment is shown to be champertous then the ct. treats it as "invalid" and void for all purposes, & the ct. refuses its aid to a pltf. whose title is tainted with illegality.—COLVILLE v. SMALL, p. 72, ante.—CAN.

601 i. Assignment of right to sue—For arrears of rent.]—A. seised of lands in 1783 demised part to S., & afterwards died, leaving four daughters, co-heiresses. E., one of the co-heiresses, in 1794, demised her one-fourth part of the lands not demised to S., to N. J., son of E., died in 1820, leaving a widow & a son, C., who was at the time of his father's death abroad, & never returned to Ireland. The widow, in 1822, by a deed reciting that she was devisee of all J.'s property, conveyed the reversion on N.'s lease to P. In 1865, C. by deed, assigned his interest in the lands, & all arrears of rent due to T.:—Held: this assignment, as far as it related to the arrears, was bad, as tending to maintenance.—TWISS v. NOBLETT (1869), 1 R. 4 Eq. 64.—IR.

to have a deed which had been executed by bkpt. prior to his bkpcy., purporting to be an absolute conveyance by bkpt. to deft. of the equity of redemption in certain mtged. freehold & leasehold hereditaments, set aside, so far as it purported to be an absolute conveyance, & a declaration that the deed ought only to stand as security for the sum actually paid by deft. Subsequently an agreement was come to between C. & S., with the sanction of the committee of inspection, that C. should purchase all the trustee's right in the property, & a deed was executed to carry that agreement into effect. C. thereupon obtained, under R. S. C., O. 50, r. 1, an order ex p. appointing him pltf. in place of S. On motion by deft. in the action to discharge the last-mentioned order on the ground that the sale by S. was in reality the sale of a right to bring an action & within the rule against champerty & maintenance:—Held: (1) the right to bring the action was part of the "property" of bkpt. within Bkpcy. Act, 1869 (c. 71), s. 4; (2) as such "property" it was by force of s. 17 vested in the trustee; (3) whether B. himself could have assigned the right or not, his trustee was by s. 25 (6) empowered to sell it; (4) the rule against champerty & maintenance had no application.—SEAR v. LAWSON, CHATTERTON v. LAWSON (1880), 15 Ch. D. 426; 49 L. J. Bcy. 69; 42 L. T. 893; 28 W. R. 929, C. A.

Annotations:—Apld. Guy v. Churchill (1888), 40 Ch. D. 481. Both maintenance & champerty are founded on the same principle or policy of law, viz., the tendency of the transactions to prevent the course of justice. But adopting the principle of Secar v. Lawson, I do not think I am carrying it beyond its true limits in holding that it covers the case before me. It would be too fine a distinction to hold that the arrangement is void, merely because the bkpt.'s estate gets back part of the money that may be recovered in the action (CHITTY, J.). *Fold. 607. ———.]—Pltfs., a trading firm claiming to have accounts between them & defts., their brokers, reopened, became bkpt. pending the action, & their right of action was assigned by the trustee in bkpcy., with the approval of the committee of inspection, to F., on the terms that F. should continue the action at his own risk & expense, & that one-fourth of whatever should be recovered in the action by F. should be paid to the trustee in bkpcy., & the remaining three-fourths to be retained by F. F. was himself a creditor in the bkpcy. & was acting as trustee for himself & other creditors, including pltfs.' solrs., on the record, & pltfs.' solrs. were acting for F. in the continuation of the action:—Held: (1) having regard to the relationship between the parties, the assignment was not champertous; (2) it was immaterial that some of the creditors were to carry on the action at their own risk & expense, & to take a larger share of the fruits of the action than they would otherwise have done.—GUY v. CHURCHILL (1888), 40 Ch. D. 481; 58 L. J. Ch. 345; 60 L. T. 473; 5 T. L. R. 149; 37 W. R. 504. S. C. No. 583, ante.

A. being called as a witness for pltfs. was objected to, & thereupon an indenture was executed by A. after commencement of the action whereby (after reciting that pltfs. had effected the policy; that A., B., C., & D. were the persons interested; that actions had been commenced in the names of pltfs.; & that, they being desirous of an indemnity against the costs, the ct. of C. P. had ordered A., B., C., & D. to indemnify & that L. & R. had agreed to do it) A., B., C., & D., in consideration thereof & of 10s., assigned to L. & R. all their interest in the policy & all benefit to be derived therefrom, & all moneys to be recovered in the said actions, to & for their own exclusive use & benefit:—Seemle: the assignment to L. & R. was illegal as maintenance.—*BELL v. 614. Purchase of estate for purpose of setting aside previous agreement.]—The purchase of an estate for the purpose of setting aside a previous agreement affecting the property on the ground of fraud partakes of the nature of champerty, & will not be enforced in equity.

In 1861 pltf. was colonel & deft. M. lieutenant-colonel of a volunteer rifle corps. Adjoining the premises occupied by deft. C. was a leasehold piece of land convenient for the regiment which M. requested C. to purchase on its behalf, & C. bought it in 1861 for £500. In March, 1862, C. wrote to M. stating that he was willing to give the land to the regiment for the whole of the term held by him; that the regiment was to observe all the covenants of the lease, to pay a merely nominal rent, & to level & prepare the ground suitable for drill. M. signed this letter & had it stamped as if it were a mutual agreement, & paid the nominal rent for one year in advance. In June, 1864, he also executed a deed purporting to assign the land to himself & deft. H.

were come back to the hands of the assignor.—BOODHUN SINGH v. MUSSAMUT LUTEEFUN (1874), 22 W. R. 535.—IND.

610 v. Kinship immaterial.—A bill to enforce a title acquired by conveyance from a person out of possession in consideration of money advanced, & to be advanced, on suits respecting the recovery of the estate, was dismissed, as being a case of clear & distinct maintenance, although the grantor & grantee were first cousins.—BURKE v. GREENE (1814), 2 Ball & B. 517.—IR.

611 i. Sale of legacy.—A., entitled to one moiety of a testator's property, assigned it:—Held: a suit by the assignee against the exor., for an account of what had been lost by his wilful default, would not be open to the objection of champerty.—SCULLY v. DELANY (1840), 2 I. Eq. R. 379 (C.).—IR.

1. Assignment of mortgage for purpose of setting aside prior mortgage.—Where an assignment was executed by a puisne incumbrancer to another, for the purpose of filing a bill to impeach a prior mtge. for fraud, & which bill was filed; the ct. dismissed the bill with costs, it being evident that the alleged fraud was the ground upon which pltf. principally relied, & the agreement between the

as trustees for the regiment. Shortly before this date pltf. & C. had entered into another agreement by which the former was to purchase of the latter the said lands without reservation, except as to the disputed right claimed by M. in respect of the letter of March, 1862, & was to be at liberty to use C.'s name in all proceedings necessary for setting aside that letter & any rights that might be claimed under it:—Held: the agreement, which in effect was the purchase of a right by pltf., to complain of the alleged fraud committed against C. savoured too much of maintenance for the ct. to enforce it.—DE HOGHTON v. MONEY (1866), 2 Ch. App. 164; 15 L. T. 403; 15 W. R. 214, C. A. S. C. No. 745, post.

615. Assignment of right to claim for breach of trust.]—The tenant for life of a trust estate mtged. it, & it was sold by the mtgee. After the sale the purchaser & mtgee., for a nominal consideration, assigned to the tenant for life certain alleged arrears of interest & profits of part of the trust fund, which, as pltf. alleged, the trustees had made in excess of the interest for which they had accounted. A bill filed against the trustees on the title conferred by this assignment for an account of their profits was dismissed with costs.—HILL v. BOYLE (1867), L. R. 4 Eq. 260. S. C. No. 746, post.

616. Sale of company's undertaking—Partly to raise fund for litigation—Partly to secure continued working.]—A co. (which was being wound up under supervision of the ct.) was desirous of bringing an action against F. to rescind a contract for purchase of the co.'s mine, & to recover the purchase-money of £70,000 from F. The co. had no funds wherewith to prosecute the litigation. A new co. was formed, & an agreement under seal entered into between the old & new co. whereby the mine & plant were assigned to the new co., who were to provide money, not exceeding £30,000, partly for the purposes of the litigation against F. & partly to prevent deterioration by working the mine. The deed contained a clause empowering the liquidator of the old co. to repurchase the mine & plant. This clause was inserted in order that, if the action against F. succeeded & he repaid the £70,000, the liquidator might be in a position to reconvey the mine to him. The deed was subsequently confirmed, not by a special resolution, but by a resolution at one meeting passed by a large majority of shareholders. F. took out a summons for leave to bring an action to impeach the deed, & there was a cross-summons by the liquidator to obtain the sanction of the ct. to the deed:—Held: (1) the essence of the transaction was that it was a mode of converting the mines & plant into money to be used partly for the litigation & partly to prevent deterioration by working the mine; (2) the deed was not bad on the ground either of maintenance or of champerty.—RE CAMBRIAN MINING CO. (1882), 48 L. 615 i. Assignment of right to claim for breach of trust.]—An heir-at-law supposed to have a right to call trustees to account & to impeach sales made by them, assigned his interest to a third person; the consideration only to be paid in case of success:—Held: a merely speculative purchase of this kind savouring of maintenance or champerty could not be enforced in equity.—*LITTLE v. should recover the amount of the debts from deft., he would pay over to them the amounts of their respective debts, or so much thereof as he might be able to realise after payment of the costs necessarily incurred by him. Notice in writing of the assignment was given to deft. It appeared that pltf. & deft. were co-directors of a co., & pltf., being dissatisfied with the action of deft. as director of the co., took the assignment with a view to procuring an adjudication of bkpy. against deft., & so getting him removed from the directorate of the co.:—Held: the assignment of the debts was not invalid as savouring of maintenance or being otherwise against public policy.—*FITZROY v. 618. Purchase of lands in litigation.]—A person who purchases lands in litigation for good consideration, & not for the purpose of maintaining their previous owner, is not guilty of champerty.—(1347), Y. B. 21 Ed. 3; Hil. 10 B. 33; 2 Rol. Abr. 113 b.

619. —.]—The mere fact of purchasing lands in litigation was held by all the sergeants to constitute the purchaser guilty of champerty.—ANGUS (EARL) v. — (1376), 50 Lib. Ass., p. 323, pl. 3.

620. — Pending actions relating to property purchased—Specific performance.]—A. & B., having jointly contracted for the purchase of an estate, submitted all matters in difference between them to arb., & the arbitrator awarded that they should join in authorising a sale of their interest in the estate. Although a suit was depending against them for the specific performance of the contract for purchase, & it was yet undetermined whether the vendors could make a good title, no report having been made under an order of reference as to the title in that suit, specific performance of the award was decreed. An award directing the sale of such an interest is not objectionable under the doctrine of maintenance & champerty.—WOOD v. GRIFFITH (1818), 1 Swan. 44; 1 Wils. Ch. 34; 36 E. R. 291.

621. — Rent — Dilapidations.]—An agreement between the seller & purchaser of an estate that the purchaser, bearing the expense of certain suits commenced by the seller against an occupier for arrears of rent, should have the rent to be so recovered, & any sum that could be recovered for dilapidations, & that the purchaser, bearing the expenses, might use the seller's name in actions which he might think fit to commence against the occupier for arrears of rent or dilapidations, is not void as savouring of champerty or maintenance.

There is no champerty in an agreement to enable the bona fide purchaser of an estate to recover for rent due or injuries done to it previously to the purchase (per Cur.).—WILLIAMS v. PROTHEROE (1829), 5 Bing. 309; 3 Y. & J. 129; 2 Moo. & P. 779; 180 E. R. 1080, Ex. Ch.

An assignment, part of a bona fide transaction the object of which was to transfer to pltf. the property of the assignor with all the incidents which attached to it in his hands, seems to be very far removed from being a transfer of a mere right of litigation. This conclusion appears to be in accordance with the decision in Williams v. Protheroe, where it was held in the Exch. Ch. that there was no champerty in an agreement containing provisions for the purpose of enabling the bona fide purchaser of an estate to recover for rent due or injuries done to it previously to the purchase (STIRLING, L.J.). Refd. *Defries v. 623. Purchase of interest subject of suit—Indemnity.]—It is not maintenance to purchase an interest which is the subject of a suit; but if the purchaser gives an indemnity against all costs that have been or may be incurred by the seller in the prosecution of the suit the transaction amounts to maintenance.

After decree in a creditor's suit pltf. sold a debt which he had proved in the cause, & took from the purchaser a deed of indemnity against all expenses he had incurred & might incur in the suit, & his name continued to be used as pltf. in the suit, together with that of purchaser:—Held: (1) this transaction amounted to maintenance; (2) the bill must, upon that ground, be dismissed.—*HARRINGTON v. 624. —.]—Several suits at law & in equity, to determine the title to certain lands, were pending between persons claiming to be mtgees. of such lands & one who claimed the same lands in fee by title, under a settlement paramount to the mtge. Pltf. claiming to be a subsequent mtgee. of the same lands, contracted to purchase the interests of the prior mtgees. in their principal moneys, arrears of interest & securities, & to pay the purchase-moneys at certain stipulated times, all of which (except an annuity) were to be paid in 1843, & to pay & indemnify the prior mtgees. against the past & future costs of the suits & proceedings. In a suit for specific performance of the agreement:—Held: pltf. being interested, as second mtgee., in the subject of the suits, the contract was not to be deemed champerty.—*HUNTER v. 6271. Debt—Assignment without immediate consideration for half sum recovered.]—Pltf. brought an action against deft., an administratrix, claiming to be a creditor of the estate in respect of two notes. An action had been brought previously against the administratrix in respect of these notes, in which she had successfully pleaded the full administration of the estate. Pltf., with knowledge of this action & its result, had agreed to buy the notes,

& to pay for them half the amount realised.—Held: pltf. had obtained the notes merely to get the right to sue into his hands & had agreed to divide whatever was recovered; he could not prove for the notes.—Re CANNON, OATES v. CANNON (1886), 13 O. R. 70.—CAN.

633. Purchase of undisputed right—Subsequently discovered to be disputed.]—Though the ct. will not enforce a contract for the purpose of a litigated right, yet if a lawful contract for the purchase of an undisputed right be made, and the necessity for litigation as against third persons arise out of circumstances afterwards discovered, the purchaser or assignee is not precluded from suing upon his contract. It is not champerty where the right purchased was originally clear, but the litigation is the result of circumstances subsequently arising or subsequently known.—WILSON v. 634. Real property—Subject to litigation—Conveyance valid.]—A conveyance, whether voluntary or for valuable consideration, of property which the grantor has previously conveyed by a deed voidable in equity is not void on the ground of champerty. For where property which is subject to litigation is conveyed by one person to another, the right to sue in respect of it passes as incident to it; but the mere right to sue with respect to it cannot be assigned.

A. having executed a conveyance of real estate to B., which was liable to be set aside on equitable grounds, afterwards made a voluntary settlement of the same property in trust for himself for life, with remainder to his children as he should appoint, and in default of appointment to all his children who should attain 21, or (being daughters) should marry, in equal shares:—Held: the infant children of A. could maintain a bill, making A. & the trustees of the settlement defts., to set aside the conveyance to B.—DICKINSON (DICKENSON) v. BURRELL, STOURTON v. BURRELL (1866), L. R. 1 Eq. 337; 35 Beav. 257; 35 L. J. Ch. 371; 13 L. T. 660; 12 Jur. N. S. 199; 14 W. R. 412.

634 i. Real property—Avoidable conveyance—Devises of right to set aside.]—The right to set aside a conveyance improperly obtained by a solr. from his client is devisable. 637. Assignment of damages to be recovered—Pending action of tort.—An assignment for valuable consideration by pltf. in a pending action of tort to one of his creditors of the sum of money to which he may become entitled by virtue of the action, as it is not an assignment of a mere right of action, but of property to come into existence in the future, is not invalid as savouring of champerty or maintenance.

A wife in debt to her husband for a large advance executed a deed of assignment by which she assigned to him the sum of money to which she might become entitled by virtue of a pending action of slander in which she was pltf. Her husband then made her a further advance to enable her to prosecute the action. The wife subsequently recovered a verdict in the action for damages. A judgment creditor of the wife thereupon served a garnishee order nisi attaching the damages which she had recovered:—Held: (1) the deed of assignment was not invalid either for want of consideration or as savouring of champerty, or under 13 Eliz. c. 5; (2) the husband, as assignee under the deed, was entitled to the damages recovered by the wife as against the execution creditor.—*GLEGG v. 638. Where maintenance lawful.]—Where a man has a grant or sufficient pretext, he may maintain an action rightly enough. A master may maintain his servant, or a landlord his tenant: one may maintain one's own blood or one who is of one's alliance: one may give gold or silver to a poor man for the purpose of maintaining his plea if he himself of his poverty cannot do so; & this is not maintenance against law (MARTIN, J.).—*ROTHEWEL (ROTHWELL) v. 639. —.]—H. brought an action for maintenance against F. He stated that F. had maintained an action between A. & B. (administrators of one Francis), pltf.s, & H., deft., for £100. It appeared that H. owed £100 to Francis under bond, that Francis was also indebted in the same sum to F., wherefore Francis assigned the suit to F. & delivered him the bond, to which H. agreed, & Francis empowered F., in case H. did not pay him, to sue in his, Francis's, name. Afterwards Francis died intestate, and administration was committed to A. & B. F. sued on the bond in the name of the administrators, A. & B.:—Held: not maintenance.

Every one who has reason to meddle may well justify maintenance of the action. Suppose divers men are enfeoffed in lands to my use, & I sell the lands to a stranger, & we are agreed, & at accord, that the first feoffees were before seised of the same

m. Assignment of judgment.]—Defts., assignees of three judgments recovered by D., received payment of & discharged one judgment & afterwards by deed assigned to F. the several judgments, covenanting that they had received no payment thereon & had not released any part thereof. F. assigned the judgments to M., & M., by deed indorsed on the assignment to himself, assigned them to pltf.:—Held: there was clearly no champerty or maintenance in the assignment from F. to M. or from M. to pltf.—*COLE v. A certain firm had obtained a judgment against the mtgor., & execution against his lands was in the sheriff's hands at time of sale. Pltf. had obtained an assignment of the judgment for $60 & given a note in payment. He now sought to make deft. his trustee as regards the balance of proceeds of sale:—Held: defts. could not establish a defence of champerty & maintenance, as pltf. had obtained an assignment of a judgment with the rights upon it. That was not merely a right to litigate, but a chose in action, a thing assignable under the statute, enabling the assignor to sue in his own name in respect of it. Such transaction was not bad as contravening the law respecting cham-

Defts. succeeded in their suit. In a suit brought by pltf. against them, they pleaded that the agreement was void for champerty & maintenance:—Held: by the law of England, which prevailed in the present suit, the contract was clearly void, being contrary to the plain provision of the common & statute law against maintenance.—*MULLA JAFFARI TYEB ALI v. —.]—Maintenance & champerty are different. The common title of tenants in common, or the relation of heir presumptive, justifies maintenance. The principle is, that the one may aid the other's suit in consideration of his own derivative interest, as the heir may aid the ancestor by reason of his chance of taking by descent. But it is different where the party comes in order to obtain the benefit directly for himself.—BYRNE v. FRERE (1828), 2 Moll. 157.—IR.

638 iii. —.]—Champerty implies a bargain of some sort between pltf. or deft. in a cause & another person who has no interest in the subject in dispute to divide the property sued for between them if they prevail, in consideration of that other person carrying on the suit at his own expense. The above rule does not apply when the person maintaining the action has an interest in the thing at variance.—HAYES v. LEVINSON (1890), 16 V. L. R. 305.—AUS.

638 iv. —.]—Interest not established.—A will purporting to convey testator's estate to his wife was attacked for uncertainty by persons claiming under alleged heirs-at-law of testator & through conveyances from them to persons abroad:—Held: as the evidence of the relationship of the alleged grantors to the deceased was only hearsay & the best evidence had not been adduced, & the persons claiming under the will had no information as to the identity of the parties in interest who were represented in the transactions by men of straw, & there was strong suspicion of the existence of champerty or maintenance on the part of the persons attacking the will, the latter had failed to establish the title of the persons under whom they claimed.—MAY v. LOGIE (1897), 27 S. C. R. 443.—CAN.

640. —[A common interest is constituted by an actual valuable interest in the result of the suit itself, either present, contingent, or future; or the interest which consanguinity or affinity to the suitor gives to the man who aids him; or the interest arising from the connection of the parties, e.g., as master & servant; or the interest which charity & compassion give a man in behalf of a poor man who, but for the aid of his rich helper, could not assert his rights, or would be oppressed & overdone in his endeavour to maintain them (LORD COLERIDGE, C.J.).—BRADLAUGH v. 641. —[In order to justify maintenance by one person of the suit of another there must either be a common interest recognised by the law in a matter at issue in the suit, or the case must fall within one of the specific exceptions from the law against maintenance established by the authorities.—ALABASTER v. 642. Maintenance originally unlawful—Becoming lawful by reason of issue raised.—[The common interest of a maintainer need not exist when the action is commenced; though when the suit was commenced the maintainer might have no common interest, yet in the course of his pleadings an issue might be raised in the determination of which he might have clearly a common interest to support or otherwise. Thus, A. sues B. for a common assault. If B. pleads simply not guilty, C. would not be justified in maintaining A.'s action, because he would have no common interest in it. But if B., instead of simply pleading not guilty, pleaded a justification that A. was trespassing on his land & refused to go off it, & so he laid hands on him & put him off, & to this plea A. replied that he was on B.'s land exercising a right of way common to himself & C., & issue was joined on this reply, this would be a "thing in variance," & C. would, from the moment that issue was raised, clearly be justified in maintaining A.'s right as being one in which he & A. had a common interest (HAWKINS, J.).—ALABASTER v. 643. Effect of common interest.—[An agreement to purchase of a party to a pending sale all his interest in the suit, although it contain an indemnity by the purchaser to the seller against all costs that have been or may be incurred in the prosecution of the suit, is not open to objection on the ground of champerty where the purchaser has a

643 i. Effect of common interest.—[Where the purchaser of a share of land joins his vendor in a suit to recover his own property, his action cannot be termed "champerty."—MUNIRAKHUN SINGH v. BHODDY SINGH (1869), 12 W. R. 133.—IND.

648 i. Champerty—Collateral interest not sufficient.—[Maintenance is in general excused if the parties are blood relations, but that excuse is not available in the case of maintenance amounting to champerty; & in order that a champ-terious agreement may be excused on the ground of common interest there must be more than a mere belief in an interest, & the interest must not be merely collateral.

Where resp., applt.'s father, commenced an action against a neighbour for damages occasioned by a fire, which destroyed a stable & its contents, which contents had been sold by resp. to applt., but had not been paid for; & applt. agreed to pay half the costs incurred by resp. in the action in consideration of resp. agreeing to share the judgment with applt.:—Held: (1) the agreement was champertous, & was not excused because of the parties being blood relations; (2) applt. had no direct pecuniary interest in the result of the action, & the mere fact that a question of fact would arise in the determination of which applt. had an interest did not constitute a common interest sufficient to justify maintenance.—DUTHIE v. 644. —Bonâ fide belief sufficient.—[The essence of the common law offence of maintenance consists in the criminal intention with which the act is done; so that when several persons, against all of whom a general claim is put forward by a third party, enter into an agreement to uphold each other in resisting that claim, it is not an act of maintenance if they do so under the bonâ fide, though erroneous, belief that they are uniting in the defence of a common interest.—FINDON v. 645. —[It is not necessary to establish that a joint interest in the action actually existed, it being sufficient to justify the maintainer if, on reasonable grounds, he bonâ fide believed that he had such interest—that is, that he reasonably believed in the existence of a state of things which, if true, would in law have justified him in maintaining the action. His erroneous belief as to what in law would justify him & his bonâ fide belief in a state of things which would support his erroneous view of the law would amount to nothing (HAWKINS, J.).—ALABASTER v. The deceased left a will whereby his property, real & personal, was left to persons other than pltf. & deft., & pltf. believed that such will revoked a former will by which testator had bequeathed certain property to pltf. In consideration that pltf. would take the necessary steps to contest the will & would advance money & obtain evidence for such purpose & instruct an attorney, deft. promised to share with pltf. half the real & personal property which might come to deft. by reason of such proceedings:—Held: (1) the agreement amounted to champerty;

(2) the fact that pltf. was a relation of deft. & had some collateral interest in the suit did not prevent the agreement being champerty.—HUTLEY v. HUTLEY (1873), L. R. 8 Q. B. 112; 42 L. J. Q. B. 52; 28 L. T. 63; 37 J. P. 518; 21 W. R. 479. S. C. Nos. 591, 596, ante; No. 734, post.

649. Grantor & grantee of rentcharge.—R., parson of a church, brought an action for maintenance against P., alleging that P. had maintained H. in an action of detinue brought against R. for a box containing charters & muniments. P. objected that the action did not lie. H. & his ancestors were seised of a rentcharge in fee, to which the charters & muniments related; the rentcharge was granted to P. in fee; the tenant attorned & further granted to P. that he should have the box & charters concerning the rentcharge of which R. was in possession, if H. could recover them, whereupon P. maintained H. in the action:—Held: P. not guilty of maintenance.—*ROTHERWEL v. executed before discovery of the trespass), by which the former were indemnified against costs of proceedings against appts. on terms of paying to the lessees 92½ per cent. of the amount recovered, was not champertous.—*BULLI COAL MINING Co. v. 657. Limited owners—Remaindermen—Reversioners.—Where a tenant in tail or for life is impleaded, the remainderman or reversioner may maintain & give of his proper money to maintain for safeguard of his interest: for he who has an interest in the land may maintain to save it.—ANON. (1547), Bro. N. C. 132; 73 E. R. 904.

658. Mortgagor & mortgagee.—W. made a deed of gift of sheep to D. in consideration that D. was bound to others for W.'s debts. D. brought an action against S. for taking the sheep. W. maintained the action, the day not having arrived for satisfying the debt, & D. being in no way damnified for W.'s debts:—Held: the maintenance was justifiable, in respect of the reverting trust reposed in D. by W. to make a reassurance of the goods if he was not damnified for the debts.—STEPNEY v. WOLFE (1800-1), Moore, K. B. 620; Noy, 100; 72 E. R. 797.

659. Copyholders—Custom of manor.—Where a bill was brought by tenants of a manor against the lord to settle the customs of the manor as to fines upon deaths & alienations, & an issue was directed to be tried at law:—Held: it was no maintenance for all the tenants to contribute, for it was the case of all.—*BROWN v. 660. Interest in sum of money.—Declaration that Y. had deposited with pltf. a sum of money, which pltf., at deft.'s request, had delivered to deft., that Y. had threatened to bring an action against pltf. to recover the money, & that thereupon pltf. at deft.'s request, & upon deft.'s undertaking to indemnify, defended the action:—Semble: the above did not disclose a contract void on account of maintenance.—WILLIAMSON v. HENLEY (1829), 6 Bing. 299; 130 E. R. 1295.

661. Claim for tithes.—The lands in the parish of T. consisted of old & new inclosures, the former of which, from the time of living memory, had been exempted from payment of tithes in kind, there being paid instead a certain sum, varying in amount for each farm. In 1832, the master & fellows of a college, the lessees of the tithes, having given notice to the tenants & proprietors of the old inclosures to set out their tithes in kind, a meeting of the proprietors took place, when it was resolved "that the proprietors do resist the claim of the college & support the present modulus; & that the expenses incurred in such proceedings shall be borne & paid by the proprietors in proportion to the value of their estates, & that F. (pltf.) & W. be requested to take such steps as may be considered necessary." This resolution was signed by deft. & six other landowners in the parish of T. At this time it was uncertain whether the college would proceed by one or several bills in equity; but nine bills were subsequently filed, and seven issues directed to be tried. In an action against one of the proprietors, brought by his attorney, for his bill in respect of these proceedings:—Held: the agreement of the proprietors interest was divested.—KNAFF v. KING (1874), 15 N. B. R. (2 Pug.) 309.—CAN.

6581. Mortgagor & mortgagee.—An agreement between pltf. & deft. (mtgee. & mtgor.) in an equity suit that the latter should render every assistance in his power to facilitate the progress of the suit, & should abstain from throwing any obstacle in the way of the suit, is not void for champerty, or as being against public policy, when it is not alleged that a fraud is thereby practised upon either the ct. or third parties.—

662. — Unless agreement goes beyond common object.—Semble: an agreement by several owners & occupiers of land in a parish to concur in defending any suits that may be commenced against any of them by the present or any future rector for the tithes of articles covered by certain specified moduses, or any other moduses, binding themselves not to compromise or settle, & not limited to their continuance in the parish or to any particular time, is illegal as going beyond the common object.—STONE v. 663. First & second mortgagees.—Several suits at law & in equity to determine the title to certain lands were pending between persons claiming to be mtgees. of such lands & one who claimed the same lands in fee by title under a settlement paramount to the mtge. Pltf., claiming to be a subsequent mtgee. of the same lands, contracted to purchase the interests of the prior mtgees. in their principal moneys, arrears of interest & securities, & to pay the purchase-moneys at certain stipulated times, all of which (except an annuity) were to be paid in 1843, & to pay & indemnify the prior mtgees. against the past & future costs of the suits & proceedings; & time was to be of the essence of the contract. Pltf. did not pay the instalments until a considerable time after the stipulated period, but such later payments were accepted by the vendors. The bill, filed in 1845 (when some of the payments still remained to be paid), alleged that defts. refused to perform the agreement, & prayed specific performance. On demurrer:—Held: pltf. being interested, as second mtgee., in the subject of the suits, the contract was not to be deemed champerty.—HUNTER v. DANIEL, Nos. 624, 643, ante.

670. — — — — — Religious sympathy sufficient.—A charitable motive induced by sympathy with the religious views of another person is none the less such a charitable motive as comes within the recognised exceptions to the law against maintenance forbidding one person to support that other in his lawsuit.

A solr. was employed by defts., the committee of a religious society, to act for the relatives of certain children in proceedings taken in Ch. by a religious institution to recover custody of the children. The relatives, who were not persons of means, had removed the children from the institution, as they disapproved of the religious instruction given there. The solr. sued defts. for his costs:—Held: (1) defts. acted from charitable motives although they were induced to act through religious sympathy; (2) the contract with the solr. was not void on the ground of maintenance.—HOLDEN v. 671. — — — — — Bonâ fide belief—No necessity for inquiry.—To an action for maintenance it is a good defence that deft. assisted a third person in legal proceedings from charitable motives believing he was a poor man oppressed by a rich man. It is not necessary deft. should have acted after full inquiry into the circumstances, but the defence will be equally available even if deft., if he had made full inquiry, would have ascertained that there was no reasonable or probable ground for the proceedings which he assisted.—HARRIS v. See, further, CHARITIES.

673. — Not excused by charitable motive.—Charity may be indiscreet, but cannot be mercenary, & a bargain to assist another in litigation in return for part of the proceeds amounts in law to champerty, although assistance would not have been rendered to a stranger or to any one but a friend in needy circumstances.

Pltf., from charitable motives, lent deft. a sum of money to enable him to bring an action, deft. promising, in the event of success, to repay the loan, together with a bonus, out of any damages recovered. Deft., after succeeding in the action, repaid a portion of loan, but refused to pay the balance of the loan or the bonus:—Held: pltf. entitled to recover the balance of the loan, but not the bonus.—COLE v. BOOKER (1913), 29 T. L. R. 295. S. C. No. 742, post.

SUB-SECT. 4.—MASTER AND SERVANT.

674. Right of master to maintain servant—Embracery excepted.—Pltf. sued out a writ of maintenance against deft., alleging he had maintained P. in an appeal of mayhem brought by P. against pltf. P. at the time held the office of gentleman carver to deft.:—Held: deft. not guilty of maintenance.

A master may lawfully maintain his servant, accompany him to the bar of the ct., stand there with him & give him advice, & may bring his own counsel to advise his servant. Just as it is lawful for a master to advise his servant or bring his own counsel to do so, so may he lawfully give his own money to a barrister to advise him. But it is otherwise where a master gives money on account of his servant to one of the jury in order to secure his verdict. Although the master himself pay counsel & the ct. fees for the servant, or discharge him of his own counsel, or pay other people for the servant to the servant's advantage, or otherwise give or lend him money to maintain & aid him in the action, yet in all these cases it shall not be said to be any maintenance in the master (NEWTON, C.J., & PASTON, J.).—POMEROY v. BUCKFAST, Nos. 547, 579, 651, 652, 668, ante.

A's servant was impleaded. A. went to counsel for advice on behalf of his servant. In an action for maintenance against A., judgment was given in his favour.—ANON. (1456), Jenk. 2, 92; 145 E. R. 65.

678. ——Semble: where proceedings are taken against a servant in respect of a ministerial act, something done by him in, or arising out of, his character of servant, it is not maintenance for his master to support him (JAMES, V.-C.).—ELBOROUGH v. AYRES (1870), L. R. 10 Eq. 367; 39 L. J. Ch. 601; 23 L. T. 68; 18 W. R. 913. S. C. No. 755, post.

679. — Action not brought in servant's interest.—An inspector employed by defts. was maintained by defts. in an action for slander. The action was not brought to retain the inspector's services, or from motives of charity or sympathy, but solely for defts.' purposes, being the inspector's action merely in name. Defts. at first bond fide believed the imputation on the inspector's character to be false, but after issue of the writ they discovered he was unfit to be an inspector. Defts. had also instructed their solr. to appeal against a bastardy order made against the inspector on the application of pltf.:—Held: (1) defts. were guilty of maintenance; (2) the fact that the inspector was their servant was immaterial, since the action was not maintained because the inspector was their servant; (3) pltf. was entitled to recover costs as between solr. & client both of the action of slander & of the bastardy appeal.—*SCOTT v. SUB-SECT. 5.—TRADE INTEREST.

680. Resisting claim to patent—Appeal for subscriptions & evidence.—Where a number of persons have a common interest in the subject-matter of a litigation, it is no offence on the part of the litigants to solicit subscriptions to assist them in prosecuting the litigation.

An injunction having been granted to restrain defts. from infringing a patent for nickel-plating, they gave notice of appeal & published in a newspaper an advertisement inviting the trade to subscribe towards the expenses of the appeal, & also an advertisement offering a reward of £100 to any one who could produce documentary evidence that nickel-plating was done before 1869. Pltfs. moved to commit the publishers of the newspaper for contempt of ct. in publishing these advertisements, as being an interference with the course of justice, stating at the same time that they did not press for a committal, but would be satisfied with an expression of regret & an undertaking not to repeat the advertisements:—Held: (1) as all persons engaged in the trade of plating had a common interest in resisting the claims of pltfs., an advertisement asking them to contribute to the expenses of defending the proceedings was open to no objection; (2) the advertisement offering a reward for documentary evidence was free from objection.—PLATING CO. v. FARQUHARSON (1881), 17 Ch. D. 49; 50 L. J. Ch. 406; 44 L. T. 389; 45 J. P. 568; 29 W. R. 510, C. A.

681. Defamation—Maintainer's character incidentally affected.—Pltfs. published an article containing libellous imputations upon T. & H. in connection with medical appliances manufactured by H. & reported on by T., a medical man. In respect of this article, so far as it reflected upon his character, T. brought an action against pltfs. H. maintained T. in his action. The libels upon H. contained in the article did not form any part of T.'s cause of action, nor was any issue raised as to H.'s character. The action resulted in a verdict for pl'ts., & T. was unable to pay their costs:—Held: (1) although in T.'s action questions might incidentally arise affecting H.'s character, he had no common interest in the action; (2) an action for maintenance would lie at the suit of pl'ts. against H. for the amount of the taxed costs of their defence to T.'s action.—*ALABASTER v. 682. — Trade union—Instigating action.—The employer of a member of a trade union dismissed him without notice, stating, in answer to an inquiry by the secretary of his union, that he did so on the ground of dishonesty, but subsequently, on proceedings being taken by his union on behalf of the member, paid him a week's wages in lieu of notice. Subsequently an action for libel, based on the letter written to the secretary by his employer, was commenced against the employer by the union, with the member's consent, the union instructing & paying its own solr. The action having been dismissed with costs, the employer sued the union for maintenance:—Held: (1) the union had instigated its member to bring the action without reasonable or probable cause; (2) there was no common interest; (3) defts. were guilty of maintenance. Semle: the union was not guilty of maintenance in assisting its member to recover his wages.—GREIG v. NATIONAL AMALGAMATED UNION OF SHOP ASSISTANTS, WAREHOUSEMEN, & CLERKS (1906), 22 T. L. R. 274.

683. ——A trade union has no legal common interest in a slander action brought by one of its officers, although that officer is slandered by way of his office as well as personally & the union is thereby adversely affected. 685. Defending customers against trade rivals.—It is not maintenance to uphold a party in litigation in the result of which the party accused of maintenance has a real & bond fide interest.

Pl'ts. & defts. were trade rivals, each dealing in a special apparatus used for carrying cash in retail shops. Defts. obtained orders for their apparatus from certain persons who had at some time used pl'ts.' apparatus & discontinued such use, & agreed to indemnify such persons in any action brought against them by pl'ts. They in fact paid certain damages & costs recovered by pl'ts. against such persons. Pl'ts. brought an action against defts. for damages for maintenance:—Held: (1) defts. had a pecuniary & commercial interest in the protection of their customers which justified the contracts of indemnity given by them; (2) they had not been guilty of maintenance.—BRITISH CASH & PARCEL CONVEYORS, LTD. v. LAMSON STORE SERVICE CO., LTD., [1908] 1 K. B. 1006; 77 L. J. K. B. 649; 98 L. T. 875, C. A.

The litigation was unsuccessful. J. then took out a summons against the solr. for delivery & taxation of his bill of costs & an account of the money paid to him:—Held: the solr. could not resist taxation or the account on the ground that the employment for which he was retained & for which the money was paid was illegal.—*Re THOMAS, JAQUES v. 695 i. Agreement invalid—Sharing estate.]—A suit was instituted by nine plifs. against defts., alleged to be in illegal occupation. Plifs. had no title but their miners' rights. Plifs. solr. had paid the expenses of the suit & was to have half of each of plifs. interest in the land when recovered:—Held: the claim was in its inception & concoction based upon champerty & maintenance.—*COLLINS v. 697. — T., being rightful heir to lands, employed L. to be his attorney in prosecuting his claims on the terms that L. should have in lieu of all claims for costs, etc., one-third of the estate which might be recovered. The proceedings being successful, L. in 1852 entered, as agent of T., into possession of the rents & profits of the estate. In 1854, L. pressing for a settlement of his claims, T. required an advance by way of mtge., & applied to L. for it. L. refused to advance any money himself, but procured G. to advance the necessary amount for payment of his own claim & a further advance to T. A regular mtge. was executed by T. to G., with power of sale. Immediately after the mtge. L. procured from T. an authority to pay £120 for the purpose of obtaining the title deeds, which had up to this time been in the possession of the solr. to the wrongful heir, who claimed a lien thereon for £120 for costs. Very shortly after this notice was given by G. calling in the mtge. money, & default being made, the power of sale was put in exercise & the lands advertised for sale by auction. It turned out that G. was merely a nominee for L. & had advanced no moneys of his own, & that L. had concealed this fact, & also the fact that the original retainer was void for champerty, from the knowledge of pltf.:—Held: (1) the agreement and retainer were void; (2) the mtge. must be cut down & stand as a security for so much only as was justly due from pltf. to deft.—THOMAS v. LLOYD (1857), 3 Jur. N. S. 288. S. C. No. 740, post.

698. — By agreement in writing between a solr. and his client it was stipulated that the former should have £5 per cent. commission on the gross amount of property recovered by him for the latter, in addition to his costs:—Held: (1) the stipulation was contrary to the policy of the law; (2) the solr. must refund the amount received by him for commission, though included in a settled account.—PINCE v. BEATTIE (1863), 32 L. J. Ch. 734; 9 L. T. 315; 27 J. P. 804; 9 Jur. N. S. 1119; 11 W. R. 979.

699. — Conflict of laws.]—An agreement to be carried into effect in this country, which would be void on the ground of champerty if made here, is not the less void because made in a foreign country where such a contract would be legal.

An attorney entered into an agreement in France with L., a French subject, to sue for a debt due to L. from a person residing here, whereby the attorney was to receive by way of recompense a moiety of the amount recovered:—Held: (1) the agreement was void for champerty; (2) the attorney was remitted to his ordinary retainer as an attorney; (3) the work having been done, & L. having received the benefit of it, the attorney was entitled to his costs as between attorney & client.—GRELL v. LEVY (1864), 16 C. B. N. S. 73; 9 L. T. 721; 10 Jur. N. S. 210; 12 W. R. 378; 143 E. R. 1052.

against him, & consulted one of defts., a solr. This solr. conferred with another solr., the other deft., & negotiations took place between the two defts. & pltf., & a verbal agreement was come to between the three. One of defts. was to act as solr. on the record in the actions, the other assisting; the two defts. were together to find all necessary disbursements; pltf. was not to be called upon to pay any expenses whatever except out of moneys which might be recovered, but out of such moneys defts. were to be entitled first to be repaid their disbursements & then to receive two-thirds of the remainder, the other third to go to pltf. In one action damages & costs were recovered; in another pltf. was unsuccessful. Defts. refused to allow the costs awarded against pltf. in the latter action to be paid out of the amount recovered in the first action, & pltf. had to pay them himself. He then sued defts., upon the agreement, to recover the sum so paid:—Held: the agreement was illegal on the ground of champerty & maintenance, & pltf. could not recover.

Whatever effect Supreme Court Act, 1882, s. 33, may possibly have had in making legal some agreements which previously might have been held void as savouring of champerty, it cannot justify an agreement for a partnership in litigation of such nature as that above set out.—*MILLS v. 701 i. — Percentage.]—An administratrix employed solrs. in an action for the recovery of a sum of money. She obtained a verdict, but the solrs. handed to her a part only of the money recovered. In an action for the balance, deft. solrs. pleaded full payment after deduction of fees, setting up a written agreement fixing their charges. Under the agreement the solrs. took an assignment of the claim, stipulating that they would prosecute the suit at their own expense, & if they prevailed, the property recovered was to be divided: one-fourth to themselves & three-fourths to pltf.:—Held: the agreement stipulating for a share of the money to be recovered as remuneration for carrying on the proceedings was clearly champertous; defts. were entitled to some remuneration, & as there was no tariff as between solr. & client in the Exchequer Ct., the amount must be ascertained as upon a "quantum meruit."—O'CONNOR v. GEMMILL (1899), 20 O. R. 47; 26 A. R. 27.—CAN.

701 ii. — —.]—A solr. & his client embarked in a joint speculation to be prosecuted in ct. for their joint advantage—the client bringing in a claim for injuries & the lawyer contributing his skill & services. The action was successfully brought & judgment obtained for $2,000. The solr. took all the fruits of the judgment, retaining two large sums for costs which on taxation were allowed. The client appealed, & the claims were disallowed.

The confidential relation between lawyer & client forbids any bargain being made by which the practitioner shall draw a larger return out of litigation than is sanctioned by the tariff & the practice of the cts. Especially does the law forbid any agreement by the lawyer to take a percentage of the proceeds of a litigated claim as compensation for his services. Such transaction is in contravention of the statute relating to champerty.—Re SOLICITOR (1907), 10 O. W. R. 226.—CAN.

701 iii. — Lump sum.]—Pltfs., advocates in the Yukon, sued deft. for a lump sum for professional services in obtaining a judgment against H., it being alleged by pltfs. that they were to charge $600 if the amount was collected, & by deft. that they were to get 10 per cent. if collected by them:—Held: by Yukon law, an advocate could not legally obtain a lump sum for professional services except under r. 534 of North-West Territories Judicature Ordinance of 1893.—ROBERTSON v. BOSTWICK (1900), 9 B. C. R. 301.—CAN.

701 iv. — Sum depending on result of suit.]—A solr. agreed with his client to get $2,000 & taxed costs if the action were successful, if not he was to get $500:—Held: the agreement was champertous, but the solr. had his lien for costs.—WILLIAMS v. McDUGALL (1909), 12 W. L. R. 381.—CAN.

ings.]—An agreement between a client & solr. whereby the solr. is to be remunerated by a percentage of a sum to be recovered in a matter that is not a suit, action, or contentious proceeding, though not champertous, will be strictly regarded by the ct., which, in considering its propriety, will have regard to whether the client had independent advice & fully understood the purport of the agreement.—Re HOGGART'S SETTLEMENT (1912), 56 Sol. Jo. 415.

B. Indemnity against Costs.

704. Payment by result.—Share of sum recovered.—No costs if unsuccessful.]—An attorney agreed to save a party harmless from all costs of some suits on his being allowed to retain half of whatever sums were recovered:—Held: such an agreement amounted to maintenance & was illegal.—Re MASTERS (1835), 1 Har. & W. 348.

705. — — —.]—Where a pltf. has an original & good title to property, he does not become disqualified to sue for it by having entered into an improper bargain with his solr. as to the mode of remunerating him for his professional services in the suit.

Pltf. agreed to pay his solr., upon being indemnified against costs, a portion of the profits arising from his successful prosecution of a suit to establish his claim to certain coal mines:—Held: (1) the agreement amounted to champerty & maintenance; (2) pltf. was not disqualified from suing, since his title was vested in him before he entered into the illegal contract; (3) he must be deprived of costs.

If the solr. had been pltf. suing by virtue of a title derived under the agreement with his client, the bill would have been dismissed (MALINS, V.-C.).—HILTON v. WOODS (1867), L. R. 4 Eq. 432; 36 L. J. Ch. 491; 16 L. T. 736; 31 J. P. 788; 15 W. R. 1105. S. C. No. 752, post.

706. — — — Implied agreement.]—An agreement provided that the solr. conducting the action should receive a percentage on the sums recovered. *Nothing was said about remuneration in the event of the action being unsuccessful:—Held: (1) on the consideration of the agreement,

q. Agreement not invalid.—Sharing estate.—Manitoba Statute.]—Law Society Act, R. S. M. 1902, c. 95, s. 65, permits a solr. to contract with any person as to the remuneration to be paid him for services, & to receive a portion of the proceeds of the subject-matter of the action in which he is employed. Judgment was given in favour of pltfs., solrs., in an action to recover a portion of the amount received by deft. as the fruits of litigation carried on by pltfs. for deft., pursuant to a contract for payment of half the amount recovered.—THOMSON v. WISHART (1910), 13 W. L. R. 445.—CAN.

r. — Agreement by solicitor to get costs out of other side.]—In an action on a bill of costs incurred in respect of an action brought by pltf. as solr. for deft., the bill not having been taxed because negotiations were pending for settlement, deft. alleged that pltf. "took up the case on condition that he was to get his costs out of defts.; that if they failed all he would have to pay was defts. costs":—Held: the agreement alleged was not champertous, nor in any way within the prohibition against maintenance. "It was never doubted that a solr. might lay out his own moneys as disbursements on his client's account, & a solr. can conduct a case gratuitously out of charity or friendship towards his client."—Re SOLICITOR, CLARK v. LEE (1906), 6 O. W. R. 631; 9 O. L. R. 708.—CAN.

nothing was payable if nothing was recovered ; (2) the agreement was champertous.—Re STEEL v. F. (1895), 39 Sol. Jo. 710.

707. —[.]—A solr. who was party to the formation of a debt-collecting co. financed it & controlled its affairs with a view to its employment by him as an adjunct to his business as solr. By the agency of the co. he systematically solicited debt-collecting business without disclosing his connection with the co. & with a view to procuring for himself the business of recovering the debts. The terms upon which he, by the agency of the co., solicited debt-collecting business, & upon which he was proved to have conducted the proceedings in two actions, were that he charged a certain commission on the amount recovered only in addition to out-of-pocket expenses sanctioned by the members of the co. & not recovered from the debtor. In unsuccessful cases no charge was made either by the co. or the solr. except for actual out-of-pocket expenses :—Held : the terms upon which he conducted the actions amounted in law to champerty.—*Re A SOLICITOR, Ex p. 708. —[.]—A solr. agreed to act for a client in an action on the terms of receiving a percentage of any sum recovered, such percentage to cover his costs & expenses, & no charge to be made in the event of failure. Shortly after the issue of the writ the solr. discovered that there was no substance in the action :—Held : (1) the agreement was champertous ; (2) judgment having been given for debts, in the action with costs, the solr. was personally liable to pay them.—DANZEY v. METROPOLITAN BANK OF ENGLAND & WALES (1912), 28 T. L. R. 327. S. C. No. 753, post.

C. Transfer of Subject-matter of Action.

709. Gift to counsel after successful litigation.]—Where a litigant recovered land & part of the land was conveyed to his counsel for his wages :—Held : the taking of the land for his wages after the recovery was not champerty, there being no allegation of a covenant or promise by the litigant before the proceedings to convey the land after the recovery thereof.—PENROS' CASE (1412), 2 Co. Inst. 564.

Deft. was pltf.'s adviser & advocate in the contest, which had endured some years. In May, 1859, pltf. executed a deed whereby pltf., in consideration of the services rendered to her by deft. & also in consideration of her esteem & friendship for him, conveyed to him the reversion of the estate subject to her own life interest therein & chargeable as thereafter appeared. Semble : the deed was void for maintenance & champerty.—*BROWN v. A new trial was obtained, & present pltf. became the solr. in that action, which terminated in a verdict for pltf. for the same amount as before. The present deft., who was a judgment creditor of pltf. in the action in the Mayor's Ct., obtained a garnishee order attaching the amount recovered in that action. In an interpleader to determine whether pltf. as assignee or deft. as garnishee was entitled to the fruits of the judgment :—Held : (1) the rule that a solr. conducting an action cannot purchase the subject-matter of the suit did not apply, as the assignment preceded the employment as solr. ; (2) whether the assignment of the first verdict covered the amount of the second verdict or not, the intention of the assignment & covenant was to secure to pltf. the fruits of the litigation ; (3) pltf. in that action could not deal with the amount recovered without violating the rights of his assignee, & the assignment took priority over the garnishee order.—*DAVIS v. 726 ii. ———.]—In an action by pltf. for damages for death of her husband through alleged negligence of defts., defts. made an application for further discovery from pltf. & answers relating to an alleged champertous agreement.—Held: pltf. had not trespassed upon the limits marked out as reasonable upon the judgment in Ram Coomar Coondoo v. Chander Canio Mookerjee (1876), 2 App. Cas. 186, P. C., which states that a fair agreement to supply funds to carry on a suit in consideration of having a share of the property, if recovered, ought not to be regarded as being, "per se," opposed to public policy. Although such a judgment might not apply precisely to Canada, it was an indication that the rigorous rules which obtained in earlier days in England are not to be imported into dependencies of England without modification. Discovery is not enforceable in equity in cases of champerty & maintenance, nor should it be under the equivalent remedies given by Jud. Act.—WELBOURNE v. CANADIAN PACIFIC RY. Co. (1894), 16 P. R. 343.—CAN.

726 iii. ———.]—Maintenance is an indictable offence in Ontario; & in an action to recover damages for maintenance, pltf. is not entitled to obtain from deft. upon examination for discovery such answers as would tend to subject to criminal proceedings. As to subject to criminal proceedings, as discovery could not be had which would not involve deft. in matters leading up to the offence, the examination should not be allowed to take place at all.—HOPKINS v. authorising the secretary to instruct the co.'s solrs. to take such proceedings at the co.'s expense with reference to the prosecution as they might be advised. On a bill filed by the shareholder to restrain the taxation of costs & subsequent proceedings in the action:—Held: (1) a ct. of equity had no jurisdiction to deal with the costs of the common law action; (2) the question of maintenance was a legal matter, maintenance being a common law or statutable offence & not an equitable offence.—ELBOROUGH v. AYRES, No. 678, ante.

Part I.—Origin and General Characteristics of the Jurisdiction of the Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice.

SECT. 1.—JURISDICTION OF ANCIENT COURT OF LORD HIGH ADMIRAL.

SUB-SECT. 1.—NATURE OF JURISDICTION.

1. Jurisdiction of Lord High Admiral.—The office of Lord High Admiral is in part executive, & in part judicial. His judicial duties are to be executed by his lieutenant, as judge of the ct., who has jurisdiction over all matters arising upon the high seas. "Admty. causes" must be causes arising wholly upon the sea & not within the precincts of any county; for 13 Ric. 2, c. 5, directs that the admiral & his deputy shall not meddle with any thing but only things done upon the sea; & 15 Ric. 2, c. 3, declares that the ct. of the admiral has no manner of cognizance of any other thing done within the body of any county either by land or by water. The Admty. Ct. has jurisdiction to determine all maritime causes arising wholly upon the sea out of the jurisdiction of a county. A judgment of a thing done upon land is void. It is no part of the sea where one may see what is done on one side of the water & the other. Below the low-water mark the admiral has sole & absolute jurisdiction, but between high-water & low-water mark the common law & the admiral have jurisdiction by turns, one upon the water, the other upon the land, but if the water is within a county the common law claims jurisdiction. R. v. FORTY-NINE CASKS OF BRANDY (1836), 3 Hag. Adm. 257. S. C. Nos. 615, 622, post.

Annotations:—Consd. R. v. Keyn (1876), 2 Ex. D. 63, C. C. R.; The Olympic, [1913] P. 92, C. A. Reid. R. v. Two Casks of Tallow (1837), 3 Hag. Adm. 294; R. v. Le Pauline (1845), 3 Notes of Cases, 616.

2. — Things done upon the sea.—The admiral has jurisdiction of things done upon the sea; if part of the matter be done upon the sea, & part in a county, the common law shall have all the jurisdiction; if the sea be within any county, the common law shall have jurisdiction; or if a thing be done upon the sea, hors del county, the party may plead to the jurisdiction of the ct. Where a man may see that which was done of one part & the other of the water, etc., the county may have cognizance, & it may be tried by a jury, & where the matter may be tried by the common law, the admiral has no jurisdiction.—ADMIRALTY CASE (1611), 12 Co. Rep. 79; 77 E. R. 1357.

Annotation:—Consd. R. v. Keyn (1876), 2 Ex. D. 63, C. C. R.

3. — Between high & low water mark.—Below low-water mark the admiral has the sole jurisdiction; between the high-water & low-water mark the common law & the admiral have divisum imperium, the common law when the sea is ebbcd, the admiral ad plenitudinem maris.—CONSTABLE'S CASE, Nos. 614 623, post.

Annotations:—Distd. Prideaux v. Warne (1673), Freem. K. B. 355. Consd. Dunwick Corpn. v. Sterry (1831), 1 B. & Ad. 831; R. v. Wood (1849), 3 Cox, C. C. 453, C. C. 5. Contempt of Court.—A person who had resisted the process of the Admty. Ct. with regard to a ship was punished & applied for a prohibition on the ground that the ship being extra corpus comitatus the ct. had no jurisdiction:—Held: although the Admty. Ct. was not a Ct. of Record, it could punish for contempt.

8. Winding up—Right in rem enforceable in winding up—Not by action in rem—Effect of arrest.]

—The proper mode of enforcing a maritime lien on a vessel belonging to a co. which has been ordered to be wound up, is by a proceeding in the winding up & not by a proceeding in rem in the Admty. Ct. The arrest of a vessel by the Admty. Ct. is a "sequestration" within Cos. Act, 1862 (c. 89), s. 163.—Re AUSTRALIAN DIRECT STEAM NAVIGATION CO., Ex p. BAKER (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 325; 44 L. J. 9. — Leave to proceed in Admiralty — Against mortgagees.]—T., master of a ship belonging to a co., drew a bill on the co. for necessities supplied to the ship, which bill was accepted, but was dishonoured at maturity. T. paid the bill, & claimed repayment from mtgees. who had taken possession of the ship. On the following day an order was made for winding up the co. T. then applied in the winding up for leave to take proceedings in the Admty. Ct., & obtained an order giving him leave. The liquidator applied to discharge this order, & an order was made for the liquidator to pay into ct. to a separate account to meet T.'s claim of £150, which exceeded the principal & interest, T. undertaking not to proceed in the Admty. Ct.; payment to be without prejudice to any application by T. to increase the amount. The £150 was paid in, & T. applied to increase the amount so as to cover the costs of defending an action brought against T. by the holder of the bill, & the costs of T. of the application in the winding up:—Held: (1) though if there had not been mtgees. in possession of the ship the proper mode of enforcing T.'s lien on the ship would have been by application in the winding up, the order giving leave to proceed in the Admty. Ct. was a proper order, the mtgees. not being parties to the winding up; (2) T. was entitled to all his costs before the V.-C. as costs properly incurred by a mtgee. in enforcing his security.—*Re RIO GRANDE DO SUL S.S. SUB-SECT. 2.—CONTROL OF THE HIGH COURT OF ADMIRALTY BY OTHER COURTS BEFORE THE JUDICATURE ACTS.

10. Court liable to prohibition—Or to injunction.]

27. ——— Where powers of Admiralty Court insufficient.]—Semble: although the Admlty. Ct. has jurisdiction to require security for the return of a ship, a ct. of equity will interfere where the powers of the Admlty. Ct. may be defective; it is sufficient that the sailing of the ship is so mixed up with the taking the account of profits of previous mtgees. as to render such injunction necessary.—CASTELLI v. SECT. 3.—EFFECT OF DECISIONS OF OTHER COURTS AND FORMER CONCURRENT JURISDICTIONS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—EFFECT OF DECISIONS OF OTHER COURTS.

A. Since the Judicature Acts.

31. Decision of House of Lords.]—A judgment of the House of Lords upon a proper maritime question, whether given in an English or in a Scottish appeal, must be of equal authority in all the Admty. Cts. of the kingdom (LORD WATSON).—CURRIE v. M'KNIGHT, Nos. 54, 1793, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 1793, post.

32. Decision of Privy Council.]—Semble: a decision of the Privy Council, at a time when it was the final Ct. of Appeal in Admty. matters, is formally & technically binding on the Ct. of Appeal in the same sense as a decision of the House of Lords. But even if this is not so, a decision of the Privy Council ought not to be departed from after a lapse of 40 years (COLLINS, M.R., COZENS-HARDY, L.J.).—THE CAYO BONITO, [1903] P. 203; 72 L. J. P. 70; 89 L. T. 260; 52 W. R. 133; 19 T. L. R. 609; 47 Sol. Jo. 671; 9 Asp. M. L. C. 445, C. A.

33. Practice—Chancery Division charging order—Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127).]—The ct., when sitting in Admty., should follow the practice of the Chancery Div. in requiring notice to the parties affected, & unless circumstances are very exceptional, should not exercise, on an ex p. application, its discretionary power of making charging orders under the above Act.—THE BIRNAM WOOD, [1907] P. 1; 76 L. J. P. 1; 96 L. T. 140; 23 T. L. R. 58; 51 Sol. Jo. 51; 10 Asp. M. L. C. 325, C. A.

B. Before the Judicature Acts.

34. Decisions binding on Court.]—The Admty. Ct. implicitly obeys the decisions of the House of Lords & Privy Council & it follows the cts. of common law as to the construction of Acts & it will decide in consonance with a series of decisions at common law.—THE MILAN, No. 481, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 481, post.

35. —.]—The only decisions of legal tribunals by which the Admty. Ct. is bound are those of the House of Lords, the Privy Council, & the cts. of common law in interpretation of an Act.—THE HELEN (1865), L. R. 1 A. & E. 1; 35 L. J. Adm. 2.

For full anns., see ALIENS.

36. — Duty to follow.]—The Admty. Ct. is bound to adhere without deviation to a course of precedents adopted by its predecessors, though not to a single decision. When that course has also been sanctioned by the ct., the Admty. Ct. has no discretion at all; its sole duty is to obey. Wherever the Privy Council may have given a clear explanation of principles which ought to be adopted, or of the manner in which they ought to be brought to bear in practice, or of the extent to which they ought to be carried, whether such explanation be consistent with former practice or not, it becomes the duty of the Admty. Ct., without any regard to its own opinion or any notion of its own, to regulate all its own proceedings by the judgment of that superior tribunal, & to the best of its ability, without regard to any other consideration, to give the fullest force & effect to the express directions of the superior authority.—THE LEUCADE (1855), Spinks, 217; 2 Ecc. & Ad. 228; 7 L. T. 101; 1 Jur. N. S. 554.

Annotations:—Reid. The Fortuna (1855), Spinks, 307; The Aline & Fanny (1856), Spinks, 322; The Stephen Hart (1864), 11 L. T. 52.

37. Decision of common law court—On construction of statute.]—In the construction of Acts of Parliament the ct. holds itself bound to adhere to the construction put upon any Act by cts. of common law. If a question upon construction of a particular Act comes under consideration of the ct., & that very question has already been decided by judgment of a ct. of common law, the ct. would yield to that judgment even if its own opinion did not coincide. But the judgment of the ct. is not bound down as to another Act on which a ct. of common law has said nothing. The ct. proceeds in interpretation of Acts of Parliament upon the same principle as cts. of common law; & if a case arise upon an Act where there has been no decision at common law, it will exercise its own discretion.—THE IRONSIDES (1862), 1 Lush. 458; 31 L. 40. — —.]—The Admty. Ct. will not give a decision upon construction of an Act which would be in direct conflict with the decision of a ct. of common law, although not agreeing with that decision.—ARGOS, (CARGO EX, THE HEWSONS (1872), L. 41. — Contributory negligence—Not followed.]—According to the rule which prevails in the Admty. Ct. in case of a collision, if both vessels are in fault, the loss is equally divided; but in a ct. of common law pltf. has no remedy if his negligence in any degree contributed to the accident (LORD CAMPBELL, C.J.).—*DOWELL v. 53. Transferred actions—Where no original jurisdiction.]—If an action brought in the Admly. Div.

to recover damages for breach of the shipowner's contract of carriage is retained in that div., the damages proceeded for will, even although the action is one which could not have been brought in the Admly. Ct. before Jud. Acts, be assessed, & interest on the amount found due be given, in the same manner & according to the same rules as if the Admly. Ct. had jurisdiction over the suit under Admly. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10). So, also, if an action brought in the Queen's Bench Div. to recover damages for negligently mooring a vessel is, after trial in that div., transferred to the Admly. 56. Law administered in Admiralty.]—It is not competent to the Admly. Ct. & it has not jurisdiction to administer any other law than its own. Generally the Admly. Ct. is governed by the civil law, the law maritime, & law merchant, unless where those laws are controlled by stat. law of the realm or by the authority of the municipal cts., which unquestionably possess a superintending power, & might restrain the Admly. Ct. should it overstep the just limits of its jurisdiction. If in any matter the municipal cts. have prohibited the Admly. Ct., it is bound to acquiesce not only in that individual case, but in all others where the same point arises; & thenceforward the civil & maritime law, so controlled, becomes the law governing the decision; of the ct.—THE NEPTUNE (1834), 3 Hag. 57. Jurisdiction confined to established cases.]—It is the duty of the ct. to consider the question of jurisdiction with great caution, as well on account of the parties as of itself. If the ct. should exceed its just authority, it might endanger the jurisdiction hitherto retained over cases not opposed, & ultimately involve the parties in fruitless litigation. It cannot attend to arguments founded merely on suggestions of general equity, unless its jurisdiction is clearly established.—THE MAITLAND (1829), 2 Hag. Adm. 253.

59. Jurisdiction to be exercised equitably.]—The ct. is bound to exercise the jurisdiction conferred upon it by Admty. Ct. Act, 1840 (c. 65), s. 6, equitably, & in so doing it will protect the interests of all persons having a bond fide lien upon the property, as for instance, subsequent purchasers without notice. —THE ALEXANDER LARSEN (1841), 1 Notes of Cases, 185 ; 1 Wm. 60. — Subject to limitations—Court not court of equity.]—The Admty. Ct., although influenced by equitable considerations, is not a ct. of equity so as to allow matters foreign to the issue to be introduced in order that complete justice may be done between the parties : it follows rather, in pleadings & practice, the cts. of common law.—THE DON FRANCISCO, Nos. 666, 978, post.

62. Evidence—Colonial & foreign law.]—The Admty. Ct. does not require the same strict proof of colonial (& semble, of foreign) law as a ct. of common law. Though the ct. observes the great principles which govern the law of evidence in cts. of common law & equity, yet, in matters of merely technical proof, the ct. exercises a discretion, in accordance with the practice of its predecessors, & the great distinction between the description of causes which come under the cognisance of the Admty. Ct. & those in other cts. An Indian Act is sufficiently proved by a clerk of the India House producing a copy of the Act officially forwarded by the Indian Govt. to the India House. An order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, which, by law, must be published in the official gazette, or, if there is no official gazette, in some other public manner, & a copy exhibited in a conspicuous place in the office of the conservator of each port to which such order relates, is not proved by a clerk of the India House only saying from a letter not produced that there was such an order, no copy of the gazette or any other documentary evidence being forthcoming. To prove that a person was a duly licensed pilot of the port of Calcutta it is sufficient to give in evidence that his conduct was the subject of inquiry before the Marine Committee at Fort William, which showed that he must have been a licensed pilot to be subject to their jurisdiction, & that his name was in the Pilots' Lists at Calcutta, although there were no certificate from the pilot authorities & no certified copy of the licence.—THE PEERLESS, No. 44, ante ; Nos. 111, 1803, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 111, post.

63. De minimis non curat lex.]—The Admty. Ct. cannot take on itself legislative functions ; it must administer the law as it stands, with such qualifications as the law permits. The ct. is not bound to a strictness at once harsh & pedantic in application of Acts. The law permits the qualification implied in the ancient maxim De minimis non curat lex.—THE REWARD (1818), 2 Dods. 265.

SECT. 5.—JURISDICTION IN REM AND IN PERSONAM.

64. Distinction one of procedure.]—Where the Admty. Ct. has jurisdiction, it may exercise it either by action in rem or in personam. Given the jurisdiction, the question whether the action is to be in rem or in personam is one of mere procedure (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—R. v. CITY OF LONDON COURT JUDGE, Nos. 74, 76, post.

65. Origin of distinction—Arrest of property or person.]—The jurisdiction of the Admty. Ct. is to be exercised either by an arrest of the person of deft., if within the realm, or by the arrest of any personal property of deft. within the realm, whether the ship in question or any other chattel, or by proceedings against the real property of deft. within the realm (FRY, L.J.).—THE HEINRICH (HENRICH) BJORN (1885), 10 P. 66. —.]—Under the earlier practice the distinction between actions in personam & actions in rem depended upon whether the person or property of deft. was arrested in the first instance, & if deft. appeared to an action in rem, the procedure & effect of the action in rem became those of an action in personam. Actions beginning with arrest of the person became obsolete in practice in the 18th century, & arrest of property merely to enforce appearance became rare or obsolete, though in theory such arrest of the person or property would seem still to be permissible. On the other hand, arrest of property over which a lien could be asserted became more common as the idea of a pre-existing maritime lien developed. The result was that arrest became the distinctive feature of the action in rem, such arrest having primarily for its object the satisfaction of the creditor out of the property seized (JEUNE, J.).—THE DICTATOR, Nos. 75, 1499, post.

74. Action in personam—Personal jurisdiction.]—There is considerable authority for holding that the Admty. Ct. did exercise a jurisdiction in personam in certain cases. It did so whenever there was a remedy by proceeding in rem; but then it limited the damages recoverable to the value of the res. It exercised a personal jurisdiction in the nature of a disciplinary authority, as for assaults by the officers of a ship upon the high seas, where there was no jurisdiction in rem (KAY, L.J.).—R. v. 75. — Limits of jurisdiction.]—The cts. of common law always clearly drew the distinction between the case of the Admty. Ct. having jurisdiction by reason of hypothecation or lien, or other reason, over a res, & that ct. seeking to exercise jurisdiction against individuals personally, with regard to whom no such jurisdiction in the view of the cts. of common law existed, & while they allowed the action to proceed in regard to the former matter, prohibited it as to the latter (JEUNE, J.).—THE DICTATOR, No. 66, ante; No. 1499, post.

SUB-SECT. 1.—THINGS SUBJECT TO JURISDICTION.

A. In General.

76. Three conditions to be considered.]—In determining whether the Admty. Ct. has jurisdiction, three things have to be considered—the locality, the subject-matter of complaint, & the person with regard to whom the complaint is made. If any of the three is wanting, the Admty. Ct. may not have jurisdiction (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—R. v. CITY OF LONDON COURT JUDGE, Nos. 64, 74, ante.

77. Things arising upon high seas.]—The Admty. Ct. has no power over any cause at land, for both by the nature of the ct. & by the Act, it is only to meddle with things arising upon the high seas. Further, these things at the sea done must be also of the same nature & respect; & if a man should make an obligation at sea for security of a debt growing before at land, or should make a promise to pay same, this cannot be sued in the Admty. Ct., but it is otherwise in the

B. Things done upon the Seas.

(a) Contracts.

78. Contracts made at sea.]—If a ship lies at anchor & wants victuals & sends to land to S. to bring them, & thus the contract is made on the ship, then the contract is made at sea, & the Admty. Ct. has jurisdiction; but it is otherwise if the contract was made entirely on land & the victuals afterwards sent to the ship.—GODFREY'S CASE (1625), Lat. 11; 82 E. R. 249.

79. — Release on land.]—If a suit be in the Admty. Ct. upon a contract made at sea, & deft. plead a release, or a gift after the coming to land, that ct. may inquire & try this issue.—ANON. (1598), Gouldsb. 114; 75 E. R. 1032.

80. Contracts made on land.]—The master of a ship entered into a contract with merchants to supply provisions & provide mariners for a voyage. On their refusal to pay what they had agreed to pay he sued them in the Admty. Ct., & defts. moved for a prohibition on the ground that the contract being made on land, the Admty. Ct. had no jurisdiction:—Held: (1) a prohibition would lie; (2) prohibitions were not discretionary but were grantable ex debito justitiæ.—WOODWARD v. BONITHAN (1661), T. Raym. 3; 83 E. R. 2.

Annotation:—Apprvd. Martin v. Mackonochie (1879), 49 L. J. Q. B. 9, C. A.

81. Contracts made on land abroad—Necessaries—Hypothecation bond.]—If the master of a ship take up moneys during the voyage at any place abroad for necessaries wanted super altum mare, & hypothecate the ship, the pawnee may sue on the hypothecation bond in the Admty. Ct., although it was given at land.—COSSART v. LAWDLEY (1688), 3 Mod. Rep. 244; 87 E. R. 159.

Annotation:—Expld. & Foldd. Johnson v. Shippin (1703), 2 Ld. Raym. 982.

(b) Torts.

82. Torts committed on high seas.]—The Admty. Ct. has original jurisdiction over torts committed on the high seas.—THE SARAH, No. 83, post.

Annotations:—Apld. Purkis v. Flower (1873), L. R. 9 Q. B. 114. Consd. R. v. City of London Court Judge, [1892] 1 Q. B. 273, C. A.; Turner v. Mersey Docks & Harbour Board, [1892] P. 285, C. 83. — Damage done.]—The Admty. Ct. has original jurisdiction over a collision on the high seas where the vessel doing the damage was a keel, or vessel without masts, usually propelled by a pole. The ct. has original jurisdiction, because the matter complained of is a tort committed on the high seas. It is not necessary to refer to any stat.; it is immaterial whether the vessel doing the damage was a sea-going vessel, or by what means it was navigated (Dr. LUSHINGTON).—THE SARAH (1862), Lush. 549. S. C. No. 82, ante.

Annotations:—Apld. Purkis v. Flower (1873), L. R. 9 Q. B. 114. Consd. R. v. City of London Court Judge, [1892] 1 Q. B. 273, C. A.; Turner v. Mersey Docks & Harbour

Board, [1892] P. 285, C. A.; Mersey Docks & Harbour Board v. Turner, [1893] A. C. 468; Davidsson v. Hill, [1901] 2 K. B. 606. Refd. The Englishman & The Australia, [1894] P. 239; The Veritas, [1901] P. 304.

84. — Assault.]—In a civil suit on the part of a passenger against the master for assaulting him on the high seas during a passage from the West Indies to England:—Held: (1) the injury was done on the high seas; (2) the Admty. Ct. had jurisdiction to entertain the suit.—THE RUCKERS (1801), 4 Ch. Rob. 73.

Annotations:—Consd. The Sylph (1867), L. R. 2 A. & E. 24; R. v. City of London Court Judge, [1892] 1 Q. B. 273, C. A.; Mersey Docks & Harbour Board v. Turner, [1893] A. C. 468; Davidsson v. Hill, [1901] 2 K. B. 606. Refd. The Franconia (1877), 2 P. D. 163, C. A.

C. Ships and certain other Property.

85. Barge.]—THE BILBAO, Nos. 475, 507, 724, 771, post.

86. —.]—In a jury trial for loss by the sinking of a barge from a vessel listing over upon her through carelessness, one of the jury thought it a case more fit to be tried by the Admty. Ct., in which opinion Lord Campbell joined, & expressed a hope that the jurisdiction of that ct. would be extended to all barges.—STORKS v. FORREST (1851), 3 L. T. 58, Shipping Gazette, Apr. 11.

87. —.]—THE MALVINA, Nos. 476, 487, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 487, post.

88. Hulk—Floating warehouse.]—A hulk retaining the general appointment of a ship registered as a British ship & hoisting the British ensign, although only used as a floating warehouse, is primâ facie sufficiently a British ship to be within M.S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 267, & a crime committed thereon is within the jurisdiction of the Admty.—R. v. ARMSTRONG (1875), 13 Cox, C. C. 184.

Annotation:—Refd. R. v. Keyn (1876), 2 Ex. D. 63, C. C. R.

89. Hopper barge.]—JJ. awarded salvage in respect of services rendered to a hopper barge, which had been found adrift, without any person on board of her, in the Wash about 3 miles from Boston. The barge was not furnished with any means by which she could be propelled, & was used for dredging purposes:—Held: (1) the barge was a "ship in distress on the shore of a sea or tidal water" within M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104) s. 458; (2) the JJ. had jurisdiction to award salvage.—THE MAC (1882), 7 P. D. 126; 51 L. J. P. 81; 46 L. T. 907; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 585, C. A.

Annotations:—Consd. The Gas Float Whitton (No. 2), [1896] P. 42, C. A.; The Fulham (1899), 81 L. T. 19, C. A.; Poole Harbour Comms. v. Pike (1901), 17 T. L. R. 251. Foldd. The Mudlark, [1911] P. 116. Refd. Corbett v. Pearce, [1904] 2 K. B. 422.

90. Gas float.]—The jurisdiction of the Admty. over salvage does not extend to all property exposed to perils of the sea & used to assist navigation.

A gas float, shaped like a boat, but neither intended nor fitted to be navigated, was moored in tidal waters to give light to vessels & went adrift in a storm:—Held: not being a ship or part of a ship or of her apparel or cargo the structure was not the subject of a claim for salvage within Admty. jurisdiction.—WELLS v. GAS FLOAT WHITTON (No. 2) (OWNERS), [1897] A. C. 337; 66 L. J. P. 99; 76 L. T. 663; 13 T. L. R. 422; 8 Asp. M. L. C. 272, H. L. S. C. No. 1743, post.

Annotations:—Consd. The Craighall, [1910] P. 207, C. A.; The Upcerne, [1912] P. 160.

91. Wreck.]—Where any portions of a wrecked vessel have been recovered, the mariners are entitled to sue against the proceeds for their wages, though no freight has been earned; & their title is not divested by the circumstance that the portions of the ship which have been preserved were preserved not by the exertions of the crew, but by third persons.—THE RELIANCE (1843), 2 Wm. Rob. 119; 2 Notes of Cases, 347; 7 Jur. 542; sub nom. THE ALLIANCE (1843), 10 L. T. 913. S. C. No. 424, post.

92. Raft of timber.—On a motion for a monition calling upon the owner of a raft of timber which was found flotsam in Yarmouth harbour to show cause why salvage should not be awarded for the rescue & preservation of same:—Held: the ct. did not possess jurisdiction over the subject-matter under Admly. Ct. Act, 1840 (c. 65), s. 6.—THE LARGE RAFT OF TIMBER (1844), 2 Wm. Rob. 251; 8 Jur. 154.

Annotations:—Distd. The Mac (1882), 46 L. T. 907, C. A. Appl. The Gas Float Whittin (No. 2), [1896] P. 42 C. A. Refd. The Gas Float Whittin (No. 2), [1895] P. 301.

93. Timber broken loose.—Timber which has broken loose from its fastenings in a harbour, & found floating upon the sea 3 miles distant by persons who do not know whence it came, is not "flotsam" so as to entitle the finders to salvage under M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), & an order made by JJ. awarding salvage will be made without jurisdiction.—PALMER v. ROUSE (1858), 3 H. & N. 505; 27 L. J. Ex. 437; 31 L. T. O. S. 220; 22 J. P. 773; 6 W. R. 674.

Annotation:—Refd. The Gas Float Whittin (No. 2), [1896] P. 42, C. A.

94. Payment in lieu of bail—Not proceeds of ship.—In order that the Admly. Ct. may entertain a suit of limited liability under the powers of M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 514, & Admly. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 13, the ship or proceeds thereof must, at commencement of the suit, be under arrest & under the control of the Admly. Ct. Payment into the registry of a sum in lieu of bail in a cause of damage cannot be taken to represent the ship or proceeds within the Act of 1861. The term "proceeds of a ship" is, in the practice of the Admly. Ct., a technical expression, meaning the fund arising from the sale of a ship.—JAMES v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1872), L. R. 7 Ex. 287; 41 L. J. Ex. 186; 27 L. T. 382; 21 W. R. 25; 1 Asp. M. L. C. 428. S. C. No. 23, ante; No. 573, post.

Annotation:—Consd. The Franconia (1877), 2 P. D. 163, C. A.

95. Ship's stores sold privately—Proceeds of sale.—THE OPTIMA, No. 1709, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 1709, post.

SUB-SECT. 2.—LIMITS OF LOCALITY.

A. British Dominions.

96. Not within body of county.—The authority of the admiral is limited to the high seas. The vice-admiral of York has no jurisdiction to cause people to appear before him for things done in the body of the county, as for not repairing the banks of a river which is within the body of a county.—EMPRINGHAM'S CASE (1611), 12 Co. Rep. 84; 77 E. R. 1361.

97.—H. & others were sued in the Admly. Ct.; they were owners of a ship & sent it to the Indies to trade, & the mariners upon the high seas committed piracy, & when the ship returned the admiral seized it in the Thames. Prohibition was prayed, & was granted because the seizure was within the body of a county.—HILDEBRAND'S CASE (1615), 1 Roll. Rep. 285; 81 E. R. 488.

98.—A Dutch ship was wrecked in a creek of the sea within the body of the county of Dorset; the sailors claiming that the goods on the ship were perishable obtained a commission of sale from the Admly. Ct. to sell them, & the real owners brought supersedeas to prevent such sale & prayed prohibition. This was granted because the cause of action accrued within the body of the county & the Admly. Ct. had no jurisdiction therein. The sale of the goods was proper as they were about to perish.—CULLIVER v. BRAND (1658), 2 Sid. 81; 82 E. R. 1268.

99.—Prohibition was granted against the Admly. Ct. on the suggestion that a wreck derelict near a harbour in Norfolk was within the body of a county.—ADMIRAL v. LINSTED (1664), 1 Sid. 178; 82 E. R. 1042.

100.—The Admly. Ct. cannot exercise jurisdiction in civil cases, on causes of action arising infra corpus comitatus.

In a cause of collision happening in the Humber, 20 miles from the main sea, but within the flux & reflux of the tide, & at about three-fourths flood, the protest of defts. to the jurisdiction of the ct. was sustained upon proof that the site was infra corpus comitatus.—THE PUBLIC OPINION (1832), 2 Hag. Adm. 398.

Annotation:—Distd. The Raft of Timber (1844), 2 Wm. Rob. 251.

101. In river.—A ship anchored at Limehouse is not within the Admly. jurisdiction.—THE VIOLET (VIOLETT) v. BLAGUE (BLAKE) (1618), Cro. Jac. 514; 2 Roll. Rep. 49; 79 E. R. 439.

102.—Chapel Sand was held to be in the river, & not within the jurisdiction of the Admly. Ct. Cases of collision occurring there ought to be tried by a common law ct. within the county of Essex.—THE ELIZA JANE, No. 103, post.

Annotation:—Consd. The Bilbao (1860), Lush. 149.

103. Below bridges.—The Admly. Ct. has prima facie a general jurisdiction from the lowest bridges down to the sea, though there possibly may be a concurrency of jurisdiction or even an exclusive jurisdiction of the Ct. of Conservancy, which may oust the Admly. jurisdiction, but until that is clearly made out the ct. will not sustain a protest to the jurisdiction of the Admly. Ct. on the ground that the collision (the subject-matter of the cause) took place as was admitted within the jurisdiction of the Ct. of Conservancy.—THE ELIZA JANE (1836), 3 Hag. Adm. 335. S. C. No. 102, ante.

Annotation:—Consd. The Bilbao (1860), Lush. 149.

105. Between high & low water mark.—A. sued B. in the Admly. Ct. for the taking vi et armis of three ships of his in the haven of Bristol. The taking was alleged to be upon the high seas, within the admiral's jurisdiction, but was in fact inter fluxum et refluxum aquæ. A. having obtained £700 damages:—Held: he must repay the damages to B., A.'s remedy being at common law, and not a. Canadian lakes.—The Admly. jurisdiction includes the Great Lakes of Canada.—R. v. SHARP (1869), 5 P. R. 135.—CAN.

PART I. SECT. 6, SUB-SECT. 2.—A.

b.—Canadian Admiralty Cts., having the same jurisdiction over the like places, persons, matters, & things as the High Ct. of Admly. in England, have jurisdiction to try a maritime question of collision between foreign ships on the Great Lakes.—THE D. C. WHITNEY v. ST. CLAIR NAVIGATION CO. (1907), 38 S. C. R. 303; 27 C. L. T. 224; 10 Ex. C. R. 1; 6 O. W. R. 302.—CAN.

108. —.]—The part of the seashore comprised between high & low-water mark forms part of the body of the adjoining county, the J.J. of which, & not the Admlty., have jurisdiction to take cognisance of offences there committed, whether or not committed when the shore is covered with water.—EMBLETON v. BROWN (1860), 3 E. & E. 234; 30 L. J. M. C. 1; 6 Jur. N. S. 1298; 121 E. R. 429.

109. Strait between lands of same county—Solent.]—A steamship was charged with damage to a vessel by collision in the Solent. Prohibition was awarded to the Admlty. Ct.—THE LORD OF THE ISLES (undated), cited in 2 Hag. Adm. 402.

Annotation:—Reid. The Public Opinion (1832), 2 Hag. Adm. 398.

110. —.]—Water running between two lands belonging to the same county, as in the case of the Solent, may still be considered as the high seas.—THE SAXONIA, THE ECLIPSE (1861), 1 Lush. 410; 15 Moo. 111. Places within British dominions abroad.]—Upon the arrest of a ship within the Admlty. Ct.'s jurisdiction, the power of that ct. extends to acts done on the high seas, & to places within the British dominions abroad.—THE PEERLESS (1860), Lush. 30; 29 L. J. P. M. & A. 49; 2 L. 112. Ouster of Jurisdiction—Onus of proof.]—Where the ancient jurisdiction of the ct. is restricted by Act of Parliament, the burden is on those who wish to avail themselves of the restriction to give full proof of the circumstances (e.g., the distance of 3 miles from the shore) which lay the ground for the restriction, & in case of doubt the ct. will not consider its jurisdiction ousted.—THE ARGO (1858), Sw. 112.

113. —.]—To oust the ct. of its municipal jurisdiction, it lies upon deft. to prove the vessel was at a distance from shore to which the powers of the ct. do not extend.—THE GERTRUDE (1861), 30 L. J. P. M. & A. 130.

B. Foreign Roads, Rivers, and Lands.

114. Foreign roads.]—Goods were seized on board a ship lying at anchor off an African port.

On pltt. suing in Admlty. deft. moved for a prohibition on the ground that the ship was in a port, & every port is in the corpus of the land & not on the salt sea:—Held: the prohibition must be denied, as there was no port, but only roads, which are not on the body of the land, but in the sea.—WILLETS v. NEWPORT (1815), 1 Roll. Rep. 250; 81 E. R. 467.

115. Foreign tidal river—Below bridges—British ships.]—The Admlty. jurisdiction of England extends over British vessels, not only when they are sailing on the high seas, but also when they are in the rivers of a foreign territory at a place below bridges, where the tide ebbs & flows, & where great ships go.

A ship in the Garonne, within French territory at a place below bridges, where the tide ebbed & flowed & great ships went:—Held: within Admlty. jurisdiction.—R. v. ANDERSON (1868), L. R. 1 C. C. R. 161; 38 L. J. M. C. 12; 19 L. T. 400; 33 J. P. 100; 11 Cox, C. C. 198.

116. —.]—A British ocean-going merchant ship was lying afloat in the ordinary course of her trading, in the river at Rotterdam in Holland, moored to the quay. The place where the ship was lying was in the open river 16 or 18 miles from the sea, but within the ebb & flow of the tide. There were no bridges between the ship & the sea, & the place where she lay was one where large vessels usually lay. Certain securities having been stolen from the ship:—Held: the larceny took place within the jurisdiction of the Admlty. of England.—R. v. CARR & WILSON (1882), 10 Q. B. D. 76; 52 L. J. M. C. 12; 47 L. T. 450; 47 J. P. 38; 31 W. R. 121; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 604; 15 Cox, C. C. 129, C. C. R. S. C. No. 123, post.

Annotation:—Apld. The Mecca, [1895] P. 95, C. A.

117. Foreign river—Foreign parties.]—Semble: the ct. has no jurisdiction in a foreign river, the cause being between foreigners.—THE IDA, Nos. 1597, 1607, post.

118. Cause of action arising on foreign land.]—The Spanish ambassador libelled deft. in the Admlty. Ct. because he cut certain wood in Spain & brought it to England:—Held: (1) the cause of action was not within the jurisdiction of the admiral; (2) prohibition must be granted; (3) the ambassador might sue in K. B.—SPAIN (AMBASSADOR) v. POUNTES (1614), 1 Roll. Rep. 133; 81 E. R. 381.

Annotation:—Consd. Spain v. Hullett (1828), 2 State Tr. N. S. 305.

119. —.]—An action for suing in Admlty. where the cause arises upon land may be brought by bill, notwithstanding 18 Eliz. c. 5; but it must be stated in partibus transmarinis.—BALL v. TRELAWNY (1641), Cro. Car. 603; 79 E. R. 1119.

C. Former Criminal Jurisdiction.

Sec. generally, CRIMINAL LAW & PROCEDURE.

120. Not crime within realm.]—The admiral ought not to meddle with anything done within the realm, but only with things done upon the sea. If a man be killed or slain within the arms of the sea where a man may see from one part of the land to the other, the coroner shall inquire of it, & not the admiral.—ADMIRALTY CASE (1609), 13 Co. Rep. 51; 77 E. R. 1461. S. C. No. 161, post.

121. Not crime within body of county.]—The Admty. Ct. has no jurisdiction in case of robberies on the Thames, this being within the body of a county.—R. v. MARSH (1615), 3 Bulst. 27; 81 E. R. 23. S. C. No. 639, post.

122. Crime—Ship on high seas.—A ship was lying off Wampa, which was on a river 20 or 30 miles from the sea. No evidence was given as to the tide flowing there or not. Goods having been stolen from the ship:—Held: there was sufficient evidence that the ship was on the high seas to give the Central Criminal Ct. jurisdiction.—R. v. ALLEN (1837), 7 C. & P. 664; 1 Mood. C. C. 494.

Annotations.—Distd. R. v. Hughes (1857), 7 Cox, C. C. 301, C. C. R. Appl. R. v. Anderson (1868), 1 L. R. 1 C. C. R. 161. Mentd. R. v. Carr (1882), 10 Q. B. D. 76.

123. — British ship—Foreign tidal river—Below bridges.—R. v. CARR & WILSON, No. 116, ante.

— Not British ship—On high seas.—A murder was committed on the high seas, the ship being foreign-built, & the crew foreign. The murderer being brought to England & indicted, the ship's register was produced, which stated that the owner resided in London. But it was proved he was an alien born, & no naturalisation or denization was proved:—Held: (1) the prima facie evidence contained in the register was rebutted; (2) the ship not being shown to be a British ship, the ct. had no jurisdiction to try the prisoner.—R. v. BJORNSEN (1865), L. & C. 545; 6 New Rep. 179; 34 L. J. M. C. 180; 12 L. T. 473; 29 J. P. 373; 11 Jur. N. S. 589; 13 W. R. 664; 10 Cox, C. C. 74; 2 Mar. L. C. 210, C. C. R.

125. — Within three miles of shore—Foreigner.—The prisoner was indicted at the Central Criminal Ct. for manslaughter. He was a foreigner & in command of a foreign ship, passing within 3 miles of the shore of England on a voyage to a foreign port; & whilst within that distance his ship ran into a British ship & sank her, whereby a passenger on board the latter ship was drowned. The facts of the case were such as to amount to manslaughter by English law:—Held: the Central Criminal Ct. had no jurisdiction to try prisoner for the offence charged, on the grounds (1) that prior to 28 Hen. 8, c. 15, the admiral had no jurisdiction to try offences by foreigners on board foreign ships, whether within or without the limit of 3 miles from the shore of England; that that & the subsequent Acts only transferred to the common law cts. & the Central Criminal Ct. the jurisdiction formerly possessed by the admiral; (2) that by the principles of international law, the power of a nation over the sea within 3 miles of its coast is only for certain limited purposes; & that Parliament could not, consistently with those principles, apply English criminal law within those limits.—R. v. KEYN (1876), 2 Ex. D. 63; 46 L. J. M. C. 17; 41 J. P. 517; 13 Cox, C. C. 403, C. C. R.

PART I. SECT. 6, SUB-SECT. 3.—A (a).

130 i. Colonial Government's ship—Trading vessel.—An action was brought in the Admty. jurisdiction of the Supreme Ct. for damages arising through the collision of ptf's. steamer with a trading vessel belonging to the Govt. A nominal deft. was appointed & the writ issued against him, which was set aside on the ground that there was no jurisdiction by virtue of Claims against Govt. & Crown Suits Act, 1912 (No. 2), to bring the action under Colonial Cts. of Admty. Act, 1890 (c. 27). On appeal:—Held: the writ was properly issued.—SOUTH COAST ROAD METAL QUARRIES v. WHITEFIELD (1914), 14 S. R. N. S. W. 300; N. S. W. W. N. —AUS.

130 ii. — Pilot brig—Arrest.—A Govt. brig employed in supplying pilots to vessels was arrested under a proceeding in rem:—Held: the brig, by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 126, had become the property of the Crown, & was entitled to the same exemption from arrest as all other Queen's ships, & the proceeding in rem was illegal.—*BROWN v. 130. Colonial Government's ship.—An action in rem is a method of impleading the owners of a vessel, & if the owner is the King, the action cannot be maintained.

A vessel which is the property of a colonial Govt., although built to be used as a ferry boat for the purpose of carrying passengers & merchandise for hire between one part of a ry. owned by the Govt. & another, enjoys the same immunity from arrest as the property of the Crown, & is not liable to an action for salvage.—*YOUNG v. (b) Ships in Government Service.

131. Requisitioned ship.—A ship which has been requisitioned by the Crown is exempt from arrest so long as she remains under requisition in the service of the Crown, & this exemption extends as well to claims of salvage as to claims of collision or other claims.—THE BROADMAYNE, [1916] P. 64; 85 L. J. P. 153; 114 L. T. 891; 32 T. L. R. 304;

a. Troopship.—A troopship will be discharged from arrest without bail upon an affidavit showing that she is Crown property & employed in the public service. In such cases the promovements may proceed against the owner or master of the impugnant ship personally; & when such proceedings are instituted, it is the practice of the Lords of the Admty. to direct an appearance to be given for defence of the action, in order that the ct. may adjudicate upon it.—THE RESOLUTE (1859), 4 Ir. 140. Mail boat of foreign sovereign state.]—An unarmed vessel belonging to a foreign sovereign state, & employed in what is considered by that state to be a national service, is entitled to the privilege of a vessel of war as to freedom from arrest in a suit in rem. Such immunity is not forfeited by the partial employment of the vessel in carrying merchandise & passengers where her substantial employment is of a national character. Semble, any property of a foreign sovereign or state used for public purposes is exempt from the jurisdiction of any tribunal in England.

A suit in rem, though primarily a proceeding against the ship or res, is indirectly a process compelling the appearance of the owner to defend his property, & is not applicable where the ship or res is the property of a foreign sovereign or sovereign state against whom an action will not lie by reason of international law or the comity of nations.—THE PARLEMENT BELGE (1880), 5 P. 141. Ship requisitioned by foreign Government.]

—A ship requisitioned by the Govt. of a state, one of Great Britain's allies in the European war:—Held: entitled to a similar privilege from arrest by British plffs. while under requisition in the service of that Govt. as a ship requisitioned by the British Govt.—THE MESSICANO, No. 706, post.

142. Vessel of foreign sovereign — Trading.]—

In a cause of damage instituted by the owners, master, & crew of the B. against the C. & her freight, an appearance under protest was entered on behalf of the Khedive of Egypt & his Minister of Marine:—Held: the Khedive was not entitled to the privilege of a sovereign prince.

A suit in rem to enforce a damage lien may be entertained without any violation of international law, though the owner of the res be the sovereign of a foreign state, & such a suit may possibly be entertained even against property connected with the ius coronæ. If a sovereign assumes the character of a trader, & sends a vessel belonging to him to this country to trade here, he must be considered to have waived any privilege which might otherwise attach to the vessel as the property of a sovereign (SIR R. PHILLIMORE).—THE CHARKIEH (1873), L. R. 4 A. & E. 59; 42 L. J. Adm. 17; 28 L. T. 513; 1 Asp. M. L. C. 581. S. C. No. 145, post.

Upon her trial trip she came into collision with & sank the B.; the owners of the B. caused her to be arrested by a warrant of the Admty. Ct. An application having been made for a prohibition:—Held: (1) the

b. Public vessel of foreign sovereign state—Immunity of officer in charge.]—The immunity of a vessel, the property of a foreign sovereign state, & in its public use, from proceedings for damages arising out of a collision alleged to have been caused by the negligent navigation of the vessel extends to the officer in charge of her, & all proceedings against him in an action in personam will be stayed at the request of such state. Semble: the immunity cannot be claimed by the officer himself. The Constitution (1879), 4 P. D. 39; The Admty. Ct. was the proper tribunal to determine whether the C. was entitled to the immunity allowed to the vessels of a sovereign state; (2) a prohibition ought not to issue.—THE CHARKIEH (1873), L. R. 8 Q. B. 197; 42 L. J. Q. B. 75; 28 L. T. 190; 21 W. R. 437; 1 Asp. M. L. C. 533.

144. — Waiver of immunity.—A vessel, the property of a foreign sovereign, was arrested in an action for damage by collision. Thereupon the local agent for the vessel in England, without the knowledge or authority of the foreign sovereign, instructed solrs., who procured the vessel's release by giving an undertaking to put in bail, & also entered an appearance in the action unconditionally. Pltfs., on being informed of the facts, refused to allow the action to be dismissed:—Held: (1) the action must be dismissed with costs, as no action in rem lay against a vessel owned by a foreign sovereign & intended for public service; (2) the giving of bail to procure the vessel's release & the entry of appearance were not a waiver of the privilege of freedom from arrest.—THE JASSY, [1906] P. 270; 75 L. C. Private Persons.

147. Salvage—Owners liable though property in vessel transferred.—An action in personam lies against the owners of a vessel which has been saved, even though the property has been transferred to others & the lien lost.

Pltfs., the owners of a steam tug, entered into a contract with defts., who were in possession of five steel barges, by which the tug was to tow the barges from C. to P. for an ascertained sum. The tug & barges during the progress of the towage were twice obliged to seek shelter, & the barges twice broke adrift & had to be saved by the tug, & on one of these occasions the tug saved the lives of some of the bargemen. At the end of the towage, two of the barges were given up to the Govt., with whom defts. were under contract to build & deliver the barges. An action of salvage was brought in personam against defts. in respect of alleged salvage services to these two barges & in rem against the remaining three barges:—Held: (1) pltfs. entitled to salvage; (2) an action in personam lay against defts.—FIVE STEEL BARGES (1890), 15 P. 149. — Government stores on chartered ship—Charterers liable.—Govt. stores were shipped on a chartered vessel under bills of lading signed by the master by direction of the charterers not exempting the shipowner from negligence, & subject to the stipulations of a freight engagement entered into with the charterers by a Govt. department under which the owners (the term including the charterers) were responsible for the safe delivery of the stores. The vessel, through negligence of her master & crew, came into collision with another vessel & was so much damaged as to require salvage assistance in putting back to the port of shipment, where the stores were returned to the Govt. department. In an action of salvage in personam by the salvors against the charterers:—Held: (1) as the charterers were directly interested in the preservation of the goods, the salvage service was a benefit to them; (2) the action lay.—THE PORT VICTOR, CARGO EX, [1901] P. 243; 70 L. J. P. 52; 84 L. T. 677; 49 W. R. 578; 17 T. L. R. 538; 9 Asp. M. L. C. 182, C. A. S. C. No. 134, ante; No. 611, post.

diction of everything else dependent upon it.—RADLEY v. EGGLESFIELD, No. 637, post.

159. Services on land—Salvage services.]—Where a vessel took fire at sea & salvors went to her assistance & conducted her into a harbour where her cargo was unladen:—Held: the objection that the unloading of the cargo was not a salvage service, but a service on shore, over which the Admty. Ct. had no jurisdiction, could not be allowed.—THE ROSALIE (1853), 1 Ecc. & Ad. 188; 18 Jur. 337.

160. Fraud.]—Where a deed comes in by incident, the Admty. may try whether it was fraudulent.—BUCK v. ATWOOD (1727), 2 Stra. 761; 93 E. R. 832.

161. Execution.]—The Acts concerning the jurisdiction of the Admty. are to be intended of a power to hold plea, & not of a power to award execution; for, notwithstanding the Acts, the judge of the Admty. may do execution within the body of the county. He may make execution for an amercement of deft. of his goods in corpore comitatus; & if he have none may arrest him within the county.—ADMIRALTY CASE, No. 120, ante.

Part II.—Jurisdiction in Particular Cases.

SECT. 1.—POSSESSION.

SUB-SECT. 1.—LIMITS TO THE JURISDICTION.

A. Title in Question.

(a) Before Admiralty Court Act, 1840 (c. 65).

162. Jurisdiction limited—Title not in question.]—In respect of disputes of British subjects, the jurisdiction of the ct., as to questions of property, is extremely limited. It interposes to transfer possession, when no direct question of property is involved; but direct questions of property have been long withdrawn to other jurisdictions.—THE MARTIN OF NORFOLK (1802), 4 Ch. Rob. 203. S. C. No. 169, post.

163. Where title in dispute—No jurisdiction.]—Where the title to a ship is in dispute between the parties, the question must be determined in another ct., & not in the Admty. Ct.—THE GUARDIAN (1800), 3 Ch. Rob. 93.

Annotations:—Apld. The Fruit Preserver (1828), 2 Hag. Adm. 181. Reid. Duncan v. M'Calmont (1841), 3 Beav. 409.

164. ———.]—The Admty. Ct. is not permitted to entertain questions of disputed title, but still retains jurisdiction over causes of possession.—THE WARRIOR (1818), 2 Dods. 288.

Annotation:—Apld. The John (1830), 2 Hag. Adm. 305.

165. ———.]—The Admty. Ct. does not interfere in cases of adverse title.—THE FRUIT PRESERVER (1828), 2 Hag. Adm. 181.

Annotation:—Reid. The John (1830), 2 Hag. Adm. 305.

166. ———.]—In a cause of possession the ct. will not examine the title of a person in bonâ fide possession of a vessel till it is impeached. Where the only title rests on a conditional assignment of a vessel as a security not reduced into possession, the Admty. Ct. has not jurisdiction to disturb the person actually in possession under a subsequent sale; nor does it vary the case, because the question comes before it on appeal from a Vice-Admty. Ct. which has exercised the jurisdiction, more especially as the merits disclosed do not appear to warrant the decision.—THE JOHN (1830), 2 Hag. Adm. 305.

(b) Under Admiralty Court Act, 1840 (c. 65).

167. Jurisdiction—Title in question.]—In a cause of possession the Admty. Ct. has jurisdiction to try the question of title.—THE MARGARET MITCHELL (1858), Sw. 382; 7 L. T. 803; 4 Jur. N. S. 1193.

168. ——— Limits.]—The province of the Admty. Ct. is merely to determine that the property in the vessel is in the registered owner, but not the terms on which it is so.

A vessel had been purchased by a person who paid his deposit. By agreement he was to pay the residue to P., the vendor's solr., on a certain day. On that day the greater portion of the money was paid over to P. & the vessel delivered to the purchaser; but the bill of sale not being handed over to him, at his request a small portion of the purchase-money was left unpaid. The vessel having been arrested in the Admty. Ct. by assignees, who refused to recognise the transaction, upon a bill filed for an injunction & specific performance:—Held: it was a proper case for interference of the ct.—HUGHES v. MORRIS (1849), 14 L. T. O. S. 306; 13 Jur. 1065.

B. Foreign Ships.

169. Consent of parties.]—The Admty. Ct. may entertain a cause of possession respecting a foreign ship by consent of the parties, where both are foreigners.—THE MARTIN OF NORFOLK, No. 162, ante.

170. ——— Or of representative of foreign state—Sentence of foreign court.]—The ct. in general declines to interfere in a cause of possession between foreigners, without consent of the parties or sanction of the representative of the foreign state. The sentence of a foreign ct. is an equivalent.—THE SEE REUTER (1811), 1 Dods. 22. S. C. No. 153, ante.

Annotation:—Apld. The Evangelistria (1876), 2 P. D. 241.

171. ———.]—The Admty. Div. will exercise jurisdiction, in a cause of possession relating to a foreign ship, between two foreigners so far as to inquire into the position of the respective claimants, provided that the parties consent or the representative of the foreign state intervenes.

In pursuance of the decree of a Greek ct. the Greek consular authorities, on arrival of a ship in England, dismissed debts, & put the ship in possession of a master appointed by plff. Defts. forcibly ejected the master & took possession of the ship. At the hearing the Greek Consul, acting on behalf of the Greek Govt., expressed the desire that the ct. should exercise jurisdiction:—Held: the Admty. Div. had jurisdiction to examine into the claims of the parties.—THE EVANGELISTRIA (1876), 2 P. D. 241; 46 L. J. P. 1; 35 L. T. 410; 25 W. R. 255; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 264. S. C. Nos. 764, 783, post.

Annotations:—Foll. The Vivar (1876), 2 P. D. 29, C. A. Dist. The Agincourt (1877), 2 P. D. 239.

172. Claim by British subject.—The Admty. Ct. has power to inquire into the title in cases in which British subjects lay claim to a ship coming to England in possession & as property of foreigners.—THE EXPERIMENTO (1815), 2 Dods. 38.

SUB-SECT. 2.—EXERCISE OF JURISDICTION.

173. Claim by majority of interests.—The power of the Admty. Ct. to interpose for the purpose of altering possession of a vessel is confined to cases where the majority of interests is with the party invoking the ct.'s interference. A motion to change possession at petition of a moiety of the interests was rejected.—THE ELIZABETH & JANE (1841), 1 Wm. Rob. 278; 1 Notes of Cases, 177.

174. Claim by moiety not sufficient—Remedy.—A motion to decree possession to the sole extrix. of L. deceased, who was whilst living the true & lawful owner of one half part or share of a ship, was refused, but the ct. will in such case grant a monition calling upon the other interests to appear & show cause.—THE EGYPTIENNE (1825), 1 Hag. Adm. 346 n.

Annotation:—Expld. The Elizabeth & Jane (1841), 1 Wm. Rob. 278.

175. Legal title recognised.—C. brought a cause of possession against T., the asserted owner in possession, under a transfer from M., for whom it was suggested that C. had made the original purchase. C. was in possession of the bill of sale:—Held: (1) whether C. purchased as trustee for another, or under a private understanding, it was unnecessary to inquire, because the legal interest, established before the ct., on his part, excluded all considerations of other equitable titles, which, if they existed, must be left to be enforced in other cts.; (2) he was the legal proprietor under the bill of sale that had been executed to him.—THE SISTERS (1804), 5 Ch. Rob. 155. S. C. on previous proceedings (1801), 3 Ch. Rob. 214; (1802), 4 Ch. Rob. 276.

176. —.—In cases of possession, the ct. looks to the legal estate, & not to a beneficial or equitable interest in asserted part-owners.—THE VALIANT (1839), 1 Wm. Rob. 64; 7 L. T. 442, 803.

177. Unless disputed.—In a cause of possession the ct. will not decline to interfere unless it appears that a question of property is involved. It is for the party proceeded against to set out the grounds upon which he resists the demand of a party claiming as owner.—THE SISTERS (1801), 3 Ch. Rob. 214; S. C. on further proceedings (1802), 4 Ch. Rob. 276; (1804), 5 Ch. Rob. 155.

178. Derivative title—When valid.—The ct. is disposed to pay particular respect to derivative titles, when fairly possessed; there must be a sequel of transactions, continued in a course of time, which shall be held conclusive, to cure antecedent defects, & to give security to the title of a bona fide purchaser.

A British ship had been taken on a voyage from Saffee to Lisbon, by an Algerine corsair, & sold by the Dey of Algiers to a merchant of Minorca, & by him sold, on surrender of Minorca to British arms, to the present owner, a merchant of London. On coming into the port of London, a warrant had been applied for to arrest on the part of the former British owner; but the ct. refused a warrant, & directed a monition to issue calling on the possessor to show cause why she should not be restored to the former British owner:—Held: (1) as the Dey had intervened to guarantee transfer of the ship to the Spanish purchaser he had legalised the act; (2) it was now much too late for the ct. to interfere for the purpose of annulling the transfer, which had been made with perfect good faith on the part of purchaser, & for an equivalent consideration; (3) this was not the case of a purchaser from a piratical captor.—THE HELENA (1801), 4 Ch. Rob. 3.

Annotations:—Consd. The Harmony (1815), Coop. G. 325. Refd. The Telegrafo (1871), 20 W. R. 242, P. C.; The Charkieh (1873), L. R. 4 A. & B. 59.

179. Equitable rights—How far recognised.—The Admty. Ct. will not interfere to dispossess the bona fide owner of a moiety of a vessel. When the ct. is applied to, at the instance of a legal owner, to exercise its jurisdiction in a cause of possession, it will have due consideration for all equitable claims, although it may not have jurisdiction to enforce equitable rights at the instance of those claiming such rights.

P., master of a ship in possession, was the registered owner of twenty-eight shares only; R. was registered owner of the remaining thirty-two. It was proved, to the satisfaction of the ct., that R. held four of his shares as trustee for P.:—Held: P. entitled to retain possession.—THE VICTORIA (1859), Sw. 408; 5 Jur. N. S. 204; 7 W. R. 330.

180. —.—A transfer of shares in a ship by sale at auction was not legally completed as required by Registry Act, 1845 (c. 89), though the purchaser had paid a large sum of money. The vendors proceeding against purchaser, in a cause of possession, were not allowed their costs. In a case of palpable injustice, the ct. would hold its hand, unless compelled by a superior ct. to proceed.—THE VIRTUE (1853), 1 Ecc. & Ad. 77; 17 Jur. 843.

181. Conditions in which jurisdiction exercised.—The ct. is in the habit of transferring possession from the actual holder, by its own movement, or at the instance of other cts. which have no direct power for that purpose; but it is bound to consider itself as moving within very narrow limits, if it proceeds at all originally upon a question of title. It must be in cases extremely simple that it acts on a merely preferable title to be reached by its own judgment. Where possession is gained by force & violence, or by fraud manifest upon the face of the transaction; or where the party in possession is avowedly entitled only as a minor owner in opposition to the majority of interests, the ct. feels no hesitation; but where a course of transactions in- volving fraud is objected, it declines entering into the question, & leaves it to be determined by inquiry of cts. which have ampler means of arriving at the truth, & the real justice of the case. It is only in simple cases that it can act with effect; but in those which, being complex, require long & minute investigation, it cannot proceed with safety.

Where an extremely old ship, very much worn, both by time & tempest, sustained such damage in a storm as occasioned her detention at a foreign port for a considerable time to receive repairs, & the ship was sold by the master, without any authority (as alleged) from the registered owners, to W., who repaired the vessel, which was arrested at Liverpool:—Held: the ct. would not interfere because (1) it only interfered in cases which were very simple, & in this case the transaction impeached as fraudulent (which was strongly denied) rested on a series of events & on a multitude of documents; (2) on the facts there was nothing that impeached the title of W. as it appeared that there was ample authority given to the master to sell, both by the conduct of the parties at home, & by the circumstances in which the property was placed, & that in the sale all due caution was used, & attention shown to the interests of former owners, & the previous authority of the master had been confirmed by subsequent recognitions & approvals.—THE PRIT (1824), 1 Hag. Adm. 240.

Annotations:—Apld. The John (1830), 2 Hag. Adm. 305; The Beatrice, otherwise the Rappahannock (1866), 36 L. J. Adm. 9.

182. Wrongdoer.]—The Admty. Ct. has, in a cause of possession jurisdiction to take a vessel from a wrongdoer & to deliver it to the rightful owner.

Where it appeared upon a rule nisi for a prohibition to restrain the Admty. Ct. from proceeding in a cause of possession that the proctor for debts. had merely asserted them to be owners generally, & the other party had put in an allegation, by which it appeared he was the registered owner, & the vessel had wrongfully come into debts' possession, & the latter had not pleaded any title, the ct. discharged the rule for a prohibition.—Re BLANSHARD (1823), 2 B. & C. 244; sub nom. BAXTER v. BLANCHARD, 3 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 177; 107 E. R. 374.

183. —.]—The Admty. Ct. had, even when its jurisdiction was more restricted, authority to decree possession of a vessel to the owner, who had been deprived of it by force, violence or fraud.—THE BEATRICE (otherwise THE RAPPAHANNOCK) (1866), 36 L. J. Adm. 9. S. C. No. 185, post.

184. Purchaser—Sale without authority.]—The possession of a ship, time having been allowed for an appearance by the purchaser, was decreed in pænam to the former owners, upon affidavits that the ship, having been abandoned by the master, was sold without their concurrence or consent.—THE LAGAN (1838), 3 Hag. Adm. 418.

185. — Vendor's lien.]—The American Govt. was held not entitled to possession of a vessel partly purchased by the late Govt. of the Confederate States without satisfying the vendors' lien for the unpaid portion of the purchase-money.—THE BEATRICE (OTHERWISE THE RAPPAHANNOCK) No. 183, ante.

186. — Rectification of register—Mistake.]—A British ship was mtgd. by an instrument in the form prescribed by M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), which was duly registered. The mtgor. died intestate, & the mtgee. sold the ship under his power of sale & executed a bill of sale to the purchaser. By mistake, a receipt for payment of the mtge. money was indorsed on the mtge. & signed by mtgee. & produced to the registrar of shipping, who recorded same. Afterwards the bill of sale was produced to the registrar, who refused to register it on the ground that the property in the ship had vested in the representative of mtgor. In order to complete purchaser's title a suit in rem was instituted on behalf of mtgee. & purchaser:—Held: the ct. had jurisdiction to grant a decree declaring that purchaser was entitled to possession of the ship.—THE ROSE (1873), L. R. 4 A. & E. 6; 42 L. J. Adm. 11; 28 L. T. 291; 21 W. R. 511; 1 Asp. M. L. C. 567. S. C. No. 256, post.

187. — Entry of invalid mortgage.]—The purchaser of a ship mtgd. it to the vendor to secure payment of the purchase-money. At the same time he signed a blank form of mtge., which he handed to debt., who had negotiated the purchase, for a special purpose. Debt. wrongfully filled up the blank form as a second mtge. to himself, to secure an alleged debt to himself, & procured it to be registered. The ct. having ordered the cancellation of the document as being invalid:—Held: the ct. had power, by virtue of its inherent jurisdiction, to rectify the register by ordering the entry of the invalid mtge. to be expunged.—BROOD v. BROOMHALL, [1906] 1 K. B. 571; 75 L. J. K. B. 548.

188. Master—Extent of estoppel.]—A master of a vessel cannot in a cause of possession dispute the owner's title.

It is a matter of ordinary course in this ct., in causes of possession, where sole owners of a vessel, or the majority of persons who have a right or title, join in the suit, to displace the master who may have possession, & restore her to the owners: where questions have arisen of great difficulty as to complicated title, the ct. has declined to interfere. The only extent to which a master can allege the title to be in another person is where it is done for the purpose of inducing the ct. to give further time for the appearance of the assignee of the sole owner: the ct. would allow a master or other person to make such an application, & would grant further time if necessary (DR. LUSHINGTON).—THE WINDSOR CASTLE (1841), 1 Notes of Cases, 118; (1843), 2 Notes of Cases, liii. Supp.

Annotation:—Distd. The Alicia Annie & The Amrita v. The Soindia (1865), 2 Mar. L. C. 232

189. — Removal—Though part-owner.]—The majority of part-owners have a right to remove the captain though he is also a part-owner, & the ct. will decree an order to the marshal to deliver the ship & a motion against the captain to deliver up the register.—ADAMS v. CROUCH (1771), Burrell, 110. S. C. No. 200, post.

190. — — —.]—The dispossession of a master is, in its nature, not an uncommon proceeding; all that the ct. requires in cases where the master is not an owner is that the majority of the proprietors should declare their disinclination to continue him in possession. In the case of a master & part-owner, something more is required before the ct. will proceed to dispossess a person who is also a proprietor in the vessel, & whose possession the common law is, upon general principles, inclined to maintain. It is not, however, by any means unprecedented for the ct. to proceed even to that extent; but some special reason is commonly stated to induce the ct. to interpose. "That the master is irregular in his accounts with his owners"

PART II. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 2.

1891. Master—Removal—Though part-owner—Balance due as defence to suit for possession.—The fact of an outstanding balance being due to the captain of a vessel as part-owner is not a defence to a suit for possession;

& the ct. will, notwithstanding, make a decree of possession, with costs.—THE ARGONAUT (1850), 5 Ir. Jur. O. S. 251 (Adm.).—IR.

191. ———.]—In a cause of possession brought by the owner of the greater part of a vessel, the master, owning the remaining part, is not entitled to retain possession of the vessel upon an offer of security to the amount of his co-owner's interest.—THE KENT (1862), Lush. 495.

192. ——— Ground for removal.]—An attempt by the master of a ship to defraud constitutes a sufficient necessity for removal to induce the ct. to act under M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 240. The power of the ct. acting under s. 240 is not limited to the class of cases enumerated in s. 239.—THE ROYALIST (1863), Brown. & Lush. 46; 32 L. J. P. M. & A. 105; 9 Jur. N. S. 852.

193. ——— Ship's papers—Lien.]—The Admty. Div. has power, upon application of a ship's owners, to order a master who has been dismissed from their employment to deliver up the certificate of registry & other papers & property belonging to the ship where he refused to surrender them. Semle: a master, whether co-owner or not, can have no lien upon a certificate of registry or ship's papers in case of wrongful dismissal by the managing owners.—THE ST. OLAF (1876), 35 L. T. 428; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 268.

SECT. 2.—CO-OWNERSHIP AND RESTRAINT.

SUB-SECT. 1.—NATURE OF JURISDICTION.

A. At Common Law,

195. Disputes between co-owners—Arrest till security given.]—If one of several part-owners of a ship objects to a voyage the others propose making, he may by process out of the Admty. arrest the ship, & stop her until the other part-owners give security for her safe return.—BLACKET v. ANSLEY (1697), 1 Ld. Raym. 235; 91 E. R. 1053.

198. ———.]—A prohibition was moved for to the Admty. in a suit brought by one part-owner against the other who would go to sea with the ship in order to oblige him to give security:—Held: if security was offered & refused a prohibition would be granted, but not before.—ANON. (1730), 1 Barn. K. B. 410; sub nom. DYMOCK (DYMCOCK) v. CHANDLER (1730), 1 Barn. K. B. 415; Fitz-G. 197; 2 Stra. 890; 94 E. R. 276, 280.

199. ———.]—Where there are several part-owners of a ship, owners of the less shares may arrest the ship in the Admty. & compel a security to be given by the others before they be permitted to leave port.—OUSTON v. HEDDEN (1745), 1 Wils. 101; 95 E. R. 515.

200. ———.]—A suit may be maintained in the Admty. by one part-owner against another who would take the ship to sea to oblige him to give security.—ADAMS v. CROUCH, No. 189, ante.

201. ———.]—The Admty. Ct. alone has jurisdiction to decide in a summary way between part-owners as to who should have control of the vessel.—THE MARY & ANNE (1771), cited Burrell, 148.

202. ———.]—The Admty. Ct. has authority to arrest & detain a ship, upon application of a part-owner who dissents from her intended employment, until security be given by the other part-owners to the full value of his share.—THE APOLLO (1824), 1 Hag. Adm. 306. S. C. Nos. 225, 233, 1239, post.

203. ——— Enforcement of security.]—If one of several part-owners of a ship object to a voyage he can compel them to enter into a stipulation in the Admty. Ct. for her safe return. Qu.: whether he can maintain a suit in the Admty. upon such stipulation.—DEGRAVE v. HEDGES (1707), 2 Ld. Raym. 1285; 92 E. R. 343; sub nom. GRAVE v. 204. ——— Possession decreed—Subsequent detention.]—In a dispute between co-owners of a ship with reference to its possession, F. was holder of two eighth shares, & the ship was in his dock for repairs. W., to whom possession had been decreed, was owner of five eighth shares. F., under an order of the ct., had delivered up the ship's register. W. was put in possession, & accepted the shipkeeper recommended by F., & had access to the vessel, but it was unable to be taken from dock owing to another vessel being in the way, which vessel would be there for some months. A motion to attach F. to enforce due execution of the decree for possession was refused.

The ct. has gone as far as it can, it has restore possession to the owner of a majority of interests & he is in possession, & if the vessel is detained the remedy must be sought elsewhere to divest possession out of the hands of an unlawful detainer (LORD STOWELL).—THE JOHN OF LONDON (1825), 1 Hag. Adm. 342.

B. Under Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10).

205. Extent of jurisdiction.]—The above Act, by s. 8, confers upon the Admty. Ct. full power to deal with questions between co-owners which come under the categories of ownership, possession, employment, & earnings, & to settle accounts relating thereto.

Defts., part-owners of a vessel, in a suit for sale brought against them by their co-owners, set up in their answer a claim for damages alleged to have been occasioned by negligence or other wrongful act of such co-owners. Pltfs. in their reply denied the jurisdiction of the ct. On demurrer to the reply:—Held: the Admty. Ct. had jurisdiction to entertain such claim.—THE CEYLON (1868), 18 L. T. 417; 3 Mar. L. PART II. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.—B.

205 I. Extent of jurisdiction—Colonial Courts of Admiralty Act, 1890 (c. 27).]—Pltfs., part-owners of the S., sued defts., part-owners thereof, for money paid & disbursements made by pltfs. for defts. Defts. sought to set aside the writ on the grounds that the ct. had no jurisdiction; that the co-owners could not come to ct. for an account, or recover an amount where they kept the accounts themselves; also that there was no dispute as to the amount.—Held: (1) by Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 8, the High Ct. had jurisdiction to decide all questions between co-owners, & such jurisdiction might be exercised in Canada

Sect. 2.—Co-ownership & restraint: Sub-sect. 1, B.; sub-sect. 2, A. B. & C.; sub-sect. 3.]

Pltf. sold his share in the ship to a third person, & afterwards instituted a suit in rem in the Admty. Ct. to have an account taken between himself & deft. in relation to the employment & earnings of the ship during the time he & deft. were co-owners:—Held: as the suit related to questions which arose between pltf. & deft. while they were co-owners, the ct. had jurisdiction to entertain the suit, notwithstanding pltf. had ceased to be a co-owner at the time of institution of the suit.—THE LADY OF THE LAKE (1870), 1 L. R. 3 A. & E. 29; 39 L. J. Adm. 40; 21 L. T. 683; 18 W. R. 528; 3 Mar. L. C. 317. S. C. No. 219, post.

207. — Transferee for value without notice.]—An action of co-ownership was instituted on behalf of G. against a British vessel, & against H., deft. intervening. The statement of claim alleged, inter alia, that by bill of sale duly registered in 1867 deft., as sole owner of the vessel, transferred for valuable consideration a moiety of same to T., who, by a subsequent bill of sale duly registered in 1876, transferred the moiety of the vessel to pltf. for value. Deft., in his defence, denied that he had at any time signed a bill of sale transferring any shares in the vessel to T., & alleged, inter alia, that if any such bill of sale had been registered, same was made & registered fraudulently. At the hearing of the action the execution & registration of the bills of sale were proved. The ct. thereupon directed that the question whether the fraud alleged could affect the rights of pltf. should be raised on demurrer. Pltf. thereupon demurred to so much of the statement of defence as alleged fraud:—Held: the demurrer must be sustained on the ground that, the legal ownership in the moiety of the vessel having passed to pltf. for valuable consideration by the execution & registration of a bill of sale without notice of fraud, pltf. had thereby acquired a title to same as against deft.—THE HORLOCK (1877), 2 P. D. 243; 47 L. J. P. 5; 36 L. T. 622; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 421. S. C. No. 220, post.

208. — Person agreeing to buy.]—The managing owners of the B. K. in 1882 agreed to sell deft. V. one sixty-fourth share in the B. K., for which he gave a bill of exchange for £156, & received from them a receipt for same as "being one sixty-fourth share in the B. K." In 1883 the managing owners sent V. £8 in respect of profits on his share, & sent him a statement of accounts. No bill of sale of the share was ever executed by the managing owners, & it appeared their shares in the B. K. were mtgd. at the time of sale to V., & they never were in a position to redeem them. Certain owners having paid losses incidental to the working of the ship, now sued V. as a co-owner for his proportion of the losses:—Held: (1) notwithstanding the receipt by V. of the £8, he was not, either at law or in equity, a co-owner; (2) the managing owners had no authority to pledge his credit; (3) V. was not liable.—Qu., whether s. 8 of the above Act, giving the Admty. Ct. jurisdiction to decide questions between co-owners, is not confined to questions between registered co-owners.—THE BONNIE KATE (1887), 57 L. T. 203; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 149. S. C. No. 210, post.

SUB-SECT. 2.—EXERCISE OF JURISDICTION.

A. Persons subject to Jurisdiction.

209. Co-owners—Of shares ascertained.]—The Admty. Ct. is open all the year round to applications by part-owners to restrain the sailing of ships without their consent, until security is given to the amount of the respective shares. But where the shares are not ascertained, that ct. has no jurisdiction; & in such case the Ch. Ct. will exercise a concurrent jurisdiction, by injunction, to restrain the sailing of a ship until the share of the party complaining shall be ascertained, & security given to the amount of it.—ITALY v. GOODSON (1816), 2 Mer. 77; 35 E. R. 870.

210. Purchaser of share — Not registered.]—THE BONNIE KATE, No. 208, ante.

211. Joint-tenants—No jurisdiction.]—The ct. has declined to interfere between joint-tenants in respect of possession of their ship.—THE MARGARET, Nos. 226, 231, 236, 797, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 226, post.

212. Managing owner—Added as defendant.]—Where an action is brought in rem against a ship by owners of certain shares therein claiming possession & an account against the managing owner, & the latter makes default in appearing, the ct. will order such managing owner to be joined as a deft., so that his accounts may be investigated, & will give possession to pltf. if they hold a majority of shares; but will not order, before reference, a sale of deft.'s shares to satisfy pltf.'s costs & any sum found due at the reference.—THE NATIVE PEARL (1877), 37 L. T. 542; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 515.

213. Foreign ship—No jurisdiction.]—The ct. has no jurisdiction, in the case of a foreign ship, to entertain a cause of possession at the suit of the majority of co-owners against the master, who is a part-owner, all being foreigners.—THE JOHAN & SIEGMUND (1810), Edw. 241.

214. — Though British part-owner.]—The ct. has no power, at the suit of a British part-owner of a foreign ship, to arrest her until bail is given for her safe return to her own port abroad.—THE GRAFF ARTHUR BERNSTORFF (1854), 2 Ecc. & Ad. 30.

215. — Though ship registered in British possession.]—The Admty. Div. has no jurisdiction to entertain an action in rem instituted under Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 8, claiming an account of the earnings & sale of a ship when the ship is registered at the port of Guernsey, & not at any port in England or Wales.—THE ROBINSONS & THE SATELLITE (1884), 51 L. T. 905; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 338.

216. — Unless foreign consul intervenes.]—In a suit by pltf., a foreigner, against a foreign vessel to enforce his right as part-owner for an account for possession, the ct., upon the foreign Consul refusing to interfere, declined to entertain the suit, which was dismissed with costs, but not damages.—THE AGINCOURT (1877), 2 P. D. 239; 47 L. J. P. 37.

B. Persons entitled to Benefit of Jurisdiction.

223. Accounts.]—By Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 8, the Admty. Ct. has jurisdiction—on a petition being filed by a part-owner of a British ship, alleging that his co-owner, the ship's husband, has rendered false accounts—to order an account to be taken of the earnings & disbursements of the ship, & of moneys received upon insurances of ship & freight. The sect. being remedial is retrospective, & gives the ct. jurisdiction, notwithstanding the ship has been lost before the date assigned for the Act to come into operation.—THE IDAS (1863), Brown. & Lush. 65; 2 New Rep. 45.

Annotation:—Apld. The Lady of the Lake (1870), L. R. 3 A. & E. 29.

224. — Stay of execution—Co-owners sued in Queen's Bench Division.]—A managing owner, who had not delivered accounts for nine years, instituted a co-ownership action for settlement of accounts, & for payment of the balance found due to him, & claimed certain items in respect of materials supplied to the ship for which he had not paid, & for which debts. were being sued in Q. B. Div. The registrar in his report allowed pltf. these items. Upon application to confirm the report, & for judgment, the ct. decreed payment of the amount found due by the registrar, but stayed execution until debts. were protected against claims in the Q. B. Div., & refused pltf. costs of the action upon the ground of delay in rendering his accounts.—THE CHARLES JACKSON (1885), 52 L. T. 631; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 399.

225. — Former jurisdiction.]—A co-partner could not originate a suit for accounts in the Admty. Ct.—THE APOLLO, No. 202, ante; Nos. 233, 1230, post.

SUB-SECT. 3.—REMEDIES.

226. Bond for safe return—Form of bond.]—A bond for the ship's safe return is a remedy for a minority of co-partners. Semble: bonds should be limited "to the safe return to any port of this country," since when a vessel is within the protection of the country to which she belongs, she is in her general home; & the parties are restored, as to any legal remedies, to the situation in which they stood before departure of the vessel.

The ct. declined to pronounce forfeited a bond given for the safe return of a vessel to a particular port of the United Kingdom, the vessel having been carried in distress into another port, & there arrested in suits of salvage & of wages, holding that while the vessel was within the jurisdiction of the ct., safe & unsold, the application was premature.—THE MARGARET (1829), 2 Hag. Adm. 275. S. C. No. 211, ante; Nos. 231, 236, 797, post.

Annotation:—Consd. The Cawdor, [1900] P. 47, C. A.

227. — — —.]—In an action of restraint the proper form of bond is a bond for safe return, & not a bond to answer judgment in the action.—THE ROBERT DICKINSON, No. 784, post.

228. — Duration of bond—Second action.]—Where minority owners have instituted an action of restraint claiming security for safe return of the ship to a named port within the jurisdiction & a bond is given by defts. for that purpose, such bond remains in force until the ship returns to that port, & pltf. are not entitled to institute another action for further security upon the ship's return to another port within the jurisdiction. If such second action is instituted it will be dismissed with costs.—THE REGALIA (1884), 51 L. T. 904; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 338.

Annotation:—Refd. The Cawdor, [1900] P. 47, C. A.

229. — — — Changes in ownership.]—In an action of restraint a bail bond was given for safe return of the ship "from as many voyages as she shall sail upon before notice shall have been given to defts. by pltf. that they withdraw their claims for security." Two years after the bond had been given, the majority of shares owned by defts. having in the meantime been transferred to new owners, & the management of the ship having also passed into other hands, the sureties applied to be released from the bond:—Held: (1) it could not have been intended the sureties should remain bound for all time, notwithstanding the change of ownership; (2) the bond must be cancelled.—THE VIVIANNE (1887), 12 P. D. 185; 56 L. J. P. 107; 57 L. T. 316; 36 W. R. 110; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 178.

230. — "Safe return," what is.]—A bond had been given "for the safe return of a ship to the port of Whitehaven, to which she belonged":—Held: her arrival at Belfast within the specified time, & afterwards at Whitehaven, her proper port, satisfied the terms of the bond.—THE ANNE (1829), 2 Hag. PART II. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 3.

2261. Bond for safe return—Form of bond.]—Pltf. brought an action on a bond for $2,500, being the value of pltf.'s share in the ship, one of the conditions of which bond was that deft. would within six months bring the ship to a certain port in good condition & repair or pay pltf. $2,500. Objection was taken to the jurisdiction of the ct. on the ground that the bond was an ordinary common law bond, & that pltf. when he accepted the bond abandoned his remedy in the Admty. Ct.—Held: the objection was well founded, as the bond was made without reference or application to the ct. & differed in that respect from a bond executed in the ct. at the instance of minority owners by a majority intending to use the ship. In the latter case the bond or bail is not a contract between the parties, but a security given to the ct. which the ct. can enforce. The Bag-nall 12 Jur. 1008, refd.—HEATER v. ANDERSON (1910), 13 Ex. C. R. 417.—CAN.

proceedings without costs on either side.—THE WATERHEN (1829), 2 Hag. Adm. 279 n.

233. — Forfeiture—Acts amounting to.]—The bail bond looks only to the safe return of the ship or to payment of the stipulated sum, & upon loss of the ship immediate payment of the entire sum stipulated will be ordered.—THE APOLLO, Nos. 202, 225, ante; No. 1239, post.

234. — — — — —.]—By a bail bond, in an action of restraint, the sureties submitted themselves to the jurisdiction of the ct. & consented "that if the (named vessel) shall not safely return to the port of Liverpool, & defts. (the owners of the vessel other than pltf.) shall not, in such case, pay to pltf. (the appraised value of his shares), execution may issue " against them. The vessel, which, at the time the bond was given, had been dispatched by defts. on a voyage from Hartlepool to Calcutta, arrived at Dundee in Scotland, & left again on a voyage to New York, there to load for Australian ports. On motion by pltf., Barnes, J. pronounced the bond forfeited, & ordered the amount to be paid into ct. with liberty to the sureties to show cause:—Held: (1) there was jurisdiction to make the order; (2) assuming a discretion in the ct. in respect of enforcement of a security given to the ct., that discretion had been rightly exercised, as the condition of the bond for safe return was not limited to the vessel being lost, but was broken by the ship, instead of returning to Liverpool, being taken to a port out of the jurisdiction of the English Admty. Ct., & sent on another voyage.—THE CAWDOR, [1900] P. 47; 69 L. J. P. 23; 81 L. T. 705; 48 W. R. 293; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 19, C. A.

235. — Set aside—If action unfounded.]—In an action of restraint a bail bond, given by defts. before the trial, for safe return of a ship, is only an ordinary step in Admty. litigation to prevent expense & possible loss arising from arrest, & the ct. will set it aside if at the hearing it appears that pltf. was not entitled to institute the action.—THE KEROUKA, Nos. 253, 767, post.

236. Sale—Ship or shares.]—In cases of disagreement the ct. may compel a sale either of the ship or of the shares of the minority on application of a majority of owners.—THE MARGARET, Nos. 211, 220, 231, ante; No. 797, post.

Annotation:—Consd. The Cawdor, [1900] P. 47, C. A.

237. — Discretion—To be exercised with caution.]—The Admty. Div. has power under Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 8, in a co-ownership action to order the sale of a ship on application of a minority of owners, but such power will always be exercised with great caution.—THE NELLY SCHNEIDER (1878), 3 P. 238. — — — — — When sale ordered.]—The majority of co-owners of a ship, by constituting themselves a limited liability co., made it impossible for the ship to be profitably employed in the general interests of owners, unless the dissenting minority of owners consented to come in to the co. On motion by the minority, in an action of restraint, for sale of the ship:—Held: (1) the majority of owners had no right to change the character of ownership without the consent of all persons concerned; (2) the ct. would exercise its discretionary power under Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 8, & decree sale of the ship; (3) the decree would be ordered to lie in the registry for four days to give the co. the opportunity of purchasing the shares of appcts.—THE HEREWARD, [1895] P. 284; 64 L. J. P. 87; 72 L. T. 903; 44 W. R. 288; 8 Asp. M. L. C. 22; 11 R. 798.

239. — — — — — Ex parte application—Parties.]—Pltf. was owner of eight shares, & deft. of twenty-eight shares of the A. Pltf. filed his petition under Admty. Ct. Act, 1861. On an ex p. motion P., on behalf of pltf. & upon consent of W., owner of eight shares, & H., who claimed to be equitably entitled to four shares of the A., moved for an account of the earnings of the vessel since Nov. 1853, & for a sale. The ct. (def. having had notice of the motion & not having appeared) granted the application.—THE ALBION (1862), 6 L. T. 164; 1 Mar. L. C. 208.

240. — — — — — When sale refused.]—The owner of twenty-two sixty-fourth shares in a ship, being pltf. in an action of restraint, applied on motion before hearing of the action for sale of the vessel proceeded against, on the ground that pltf. & defts. could not agree as to management of the vessel:—Held: (1) no sufficient reason existed in fact for ordering a sale; (2) whether or not the ct. had jurisdiction to order a sale, the motion must be refused.—THE MARION (1884), 10 P. 242. Third parties—Monition to bring in freight.]—In a cause between co-owners, under Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 8, the ct. granted a citation in personam on deft., & a monition on London Dock Co. to bring in freight detained by them under a stop order from defts.—THE MEGGIE (1866), L. SECT. 3.—MORTGAGE.

SUB-SECT. 1.—JURISDICTION AT COMMON LAW.

243. No jurisdiction—When question of property involved.]—Upon questions of mtge. the Admty. Ct. has no jurisdiction; whether a mtge. is foreclosed, whether a mtgee. has a right to take possession of a chattel personal, whether he is the legal or only the equitable owner, whether a right of redemption means that a mtgee. is restrained from selling in repayment of his debt till after the time specified for redemption is past; the decision of these questions is not within the jurisdiction or province of the Admty. Ct., which never decides on questions of property between a mtgee. & owner.—THE NEPTUNE, Nos. 56, 58, ante; No. 728, post.

SUB-SECT. 2.—STATUTORY JURISDICTION.

A. In General.

247. Admiralty Court Act, 1840 (c. 65)—Limits of jurisdiction.—The enabling power conferred upon the ct. by s. 3 of the above Act does not extend to all questions arising out of a deed of mtgee., but is confined to the ship itself being mtgd. Where a vessel is arrested at suit of mariners for wages, but not the freight (which was not in the hands of the ct.), the ct. will not exercise its ordinary jurisdiction, or that given by the above Act, at the instance of a mtgee., to adjudicate questions as to ownership of the freight.—THE FORTITUDE (1843), 2 Wm. Rob. 217; 2 Notes of Cases, 515; 2 L. T. O. S. 229; 8 Jur. 23. S. C. No. 1249, post.

248. — Validity of mortgage—Not open to question.—While a mtgee. remains indorsed on the certificate of registry, the Admty. Ct. must consider it a valid & subsisting mtgee.—THE RINGDOVE, No. 787, post.

249. Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (c. 104)—Merchant Shipping Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63)—Real nature of transaction considered—Absolute transfer in form—Mortgage in intention.—Under s. 66 of the former Act & s. 3 of the latter Act the ct. will look behind the register to the real character of transactions between co-owners, & treat as a mtgee. that which is on the face of it an absolute transfer if it should appear such was the intention of the parties. Semble : the ct. would in some cases recognise an agreement by which a person might be for some purposes an absolute owner, & for others a mtgee., if such agreement were clearly proved & definite.—THE INNISFALLEN, No. 252, post.

250. Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10)—Equities—Whole transaction considered.—Where an action has been brought in the Admty. Ct. under s. 11 of the above Act by the registered transferee of a mtgee. & the ship arrested, the ct. will, in conformity with M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 3, enforce equities between owner & mtgee., & will, in estimating the right of mtgee., consider not only the registered documents, but all transactions between the parties relative to the mtgee. loan.

Pltf. was the registered transferee of a mtgee. expressed to be given as security for payment of an acceptance on a certain date, which date was passed before action brought; but he had, by other arrangements, contemporaneous & subsequent to the transfer, agreed for postponing repayment, & by such arrangements repayment of no part of the money was due at the time of action brought; & it was not proved that the owner had done anything impairing the security of the mtgee. The action was dismissed with costs. Pltf. was further condemned in damages, on the ground that with adequate knowledge of the circumstances he had arrested the ship when no money was due to him—after a decision of magistrates, adverse to his claim; & that he had endeavoured to make good his claim by bringing charges of fraud, which he failed to sustain, against the owner.—THE CATHCART (1867), L. B. Action of Restraint.

251. Mortgagee not in possession.—A mtgee. not in possession is not entitled to arrest a vessel for the purpose of enforcing bail for her safe return to England. A motion, on behalf of a mtgee., for a warrant of arrest, was refused in the circumstances of the case.—THE HIGHLANDER (1843), 2 Wm. Rob. 109; 2 Notes of Cases, 316.

A vessel having been arrested in a cause of restraint between co-owners, the ct., on motion by the charterer, to whom the vessel had been let for a voyage, ordered her release, it appearing that the alleged co-owner was only a mtgee.—THE INNISFALLEN (1866), L. 253. — Mortgagee in possession.—A mtgee. not in possession cannot maintain an action of restraint. Where persons hold shares in a ship by way of security for a loan under an agreement, by which it is provided, inter alia, that in the event of the owners of shares failing to meet their acceptances or to pay interest the holders of the shares may realise them, calling on the owners to make good any loss arising therefrom, or paying them any balance left after repaying themselves the loan, they are merely mtgees. of such shares & do not become owners thereof on the acceptances being dishonoured, & hence, not having taken possession of the shares, they are not entitled to institute an action of restraint against the ship.—Semble : a mtgee. of shares in a ship, when in possession, may institute an action of restraint.—THE KEROUOLA (1886), 11 P. 254. Action against mortgagee—Second mortgagee purchasing from first mortgagee—Notice of ship's engagements.—A shipowner agreed with defts. to provide a ship which should be run & worked by them in their line under their control & discretion. The agreement was to continue in force for five years, & to be binding on the owners' exors. & administrators. The ship was completed & registered on Jan. 3, 1891. On Jan. 5 in the same year she was mtgd. by the owner to a co. to secure an account current. The mtgees. had no notice of the engagements subsisting with defts. On Nov. 30, 1892, the owner gave a second mtge. on the ship to pltf. to secure an account current. Pltf. was aware of the existence of the contract with defts., & inferred that the terms were onerous. On Oct. 17, 1893, the owner died, & first mtgees. took possession of the ship, & transferred her by a bill of sale to pltf. At the time of sale pltf. knew the terms of the agreement under which the ship was being worked in defts.' line. Subsequently pltf. entered into a contract to sell the ship to a firm which knew the nature of the contract with defts. Pltf. moved for an order that defts. should deliver up to him the certificate of registry of the ship. It was agreed to turn the motion into the trial of the action without pleadings, & that defts. should be taken to have applied for an injunction restraining pltf. from dealing with the ship in a manner contrary to the agreement:—Held: (1) pltf. entitled to have the certificate of registry delivered up to him; (2) defts.' application for an injunction must be refused upon the ground that first mtgees., who had no notice of the ship's engagements, were entitled to realise their security by selling the ship free of her engagements, & that pltf., although he had notice of her engagements, was entitled to the same rights as were possessed by his vendors, first mtgees.—THE CELTIC KING, [1894] P. 175; 63 L. 255. — Prohibition of transfer—Persons interested.—A limited co., builders of two ships, had taken bills of exchange for the cost of building, together with first mtges. on the ships; the first bill was about to fall due, the owners of ships who had accepted the bills of exchange were in financial difficulties, the building co. had gone into liquidation, & the liquidator had taken possession of one of the ships & was negotiating for her sale. On an ex p. application by certain bankers & others, who had discounted most of the bills of exchange & who on this account claimed benefit of the mtges. as holders in due course under Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), an order was made in Admty. Div. under M. S. Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 30, restraining the owners, mtgees., or any other persons from dealing with the ships until further order.—LA BLANCA & EL ARGENTINO (1908), 77 L. J. P. 91.

258. Arrest—Withdrawal of action—Costs.—The second mtgee. of thirty-two sixty-fourth shares of a vessel instituted a cause under Admty. Ct. Act, 1801 (c. 10), s. 11, & arrested the ship. He afterwards withdrew the suit. The owner of the remaining share (who was not mtgor. to pltf.) applied to the ct. to condemn pltf. in costs & damages:—Held: he was entitled to his costs of suit, but not to any damages occasioned by arrest & detention of the vessel.—THE VOLANT (1864), Brown. & Lush. 321.

259. Wrongful arrest—Security not in jeopardy—Release.—Where shares in a ship are mtged., possession being retained by mtgors., & the managing owner, duly appointed by all co-owners, including mtgors., charters the ship for a foreign voyage, & she loads & is about to proceed on the voyage, mtgee., even though he takes possession of his shares before the sailing of the ship but after the making of the charterparty, cannot arrest the ship or demand bail in an action brought by him to compel payment of his mtge. debt, provided the performance of the charterparty is not prejudicial to the security; & the ct. will, upon application of the co-owners, release a ship so arrested, & condemn mtgee. arresting in costs.—THE MAXIMA (1878), 39 L. T. 112; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 21.

260. — — ——Where registered mtgees. of a ship instituted an action in rem as mtgees. for possession, & the ship was arrested therein before the mtge. money became due, & without any default on the part of mtgor., the ct., being of opinion upon the facts that the ship was not being dealt with so as to impair mtgees.' security, ordered her release.—THE BLANCHE (1887), 58 L. 262. Mortgagee taking possession—When allowable.—A mtgee. of a ship is entitled to take possession of her, although there has been no actual default under the mtge., if mtgor. is working the ship in such a way as to impair materially the security of mtgee.—THE MANOR, [1907] P. 339; 77 L. J. P. 10; 96 L. T. 871; 10 Asp. M. L. C. 446, C. A.

263. — Removal by master—Effect of.—The taking by a master of a ship to sea, after possession has been taken by mtgees., against their wishes, is such misconduct, even when done by orders of mtgor., his original employer, as will disentitle him to recover in an action in rem as against mtgees. any compensation for dismissal by mtgees., upon their recovering possession of the vessel, before the term of his engagement has expired.—THE FAIRPORT (1884), 10 P. D. 13; 54 L. J. P. 3; 52 L. T. 62; 32 W. R. 448; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 348.

264. — Possession wrongful — Damages — Wages paid by mortgagee.—Where mtgor. of a vessel entered into a charter or agreement with a third party (pltf.) for use of the vessel whereby pltf. was to have possession of the ship for about six weeks & to run her on specified voyages between places in the United Kingdom & finance the vessel, being granted the highest charge & lien on the vessel mtgor. could grant to secure any sums he might so disburse:—Held: (1) such charter or agreement did not impair the value of mtgee.'s security; (2) mtgee. was liable in damages to pltf., the charterer, for taking possession of the vessel under his mtge. after default had been made by mtgor.

Where a mtgee. wrongly took possession of the mtged. ship as against the charterer, & paid wages due to the crew from the charterer:—Held: in the circumstances the charterer was liable to mtgee. for wages so paid.—THE HEATHER BELL, [1901] P. 272; 70 L. J. P. 57; 84 L. T. 794; 49 W. R. 577; 17 T. L. R. 541; 9 Asp. M. L. C. 206, C. A.

265. — Receiver & manager already appointed — Interference prohibited.—Mtgee. of thirty-four sixty-fourth shares in a ship having given to the receiver & manager appointed by the ct. notice that he was a mtgee. & intended to take possession, was restrained by an order of the ct., made on Aug. 12, from interfering with the receiver & manager. During the vacation mtgee. applied to the ct. to discharge or vary the order, but the vacation judge adjourned the application till the first sittings of Admty. Div.—THE EDDERSIDE, BELL v. EDDERSIDE SHIPOWNING CO., LTD. (1887), 31 Sol. Jo. 744.

266. Co-ownership action—Right of mortgagee to intervene.—Where a part-owner of a ship institutes a suit against the ship claiming as against his co-owner an account & sale of the ship, a mtgee. holding a mtge., which could not be satisfied by sale of the ship, is entitled, on intervening in the suit, to a release of the ship & to his costs from the time of his claiming release.

A shipowner sold certain shares in a ship & the purchaser having neglected to register the sale, mtged. the whole ship to a third person, who had no knowledge of the previous sale, to secure a balance exceeding the value of the ship. The purchaser registered his shares, & then finding the mtgee. registered, instituted a suit against the ship claiming as against his co-owner an account & sale of the ship. Mtgee. intervened & claimed release of the ship & damages & costs for its detention:—Held: mtgee. entitled to release of the ship & to costs from the time pltf. became aware of mtgee.'s claim.—THE EASTERN BELLE (1875), 33 L. SUB-SECT. 1. JURISDICTION.

A. Nature of Jurisdiction.

267. Bottomry—Maritime risk—Hypothecation—Pledge of ship.—The Admty. Ct. has undoubted jurisdiction over bottomry bonds, which are founded upon sea risks & defeasible by destruction of the ship in course of her voyage.

The Admty. Ct. exercises an undisturbed jurisdiction over hypothecation bonds; a bond so denominated in the East Indies will not make it such, in the view of the ct., if it does not pledge the vessel herself for sole payment of the bond.—THE ATLAS (1827), 2 Hag. Adm. 48; S. C. Nos. 12, 55, ante; No. 283, post.

268. — Jurisdiction founded on necessity.—The jurisdiction of the Admty. Ct. in cases of bottomry bonds is founded on the existence of necessity arising from want of personal credit.—THE PRINCE OF SAXE COBURG (1838), 3 Moo. P. C. C. 1; 13 E. R. 1; S. C. No. 292, post.

Circumstances in which a bottomry bond may be made, see SHIPPING & NAVIGATION.

269. Respondentia bond.—A master has power to bind the cargo for repairs of the ship, in order to effect prosecution of the voyage, in such manner as to entitle the party who advances the money to sue for enforcement of his bond in the Admty. Ct.; but the master can only bind the cargo in a case of severe necessity; nor will the cargo be bound if the lender has taken undue advantage of the master's distress.—THE GRATITUDE (1801), 3 Ch. 270. — Subject to same principles as bottomry bond.—The Admty. Ct. has jurisdiction over bonds of respondentia, as over bottomry bonds. The difference between them is one of fact; there is no distinction in principle.

The American ship S., carrying cargo from New York, consigned to various owners in L. was stranded off Key West, in Florida, & unable to proceed on her voyage. The cargo was salvaged, & arrested in a suit by the salvors. The master resolved on his own authority to tranship, & to release the cargo, & borrowed money to pay the salvage award, upon agreement to give a respondentia bond on the whole cargo saved for the voyage home. A great portion of the cargo was then shipped on board a second vessel, which whilst loading caught fire, & a large part of the cargo was consumed & fresh salvage expenses incurred. A second salvage suit was brought, & the goods salvaged were sold & proceeds paid into ct. The rest of the S.'s cargo was then shipped on board a third vessel & brought safely to L. Before sailing the master of the S. gave a bottomry bond for the whole amount of the original agreement professing also to bind the goods or proceeds lying in possession of the ct. The ct. afterwards ordered that the proceeds should, on a day certain, be paid out to the bondholder, unless the owners of the cargo produced evidence that the bond had been fully satisfied in England. Upon an action brought upon the bond in the Admty. Ct. in England, against the cargo brought to England, for the full amount:—Held: (1) the ct. had jurisdiction over the bond; (2) in the circumstances the master was entitled to make the agreement for the bond without communicating with the cargo-owners; (3) the bond was not wholly vitiated because professing to bind the cargo which was lying in possession of the ct., & not exposed to maritime risk; (4) the owners of the cargo brought to England should pay a proportional part of the bond only, namely, according to the proportion the value of their property bore to the total value of the cargo upon which the bond was agreed to be given, although the bondholder would be a loser, even if the whole proceeds lying in the Ct. of Florida were paid over to him.—THE SULTAN, CARGO EX (1859), Sw. 504; 5 Jur. N. S. 1060. S. C. No. 287, post.

B. Extent of Jurisdiction.

(a) Where Jurisdiction exists.

271. Bottomry bond—Validity in dispute.—Where a bottomry bond is made on the high seas, the Admty. Ct. has jurisdiction, & prohibition does not lie, though the validity of the bond is in dispute.—SCARBOROUGH v. LYRUS (1624), Lat. 252; 82 P. R. 371.

272. — — — — ——Where a ship has been taken in execution by the sheriff, the holder of a bottomry bond on the ship need not take an issue under Interpleader Act, 1831 (c. 58), but may commence proceedings in Admty.; & the proper course is for the execution creditor to contest validity of the

274. ———.]—The Admty. Ct. has jurisdiction in the case of a hypothecation bond given by the master of a ship for necessities occasioned by distress at sea, although the contract was upon land. But the ship must be sued, & not the owners.—JONSON (JOINSON) v. SHEPNEY (SHIPPEN, SHIPPIN), (1703), Holt, K. B. 48; 11 Mod. Rep. 30; 2 Ld. Raym. 982; 1 Salk. 35; 87 E. R. 836. S. C. 282. ——— By British master.]—A bottomry bond, granted by the master of a British vessel in a port of England, was upheld. 284. ——— Pledge of personal credit.]—The master of a vessel has no authority to hypothecate for money borrowed at a foreign port for necessary repairs & disbursements, & by the same instrument pledge the personal credit of his owner for such advances, whether maritime interest be stipulated for or not. But a bottomry bond may be given at the same time with, & as a collateral security for, bills drawn on the owners for moneys so borrowed.

A vessel having put into a foreign port in a damaged state, the master borrowed money of a merchant there, for necessary repairs & disbursements; to secure which money he drew bills upon his owner, & also executed an instrument which purported to be a hypothecation of the ship, cargo & freight. By this instrument the merchant who advanced the money forbore all interest beyond the amount necessary to insure the ship to cover the advances; & the master took upon himself & his owner the risk of the voyage, making the money payable at all events, & subjecting the ship to seizure & sale by virtue of process "out of H. M.'s Admty. Ct. of England, or any ct. of Vice-Admty. possessing jurisdiction at the port at which the said vessel might at any time happen to be lying, or to be, according to the maritime law & custom of England," in the event of the bills being refused acceptance, or being dishonoured:—Held: (1) this was not such a hypothecation as could be enforced in the Admty. Ct., payment of the money borrowed not being made to depend upon arrival of the vessel; (2) the merchant had no insurable interest in the ship.—STAINBANK v. SHEPARD (SHEPHERD) (1853), 13 C. 286. Maritime risk not referred to.]—A bill of exchange having been given as a collateral security along with a bottomry bond, in the event of the bill being paid, the bond to be void, but there being no mention in the bond of a maritime risk or words from which it could be inferred:—Held: on this last ground it could not be enforced in the Admty. offered, suspicion is thrown upon the whole transaction, but such delay will not be fatal to the bond unless prejudicial to the interests of third persons, as if the vessel has changed hands in the meantime.—THE HELGOLAND, Nos. 277, 289, ante.

301. Pledge of ship & cargo—Priority.—A bond was given upon a ship & cargo only, not mentioning the freight. The ship & cargo were arrested & the freight was paid over to other parties, before the suit commenced at the instance of the bondholder. The ship proved insufficient for discharge of the bond, but the cargo was ample for the purpose. The Ct. decreed that the bondholder should be paid the balance of the proceeds of the ship, wages deducted, & should be put in possession of the cargo, so far as was necessary for full payment of the bond. The owner of the cargo prayed a monition against the owners of the freight. An act on petition was brought in & the owners of the freight rested their defence upon the ground that the freight was not bound, not being named in the bond, & that it had not been arrested at the suit of the bondholder, as he had not proceeded against the freight, but against the ship alone:—Held: (1) the bond should be pronounced for with interest & costs, the freight to be brought in & to be made subject to average; (2) the freight & ship must be exhausted before recourse could be had to the cargo.—THE PRINCE REGENT (1821), unreported, cited 2 Wm. Rob. 83.

302. ———.—Where a bottomry bond attaches upon a ship & cargo, the cargo cannot be made subject to payment of the bond until the proceeds of the ship & freight have been exhausted. The cargo may be arrested & bail taken, but the proceedings against the cargo should then be stayed till the ship is sold unless it is manifest that the produce will be insufficient to meet the bond.—THE BONAPARTE, No. 304, post.

303. ———. Marshalling.—The principle of marshalling the assets ought to prevail in the Admty. Ct. whenever it can be carried into effect without violating other rules entitled to preferential observance. But cargo hypothecated cannot be resorted to for payment of any bottomry bond until ship & freight are exhausted. Where there are two bottomry bonds, the first in date on ship & freight only, the other or last bond on ship, freight & cargo, & the ship & freight are insufficient to discharge both bonds, the last bond, which is entitled to priority, must be paid out of ship & freight.—THE (1859), Lush. 1; 1 L. PART II. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 2.

301.1. Pledge of ship & cargo—Priority.—In making its decree in favour of the holders of bottomry bonds on ship, freight, & cargo the Admty. Ct. will generally direct the ship to be sold in the first instance, & reserve the question as to liability of the freight & cargo until after return of the commission of sale. If the sum realised by sale of the ship is not sufficient to satisfy the bond or bonds, & the cost of suit, the Ct. will resort to freight, & if necessary, to the cargo.—THE ROMOLO (1854), 1 Ir. Jur. N. S. 462 (Adm.).—IR.

303.1. ———. Marshalling.—The Admty. Ct. in bottomry suits gives priority to the last dated bond; but will render every facility to the prior bondholder to realise the amount of his security, & will order the consignees to lodge in the registry a certified statement of the value of the cargo, & to enter into a stipulation for such amount as may be reasonable, to abide the result of the two suits; & it will order the certified amount of the freight to be lodged in Ct. to the credit of both suits.—THE FORTUNA (1860), 5 Ir. SUB-SECT. 3.—LAW APPLICABLE.

304. Law maritime—How far applied.—Where a bottomry bond granted at a foreign port is by the law of that port valid as affecting the ship & freight, its validity as regards cargo, in a question with subjects of another country before the Admty. Ct., must be determined by general maritime law.—THE BONAPARTE (1850), 3 Wm. Rob. 298; 7 Notes of Cases, Supp. 55; 14 Jur. 605. S. C. No. 302, ante.

306. ———. Principles of administering—Reduction of premium—Foreigners.—The Admty. Ct., if required to enforce bottomry contracts, must proceed on principles of equity. If foreign merchants require aid of the Ct. to enforce contracts made intentionally to be enforced in England, such aid can only be afforded according to the principles which guide its proceedings, & without which it would be an instrument of fraud & rapine rather than dispenser of justice. A custom of a particular country has very little effect against foreigners, unless it is reasonable & just. Though the Admty. Ct. has jurisdiction to reduce the premium on bottomry bonds, yet it must act, in the exercise of such power, with great caution, & take into consideration all the circumstances of each particular transaction.

The registrar's & merchants' report reducing the premium on a bond (given in France for a voyage to London) from 20 to 12½ per cent. was overruled, as money could not be obtained at a lower premium, owing to its scarcity in France & the disturbed state of the country & apprehension of hostilities between England & France, but was sustained where it disallowed a charge of commission for unshipping & care of the cargo, at 5 per cent., as unreasonable, though agreeable to the custom of the place.—THE COGNAC (1832), 2 Hag. Adm. 377.

bond.—The Admty. Ct., in making a decree in favour of the bottomry bond, will carefully scrutinise all accounts, & reduce an unreasonable or exorbitant charge.

When a ship-agent charges a commission for his general superintendence upon the entire value of the ship & cargo, & upon advances alleged to have been made by him, without stating to what amount, or at what rate of interest, the Ct. will consider the several claims, & award a specific sum for his services & advances, & reduce the amount of the bond accordingly.—THE FORTUNA (1861), 6 Ir. Jur. N. S. 272 (Adm.).—IR.

Existence of such local law may be properly pleaded as material evidence to support an allegation that the agreement was to make advances on the credit of ship & freight, & that the commissions were customary. The existence of such law will be assumed by the ct. unless contradicted by plea. If contradicted, either party may produce evidence, the party failing in the particular issue to pay the costs of it.—THE LAUREL (1863), Brown. &

315. Law of flag—Extent of liability fixed by.]—The rights of parties to a contract are to be judged of by that law by which they intended, or rather by which they may justly be presumed, to have bound themselves. A party who relies upon a right or an exemption by foreign law is bound to bring that law properly before the ct., & to establish it in proof, otherwise the ct., not being authorised to notice such law without judicial proof, must proceed according to the law of England. Where a contract of affreightment does not provide otherwise, there, as between the parties to such contract, in respect of sea damage & its incidents, the law of the ship should govern.

Pltf., a British subject at a Danish West India island, chartered a ship belonging to defts., who were French, for a voyage from S., in Haiti, to Havre, London, or Liverpool, at the charterer's option, he knowing the ship was French. The charterparty was entered into by the master in pursuance of his general authority as such, & not by any special authority from the owners. Pltf. shipped a cargo at S. for Liverpool. On her voyage the ship sustained damage from a storm, which compelled her to put into a Portuguese port. There the master properly borrowed money upon bottomry of the ship, freight, & cargo, & repaired her, & she proceeded with the cargo, & arrived safely at Liverpool. The bondholder proceeded in the Admty. Ct. against the ship, freight, & cargo, which being insufficient to satisfy the bond, he sued defts. as shipowners to indemnify him for the deficiency. Defts. abandoned the ship & freight in such manner as by the French law absolved them from liability:—Held: pltf. not entitled to recover, because the French law, as being that of the ship, governed the case.—*LLOYD v. SECT. 5.—NECESSARIES.

SUB-SECT. 1.—JURISDICTION.

A. Extent of Jurisdiction.

318. Common law jurisdiction—Proceeds in registry—Limits of jurisdiction.]—An American ship had been proceeded against on the part of mariners on a demand for wages & sold under a decree of the ct. The wages had been paid out, & there remained a surplus of about £700 in the registry of the ct. A motion on the part of material men who had supplied arms & stores to the ship, on a voyage from London to Venice, to be permitted to arrest the proceeds remaining in the registry, was granted, as it was the practice of the ct. to allow material men to sue against remaining proceeds in the registry, notwithstanding prohibitions had been obtained on original suits instituted by them. A second warrant, prayed against the remaining proceeds at the suit of a general creditor of the ship by reason of money expended by him on insurances, etc., was rejected, as the account was of too general & unsettled a nature to entitle the party to this remedy, & the case was more fit for the Ch. Ct.

The Admty. Ct. will not attempt to interfere where the demand itself is the subject of a dispute which the powers of an Eq. Ct. are alone competent to settle.—THE JOHN (1801), 3 Ch. Rob. 288.

jurisdiction, either under Admty. Ct. Act, 1840 (c. 65), s. 6, impliedly from the vessel being foreign-owned, or, under Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 5, expressly from the facts of the vessel being out of her own port & the owner's domicile being out of England & Wales.—THE PACIFIC (1864), Brown. & Lush. 243; 3 New Rep. 709; 33 L. 348. Maritime lien—Against purchaser.]—A vessel foreign-owned at the time when necessities are supplied to her cannot by a subsequent sale change her legal position so as to deprive the person supplying the necessities of the remedies given by Admty. Ct. Act, 1840 (c. 65), s. 6.—THE PRINCESS CHARLOTTE (1864), 33 L. J. P. M. & A. 188.

349. — — —.]—A claim for necessities supplied to a foreign ship may be enforced by proceedings in rem under Admty. Ct. Act, 1840 (c. 65), s. 6, notwithstanding a subsequent bond fide transfer to a British owner; & this remedy is not taken away by Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 5, though the British owner be domiciled in England at the time of the institution of the cause. The provisions of s. 5 of the later Act do not apply to ships foreign-owned at the time when the necessities are furnished. Semble: where Parliament has given the Admty. Ct. jurisdiction to proceed in rem for certain claims, such claims are to be treated as maritime liens.—THE ELLA A. CLARK (now THE GOLDEN AGE) (1863), Brown. & Lush. 32; 1 New Rep. 525; 32 L. SUB-SECT. 2.—EXERCISE OF JURISDICTION.

350. In accordance with Admiralty Court Act, 1840 (c. 65), s. 6.]—The above sect. introduced a novel proceeding into the Admty. Ct., which had formerly no jurisdiction in such cases, & the ct. cannot extend its construction.—THE N. R. GOSFABRICK, No. 339, ante; No. 687, post.

PART II. SECT. 5, SUB-SECT. 2.

1. Persons liable—Owners of chartered foreign ship.]—A French steamship, of which dtfs. were owners, was chartered by T. & Co., to run between Hong Kong & Canton. Ptfs. supplied the ship with coal in Hong Kong, looking to the ship for payment but not knowing who the owners were:—Held: (1) in order to take advantage of the remedy in rem there must be a common law right, but there was no common law right to enable ptfs. to sue owners who had under the charterparty parted with the possession & control of the ship the charterers not being the agents of the owners; (2) the case was not governed by the law of the flag, but by the law of the port where the necessities were supplied.—SAM HING FIRM v. S.S. PAUL BEAU (1906), 1 Hong Kong, 71.—HONG KONG.

Sect. 5.—Necessaries: Sub-sect. 2. Sects. 6 & 7: Sub-sect. 1, A. & B.]

351. — Act retrospective.]—Held: The Admty. Ct. had power, under the above sect., to entertain a suit for necessities furnished to a foreign vessel in 1835, before the passing of the Act.—THE ALEXANDER LARSEN, No. 59, ante.

352. Persons entitled—Ship's agent—Co-partner.]—The agents of a foreign ship in a British port, who have paid for necessities supplied to her, or who have rendered themselves liable to pay for such necessities, may sue the ship for such advances as were made on the ship's account, but not for the balance of a general account against her owners. A co-partner in a ship may sue the ship for such advances made by him. Semble: not if the co-partner is interested in the particular voyage for which the ship is supplied.—THE UNDERWRITER (1868), 25 L. 353. Breaking arrest—Order for trial.]—Where, on a claim for necessities, the vessel was arrested, & the master, in contempt of the warrant, sailed out of the jurisdiction, the ct. allowed a cause for necessities to be set down & pltf. to file proofs; & upon such proof of the facts condemned the ship in the claim & costs.—THE LADY BLESSINGTON (1865), 34 L. J. P. M. & A. 73.

354. Release —Position of mortgagee.]—A mtgee., although entitled to intervene in a cause in rem for equipment & repair, is not entitled to obtain a release of the vessel upon giving bail only to pay the claim of the material men, in the event of its being held to have priority over the mtge.—THE ACACIA (1879), 41 L. T. 564; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 226.

355. Pleading—Sufficiency.]—Where a petition merely alleges that money was advanced for necessary expenses at the owner's request without stating what those necessary expenses were, such claim will be struck out on motion to reject or alter the petition.—THE RIGA, No. 331, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 331, ante.

356. Inquiries ordered.]—Under Jud. Act, 1875 (c. 77), O. 33, in an action for necessities, the ct. will, in its discretion, order a reference to be held, before the judgment is pronounced, to ascertain if any or what sum is due.—THE SULLY (1879), 48 L. J. P. 56.

357. Action by default—Payment out of court.]—In an action of necessities, where necessary moneys were advanced by merchants in England to a foreign ship, partly when the ship was lying in a port of refit out of the jurisdiction of the ct., & partly upon her arrival in England, the action going by default, & the owners not appearing to oppose the motion to the ct. to order full payment out of the proceeds of the ship in the registry, the ct. will make the order.—THE AFINA VAN LANGE (1859), Sw. 514; 1 L. SECT. 6.—TOWAGE.

Sec, generally, SHIPPING & NAVIGATION.

358. Extent of jurisdiction—Damage by negligence in towing—Taking ground.]—The Admty. Ct. has not jurisdiction under Admty. Ct. Act, 1840 (c. 65), s. 6, or Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 7, or otherwise, to entertain a claim against a steam-tug for damage occasioned to the vessel towed by negligence in towing, if damage arises not by collision but by the vessel taking ground.—THE ROBERT POW (1863), Brown. & Lush. 99; 2 New Rep. 527; 32 L. 359. — Liability to third person.]—A suit was instituted in the Admty. Ct. to recover damages for negligence of a tug employed to tow pltf's vessel, through which negligence it was alleged pltf's vessel was brought into collision with another vessel & loss occasioned to pltf's.—Held: the Admty. Ct. had jurisdiction notwithstanding the alleged damage was caused only by negligent performance of a contract to tow. Semble: the ct. had jurisdiction, though the damage caused to pltf. consisted only in rendering him liable in damages to a third person.—THE ENERGY (1870), L. R. 3 A. & E. 48; 39 L. J. Adm. 25; 23 L. T. 601; 18 W. R. 1009; 3 Mar. L. C. 503.

360. — Contract not towage contract.]—The master of a vessel agreed with a tug for towage from Sea Reach in the Thames to a London wharf, & agreed to pay £6 & give an order upon the owner of the wharf for the amount usually allowed by him (under the name of towage) as a premium to vessels of the kind coming to his wharf. The service was performed by the tug, & the master paid the £6, but refused to give the order on the owner of the wharf. The amount actually paid by the owner of the wharf according to his practice was proved; & it was also proved that if an order signed by the master of the vessel towed was presented by the master of the tug, the money would be (as a matter of practice) paid to him.—Held: (1) the master of the vessel had no authority to agree to transfer to the master of the tug an uncertain sum payable to owners of the vessel; (2) the ct. had no authority to enforce such a contract or give damages for breach of it.—THE MARTHA (1861), Lush. 314.

361. — —.]—Under Admty. Ct. Act, 1840 (c. 65), the Admty. Ct. has jurisdiction in claims for steam towage, but not for a steam-tug bringing off passengers from the shore.—THE WALLACE v. THE JANE (1853), 9 L. T. 811.

362. — Measure of damages—Remuneration for delay.]—A tug having entered into a contract to tow a ship from A. to B. for a specified sum, the ship, during performance of the agreed towage, was injured by collision, & the tug was detained nearly three days in attendance. In an action of towage instituted by the owner of the tug in a ct. cy., & transferred to the Admty. Ct.:—Held: the ct. had no jurisdiction to award, in addition to the sum agreed to be paid for towage, any remuneration for delay.—THE HJEMMETT (1880), 5 P. D. 227; 49 L. J. P. 66; 42 L. B. Statutory Jurisdiction.

See, now, MERCHANT SHIPPING ACT, 1894 (c. 60), s. 167.

369. Merchant Seamen Act, 1844 (c. 112)—Insolvency of owner.—The privilege of masters to sue for wages under the above Act is subject to the following conditions: (1) wages must be claimed to be due from a person who was owner of the ship at the time of the original contract; (2) such owner must be bkpt. or insolvent at the time when the claim is preferred. The master of a vessel is not debarred from suing under the Act upon the ground that he was a joint mtgee. of ship, & was cognisant of the sale of the vessel by the other mtgee. & did not dissent from such sale.—THE REPULSE (1845), 2 Wm. For full anns., see SHIPPING & NAVIGATION.

375. ——— Meaning of "insolvency."—A master can sue the ship for his wages, under s. 16 of the above Act, only where the owner has become an insolvent debtor, in the legal sense of the term, the word "insolvency" not meaning a general inability to pay.—THE PRINCESS ROYAL (1845), 2 Wm. Annotation:—Apld. The Great Northern (1846), 2 Wm. Rob. 509.

376. ——— Allowances not included—Accounts.—A master suing in rem, the owner being bkpt., is not entitled to include in "wages" an allowance, by agreement, for cabin stores, which is of the nature of a special contract; but he may accommodate deductions in his schedule to the equity of the case, namely, that of allowing deductions on both sides.—THE TECUMSEH (1850), 3 Wm. 363 i. No jurisdiction—Manitoba.—Pltf. sought to enforce a maritime lien in respect of wages earned in 1888, 1889, & 1890, as master of the A., owned by a co. in Manitoba:—Held: until Colonial Cts. of Admty. Act, 1890 (c. 27), & Admty. Act, 1891 (c. 29), came into force on July 1 & Oct. 2, 1891, respectively, there being no ct. in Manitoba having Admty. jurisdiction, the law of England respecting maritime liens was not applicable to that Province, & pltf. had no maritime lien. The Rio Tinto (1894), 9 App. Cas. 356; The Heinrich Bjorn (1886), 11 App. Cas. 270; The Sara (1889), 14 App. Cas. 209; The Alford (1889), Sw. 362; The Jonathan Goodhue of Natal (1864), 3 Moo. 363 ii. ——— Disbursements before master registered as such—Master taking mortgage—Set-off.—A master can only claim against his ship for disbursements from the date on which he is placed on the ship's register as master, even though there was a previous arrangement between him & the owner that he should be master.

A master is not deprived of his lien for wages & disbursements by the fact that he has taken a mtgee. on the ship for the balance of his wages & disbursements, more especially if the shipowner has concealed from him the fact that there was a prior mtgee. Scmble: only mutual debts can be set off under M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), to a counterclaim by resp. in a suit by a master to recover wages. Qu.: whether the above Act was repealed by Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10).—THE ALBION (1872), 27 L. 381. ———— Laches.]—A master has, under s. 10 of the above Act, a maritime lien for his disbursements. A liability to pay a debt incurred for necessaries supplied to the ship confers the same rights on the master as an actual payment by him when the res is in the hands of the ct.

Bills were given by a master on Apr. 3 & May 4, 1880, & the drawees of such bills became insolvent. Judgment on the bills was obtained against the master in July, 1881, & he issued a writ against the ship on Nov. 23, 1881. C. Exercise of Jurisdiction.

386. Proceeds in court—Seamen's action—Payment by master—Action by master against proceeds.]—A ship having been arrested on behalf of a sailor who sued for wages, she was sold & proceeds brought into ct., & the master paid the wages & brought a fresh action against proceeds:—Held: this action should proceed.—HOLLAND v. THE ROYAL CHARLOTTE (1767), Burrell, 62, 76.

PART II. SECT. 7, SUB-SECT. 1.—C.

386 i. Proceeds in court—Seamen's wages preferential charge on proceeds.]—The master of a ship is not entitled to share in the proceeds of the ship with the seamen, or wholly to absorb those proceeds, they being insufficient to meet either claim in full. But where the proceeds cannot meet both claims, the seamen have a right to be paid preferentially as far as the proceeds will extend to the exclusion of the master, even although the decree in favour of the latter was on a day prior to the decree in favour of the seamen, & his suit prior in date to theirs; & this rule applies even where part of the master's claim is for wages paid to seamen.—THE ANGLO INDIAN (1868), 8 N. E. W. S. C. R. 102.—AUS.

a. Colonial ship—Owners not represented—Duty of court.]—In an action for wages by the captain of a colonial ship, the Admty. Ct. must exercise a jealous & scrutinising caution in the consideration of the case; if it appears that the owners are not represented, & that the claim can only be liquidated by sale of the vessel, & that the impugnant ship is under engagement by her charter-party & articles to return to her home port, the suit will be dismissed.—

b. Master's disbursements—Payment of crew's wages by order of owners—Master's rights.]—The master of a ship having paid off, in obedience to orders received from the agent of the owners, a portion of the crew, after his vessel was arrested by the Admty. Ct. in a collision suit, will be entitled to get credit for such payments upon a settlement of his accounts, but will not, in a suit for wages in the names of such seamen, be permitted to recover such advances as charges against the ship.—THE DUNA (1861), 6 Ir. Jur. N. S. 358 (Adm.).—IR.

387. Mortgagee—Intervention by—Defence.]—In an action for wages, a mtgee. of the ship may intervene & defend his interest in the ship sued, but he can rely only on defences open to the owner.—THE CHIEFTAIN, Nos. 378, 382, ante; No. 822, post.

SUB-SECT. 2.—JURISDICTION IN THE CASE OF SEAMEN ON BRITISH SHIPS.

A. Extent of Jurisdiction.

(a) Jurisdiction at Common Law.

389. In general.]—Suit for mariners' wages may be in the Admty.—COKE v. CRETCHET (1682), 3 Lev. 60; 83 E. R. 576.

*Annotations:—*Folld. Osman v. Wells, (1701), 11 Mod. Rep. 31. Refd. How v. Nappier (1766), 4 Burr. 1944; Buggin v. Bennett (1767), 4 Burr. 2035.

390. ———.]—The jurisdiction of the Admty. Ct. is a concurrent jurisdiction, & prohibition will not be granted upon the suggestion that the ct. refused to receive deft.'s allegation that the place of arrival was not a port of delivery except upon payment of the demand intact. On such a matter the Admty. Ct. is judge, & the proper remedy is appeal, not prohibition.—BROWN v. BENN (1706), 2 Ld. Raym. 1247; 92 E. R. 322.

391. ———.]—Where the proceeds of ship & freight are insufficient to pay the crew's wages & the amount of a bottomry bond, the Admty. Ct. has no authority to restrain seamen from proceeding against the ship for wages and to order them to proceed against the solvent owner.—THE ARAB (1859), 5 Jur. N. S. 417.

*Annotation:—*Consd. Webb v. Smith (1885), 30 Ch. D. 192, C. A.

394. ——— Contract under seal.]—THE RIBY GROVE, Nos. 410, 441, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 410, post.

395. Contract made on land.]—One mariner alone may sue in the Admty. for wages on a contract made on land.—HOOK v. MORETON (1698), 1 Ld. Raym. 397; 91 E. R. 1165.

*Annotation:—*Appl. Mills v. Long (1754), Say. 136.

396. ———.]—The fact that an agreement for wages is made & executed at a counting-house in London does not take it out of the Admty. jurisdiction.—THE PRINCE GEORGE, Nos. 423, 432, post.

397. ——— Written contract.]—Mariners may sue for wages in the Admty. Ct. notwithstanding they let themselves by a written contract made on land.—BENS v. PARKIE (1705), 2 Ld. Raym. 1206; 92 E. R. 296.

S. P. MILLS v. LONG, No. 435, post.

399. Voyage not begun.]—Seamen hired to fit a ship for sea & go a voyage in her, may sue in the Admty. for the wages they earn in fitting her out though she does not proceed upon the voyage. Seamen may sue in the Admty. for wages, though they were not hired by the owner, if he permit them to go on board.—WELLS v. OSMAN (OSMOND) (1704), 2 Ld. Raym. 1044; 6 Mod. Rep. 238; 92 E. R. 193; sub nom. OSMAN v. WELLS (1704), 11 Mod. Rep. 31; 88 E. R. 864. S. C. No. 413, post.

400. ———.]—Common sailors may join in a suit for wages, although the ship had not sailed out of the Thames when wages became due.—MILLS v. GREGORY (1754), Say. 127; 1 Keny. 134; 96 E. R. 826.

401. ———.]—Seamen engaged by owners or their agent for a voyage upon a foreign-going ship have a lien for wages upon the ship, & proceeds of sale thereof, although the engagement of the seamen has not been in writing, & the ship does not proceed upon her voyage. The words "at the end of his engagement" in Merchant Seamen Act, 1880 (c. 16), s. 4 (1), mean the time at which his actual service terminates, & include the natural effluxion of the agreement as well as discharge of the seamen in breach of contract. To entitle a seaman to wages to date of final settlement, it is not necessary the whole term of his engagement should have expired, but it is sufficient that his actual service on board ship should have ended.—*Re GREAT EASTERN S.S. PART II. SECT. 7, SUB-SECT. 2.—A (a).

402 i. No jurisdiction where special agreement.]—A seaman on a whaler entered into a sealed contract, with respect to his remuneration, which provided that it should come out of the proceeds of the adventure, & which constituted a species of partnership.—Held: even if such contract was contrary to Merchant Seamen's Act, 1834 (c. 19), the seaman could not sue in

Ct., where the contract is in the usual terms, is entitled to exercise jurisdiction in the case, though the contract be in writing, & under seal; but where it is special or if the contract for service be made upon terms & conditions differing from the general rules of law, the service alone cannot entitle a seaman to his wages; his right to them must depend upon the performance of the stipulated terms. If a contract be a special contract, the ct. is debarred from any jurisdiction over it.

A whaler, having taken fish, was wholly lost, but part of the oil was saved; a mariner had contracted to serve, on condition of receiving an allowance per ton of oil obtained, in addition to his monthly wages:—Held: (1) this was a special contract & of the nature of a partnership; (2) it was not within the jurisdiction of the ct. Semble:

428. — Extent of right—Disbursements not included.—The Admty. Ct. has no jurisdiction to adjudicate upon a mate's claim for wages paid to the crew, & necessary disbursements made by him in foreign ports.—THE VICTORIA (1867), 37 L. J. Adm. 12.

429. Pilot.—A pilot is a mariner, but cannot sue in the Admty. if his work be within the body of a county. —ROSS v. WALKER (1765), 2 Wils. 264; 95 E. R. 801.

430. — Not where services illegal.—In a suit for wages on the part of a British pilot, for conducting a ship, an American vessel, from the Downs to Flushing:—Held: no suit could be maintained on behalf of a British subject for services performed in aiding commerce & importation of the enemy.—THE BENJAMIN FRANKLIN (1806), 6 Ch. Rob. 350.

431. Purser.—THE LADY CAMPBELL, No. 447, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 417, post.

432. ——A purser, having entered into an agreement for wages, signed the usual articles, in which no rate of wages was specified for him. After completion of the outward voyage, he ceased, by the master's orders, to act as purser, but was not regularly suspended for neglect of duty:—Held: he was entitled to wages.—THE PRINCE GEORGE (1837), 3 Hag. Adm. 376. S. C. Nos. 396, 423, ante.

433. Ship's husband—Not entitled to sue.—A ship's husband, not being a "seaman" claiming "wages earned by him on board the ship" within 419 i. — Limits of jurisdiction.—Where several seamen unite in an action against a ship for wages, the ct. has jurisdiction to entertain the suit if the total amount of the wages due to the promoters exceeds £50, although the wages of every one individually are less than £50.

A resp. in a suit for wages is not by a plea of tender precluded from afterwards raising an objection to the jurisdiction if it ultimately appear that the amount actually due is less than £50.

The Vice-Admty. Ct. has jurisdiction over a claim by seamen for compensation for wrongful discharge.

A seaman wrongfully discharged in the port of Melbourne is not entitled to receive as part of his compensation an allowance for viaticum to London, his port of engagement, if it be proved that he would have obtained employment on ships bound direct to London at higher wages than he was receiving when discharged. Seemle: if seamen are participes criminis in an endeavour to steal their ship they are not entitled to recover either wages or compensation for alleged wrongful discharge.—THE FERRET (1881-2), 8 V. L. R. Adm. 1 (P. C.).—AUS.

419 ii. ——The provisions of s. 189 of the above Act apply to foreign as well as British vessels, & a Vice-Admty. Ct. cannot entertain a suit for seamen's wages, the demand being below £50, unless upon a reference as prescribed by that Act.—Re THE MONARK, post.—CAN.

419 iii. ——Where an agreement with seamen was for a voyage from Shields to Barcelona, thence to Quebec & back to the United Kingdom:—Held: the Vice-Admty. Ct. had not under the above Act jurisdiction to entertain a suit for wages of the mate.—THE BRITISH FAIR STAR v. CHARLESSEN (1858), 9 L. T. 88.—CAN.

a. Admiralty Act, 1891—Limits of jurisdiction.—The engineer of a tug took proceedings on the Admty. side of the Exch. Ct. on a claim for $136 wages, & arrested the ship:—Held: (1) the above Act conferred upon the Exch. Ct. all the jurisdiction possessed by the Admty. Div. of the High Ct. in England as it stood on July 25, 1890, the date of the passing of Colonial Cts. of Admty. Act, 1890 (c. 27), & the Admty. Ct. in Canada could try any claim for seamen's wages, including claims below $200, & s. 31 of R. S. C., c. 75, was repealed by implication to the extent that it curtailed the jurisdiction of the Admty. Ct. to entertain claims for seamen's wages below $200 in amount; (2) the costs of such action were in the discretion of the judge trying the cause under r. 142 of the Admty. Rules of the Exch. Ct. of Canada. Tenant v. Ellis (1880), 6 Q. B. D. 46; Rockett v. Clippingdale, [1891] 2 Q. B. 293; The Salburn, [1892] P. 333, refd.—THE W. J. AIKENS (1893), 4 Ex. C. R. 7.—CAN.

b. Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 60)—Limits of jurisdiction.—The effect of s. 165 of the above Act is to debar a seaman suing in Admty. from recovering anything, where, though suing to recover more than £50, he does not establish a claim to more than that amount.—COLEMAN v. SMITH HOWARD CO., LTD. (1912), 12 S. R. (N. S. W.) 208.—AUS.

c. Merchant Seamen Act, 1814 (c. 112)—Limits of jurisdiction.—No seaman employed for a voyage or engagement which is to terminate in the United Kingdom can sue in a Colonial Vice-Admty. Ct. for his wages, unless discharged as directed by the above Act.—DALE v. THE VELOCITY (1855), James, 390.—CAN.

d. ——When the aggregate amount of the claims of a crew for wages exceeds £20, but the claim of each individual is less than £20, the petition of the seamen under s. 6 of the above Act will be rejected.—THE FAIR QUEEN (1847), 3 Ir. Jur. O. S. 283 (Adm.).—IR.

PART II. SECT. 7, SUB-SECT. 2 — B.

e. Musician.—Pliffs., musicians, claimed to recover for their services on a ship. They had arranged with the master to have meals, staterooms, & the right to collect gratuities for entertainments, but there was no evidence of a contract to pay wages:—Held: pliffs. were not seamen within Merchant Shipping Acts & not entitled to claim any sum for their services on the boat, nor entitled to set up a maritime lien.—*McELHANEY v. 436. —.]—A prohibition was moved for to stay a suit in the Admty. Ct. brought by a surgeon of a ship for his wages; the suggestion was, that all was paid to the master.

Payment to the master is not payment to the seamen, but the ship itself is liable for their wages; they would hear counsel (per Cur.).—MADDOX v. — (1701), 12 Mod. Rep. 526; 88 E. R. 1495.

Woman.]—Upon a claim for man's work done by a female in two capacities, one as cook & steward, the other as keeper of the ship & her stores in harbour or dock:—Held: an objection on the ground of the sex of the person employed was not legally maintainable.—THE JANE & MATILDA (1823), 1 Hag. Adm. 187.

Annotation:—Apld. R. v. City of London Court Judge (1890), 25 Q. B. D. 339.

C. Exercise of Jurisdiction.

438. On equitable principles.]—The Admty. Ct. may, as a Ct. of Eq., consider how far clauses in a ship's articles are reasonable & consistent with justice, bearing in mind the general ignorance & imprudence of seamen, & their inability to understand the meaning of a long & multifarious instrument.

Ship's articles are only conclusive as to the amount of wages & the voyage; on collateral points the Admty. Ct. may consider how far they are reasonable & just; a clause providing that if contraband goods were found in the fore-castle seamen living therein should forfeit their wages & £10 is not conclusive to work a forfeiture of wages against those not directly proved to be personally implicated in the offence, & the penalty cannot be enforced in the Admty. Ct.—THE PRINCE FREDERICK (1832), 2 Hag. Adm. 394.

439. —.]—Pltfs., seamen, engaged themselves at New York to serve on board a British vessel for wages to be paid in dollars. In the articles signed by pltfs. it was stated that wages would be paid in United States currency, or its equivalent. Pltfs. quitted the vessel at Liverpool, their period of service having expired. At this time the value of a dollar in United States currency was 2s. 1d., the sterling value being 4s. 2d. Pltfs. brought an action to recover their wages at the rate of 4s. 2d. the dollar. It was proved the invariable custom in the ports of London & Liverpool, when seamen were engaged at dollar wages, was to pay them according to the sterling value of the dollar:—Held: (1) pltfs. entitled to be paid at the rate of 4s. 2d. the dollar; (2) an agreement to pay in currency was not consistent with justice & equity, & would not be held binding unless it had been completely & perfectly explained to the seamen before they entered into it. Semble: such agreement would not always be held binding, even when it had been fully explained to the seamen.

It is the principle of this Ct. that the mariner shall not be subjected to any hardship of this kind where he has not understood what the consequence of the engagement he undertook would be. Seamen are a peculiar class of people entitled to special protection according to the doctrines of the Admty. Ct. Their ignorance, haste, disregard of forms, & the fact that they are entirely unaccustomed to matters of this description, induce the Ct. to guard them against their own want of care & caution (DR. LUSHINGTON).—THE ANNIE SHERWOOD (1865), 12 L. T. 582; 13 W. R. 641, 965; 2 Mar. L. C. 214.

440. Freighter not liable.]—A prohibition will issue to the Admty. Ct. in a case where an action is brought by the master & mariners of a ship for wages wherein process (in the nature of foreign attachment) was prayed & issued against freighters to arrest freight due to the owners in their hands.—MECLANHAM v. FOLIAM (1713), Gilb. 9; 93 E. R. 244; sub nom. NECLANHAM v. FOLIAMB, 6 Vin. Abr. 538.

441. Cargo-owner not liable.]—A seaman can have no claim against cargo for wages where the cargo does not belong to the shipowner; but as against the cargo for freight earned & not paid, the case may be subject to very different considerations.—THE RIBY GROVE, Nos. 394, 410, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 410, ante.

442. Defences—No agreement in fact.]—A man being entered in the articles as second mate, but with no rate of wages affixed:—Held: (1) such omission let in parol evidence of an agreement; (2) parol evidence establishing that the man was taken out of friendship to the father on a trial voyage, with certain indulgences & advantages amounting to a valuable consideration in lieu of wages, e.g., sleeping & messing in the cabin, the master paying wages to other persons to act as private tutors to him, in the different stations to which he was appointed, but not so well qualified, personally, to discharge, a claim for wages was not sustainable, especially as the master had at all times denied any wages were due.—THE HARVEY (1827), 2 Hag. Adm. 79.

443. — Limitation Act, 1623 (c. 16)—Not applicable.]—The above Act does not extend to suits in the Admty. for seamen's wages.—ANON. (1702), 11 Mod. Rep. 6; 88 E. R. 849.

444. — Suit not barred.]—The above Act is no bar to a suit in rem for wages, unless at any rate objection is taken in limine.—ELLIOTT v. LISTER (1756), Burrell, 320.

PART II. SECT. 7, SUB-SECT. 2.—C.

a. Procuring petition for wages—Collusive sale—Abuse of process.]—A schooner was in tow of a tug, & through the latter's fault collided with another vessel & was sunk. To defeat the lien for damage for which proceedings had been taken in a foreign Ct., the owner of the tug allowed the engineer's wages to run in arrears, & procured a petition to be filed in the maritime Ct. & the schooner to be sold to a nominal purchaser:—Held: (1) the proceedings were an abuse of the process of the Ct.; (2) petition was the proper mode of proceeding.—THE JEROME, 6 Ch. T. 263.—CAN.

b. Receiver—Injunction—Lien.]—A seaman sued for wages & applied for a receiver & injunction & a declaration that he had a lien upon deft.'s ship:—Held: the Supreme Ct. of the North-West Territories had jurisdiction, & an order for a receiver must be granted.—KELLY v. ALASKA MINING & TRADING CO. (1899), 4 Terr. L. R. 18.—CAN.

447. — Set-off—Not in respect of matter outside jurisdiction.]—On a claim by a purser for wages the owner pleaded, as set-off, that £183, a sum exceeding the amount claimed by the purser, was due to the owner for passage of the purser's wife:—Held: (1) the ct. had not jurisdiction to entertain a question of passage money, which must be claimed in another ct.; (2) the plea must be rejected.—THE LADY CAMPBELL (1826), 2 Hag. Adm. 5, No. 431, ante.

449. — Effect of negligence—Priority defeated.]—In a suit for damage by collision where proceeds of the ship & freight are insufficient to pay damages, a claim made by the crew of the ship in fault, whether a British or foreign vessel, for wages to be paid out of proceeds is not admissible where the shipowner is not bkpt.; the crew without specific blame being imputed to any one of them might all be considered in the character of wrongdoers.—THE LINDA FLOR (1857), Sw. 309; 30 L. SUB-SECT. 3.—JURISDICTION IN THE CASE OF SEAMEN ON FOREIGN SHIPS.

A. Nature of Jurisdiction.

450. Jurisdiction discretionary—Nationality of seaman immaterial.]—In a suit for wages by seamen on board a foreign vessel the Admty. Ct. has jurisdiction, but will not exercise it without first giving notice in accordance with Admty. Rules, 1859, r. 10, to the consul of the nation to which the foreign vessel belongs; if the consul, by protest, objects to the prosecution of the suit, the Admty. Ct. will determine whether it is fit & proper the suit should proceed or be stayed. Such process does not, ipso facto, operate as a bar to prosecution of the suit, as the foreign consul has not power to put a veto on the exercise of jurisdiction by the ct. In such suit it makes no difference that pltf. is a British subject; it is the nationality of the vessel, not of the individual seaman suing for his wages, that regulates the course of procedure. Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 10, which gives jurisdiction to the Admty. Ct. over any claim by a seaman of any ship (meaning thereby the ship of any nation) only extends previous jurisdiction in the ordinary case of wages, to wages under special contract, & disbursements on account of the ship, & does not abolish the practice enjoined by Admty. Rules, 1859, r. 10.

A British subject having shipped as "piloto," or mate, in a Portuguese vessel, under a written instrument called a matricula or roll, which contained the terms of his engagement, instituted a suit & arrested the vessel on her arrival at her port of destination, on a claim for extra wages & disbursements. The owner resisted the claim, insisting the vessel was foreign, & the piloto & crew were engaged according to the law of Portugal, & had agreed by the matricula to submit to the Codigo Commercial of Portugal, which, by art. 1489, provided that in case of any dispute between him & the master, the Portuguese consul in or near the port at which the vessel might chance to be, should have exclusive jurisdiction to try & determine such dispute according to the law of Portugal; & he relied on the protest of the Portuguese consul & the law of Portugal, as stated by him on affidavit, as applicable to the case:—Held: though the Admty. Ct. had a general discretionary authority to entertain such a suit, yet pltf. having by his agreement consented to be bound by Portuguese law, the ct. below rightly released the vessel from arrest, & determined the suit ought not to be proceeded with in that ct.—THE NINA (1867–8), L. R. 2 P. C. 38; 5 Moo. P. C. C. N. S. 51; 37 L. J. Adm. 17; 17 L. T. 585; 3 Mar. L. C. 47; 16 F. R. 434, P. C. S. C. No. 720, post.

451. — Interference with discretion by Court of Appeal.]—In an action for wages & wrongful dismissal, brought by persons domiciled in England against a Spanish ship, in which they had served under articles signed in a Spanish port, in which action imprisonment, hardship, & ill-treatment were alleged, the ct. refused to exercise jurisdiction against the protest of the Spanish consul alleging that, by the law of Spain all disputes relating to the ship or claims against the owner or master were to be referred to & decided by tribunals or consuls of Spain. On appeal:—Held: (1) pltf. must, in the circumstances, be considered subjects of the country to which the ship belonged; (2) although the jurisdiction of the Admty. Ct. could not be ousted even by express agreement, yet the ct. had a discretion to exercise as to whether it would entertain the action or refer it to be tried before the Spanish consul; (3) as pltf. had not shown that the judge of the Admty. Ct. had wrongly exercised his discretion in dismissing the action, the C. A. saw no reason for interfering with his decision.—THE LEON XIII., WARDROP v. THE LEON XIII. (1883), 8 P. D. 121; 52 L. J. P. 58; 47 L. T. 659; W. R. 882; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 73, C. A. S. C. No. 1656, post.

452. — Conditions of exercise—Consent of foreign minister not essential—Notice.]—The Admty. Ct. has jurisdiction to entertain suits for wages promoted by foreign seamen against foreign vessels. The consent of the foreign minister or consul is not essential to found the jurisdiction of the ct. in such suits. It is necessary that notice of intended proceedings should be given in the first instance to the representative of the Govt. to which the vessel proceeded against belongs.—THE GOLUBCHICK (1840), 1 Wm. Rob. 143. S. C. No. 452, post.

PART II. SECT. 7, SUB-SECT. 3.—A.

452 I. Jurisdiction discretionary—Conditions of exercise—Consent of foreign minister not essential.]—The consent of a foreign consul is not necessary to the institution of a suit for wages by foreign seamen; & foreign seamen instituting such suit, whose conduct has been good, will, upon substantiating their claims, be allowed a reasonable sum to support them, pending the proceedings, & to take them home to their own country.—THE ALEXANDRE (1849), 5 Ir. Jur. O. S. 379 (Adm.).—IR.

452 II. — Admty. Ct. entertains proceedings for wages as due to foreign seamen by the general maritime law, with the consent of the foreign consul.]—POPE v. THE HARRIET & MOLLY (1857), 6 L. T. 602.—IR.

Sect. 7.—Wages, master's wages & disbursements:
B. Sect. 8: Sub-sect. 1, A.]

454. ——— Protest of consul.]—The jurisdiction of the ct. is discretionary only, & the ct. requires as a condition that previous notice should be given to the consul or representative of the foreign state. Foreigners in England are bound to some extent by acts of their own Govt., & in shipping matters by the act of their consul. If the representative of the foreign state expresses his dissent to the suit, the ct., though not bound so to do, will incline to hold its hand & remit the foreign master to the remedy under the laws of his own country.

The master of a foreign ship instituted a cause against the ship for wages, & no notice of the institution of the cause was given by him to the consul of the foreign state. The owners appeared under protest; & the consul swearing an affidavit in the cause, protested as consul against the cause being allowed to proceed:—Held: (1) the jurisdiction of the Admty. Ct. over causes of wages of foreign masters is discretionary only; (2) notice of institution of any such cause ought to be given to the consul of the state to which the ship belongs; (3) the protests of the consul was, in the circumstances, a bar to the cause proceeding.—THE HERZOGIN MARIE (1861), Lush. 292; 5 L. T. 88; 1 Mar. L. C. 144. S. C. No. 725, post.

455. ———.]—The protest by a foreign consul against the continuance of a wages cause against a foreign vessel does not deprive the ct. of jurisdiction; but the ct. will use its discretion whether or not to exercise its jurisdiction.

In a wages cause instituted by the master of a Belgian ship an appearance was entered on behalf of the ship by the owners' broker & agent, who also as Belgian vice-consul in Liverpool, protested against the cause being allowed to proceed. Subsequently the Belgian consul in London protested on the ground "that, in his opinion, the cause ought to be settled by the Belgian Cts. of Law":—Held: (1) in the above circumstances the protest of the vice-consul would not be sufficient to induce the ct. to hold its hand; (2) the ct. would act upon the interposition of the consul in London.—THE OCTAVIE (1863), Brown, & Lush. 215; 3 New Rep. 252; 33 L. J. P. M. & A. 115; 9 L. T. 695; 1 Mar. L. C. 420.

454 i. ——— Protest of consul.]—The promoter & thirteen others shipped on board an American ship 1,600 tons at London for a voyage "from London to a port in the United States of America or to Cape Breton, & from thence on a general freighting voyage between the Columbia River North & Melbourne South." On arrival at Quebec they brought suit for wages. The United States consul, upon receiving notice of suit, requested that the case should not be entertained:—Held: the jurisdiction of the ct. over causes of wages of foreign seamen being discretionary, the ct. would not in the circumstances proceed with the suit.—RE THE BRIDGEWATER (1880), 7 Q.W. R. 346.—CAN.

454 ii. ———.]—In a suit for a seaman's wages against a foreign ship the consul for Sweden & Norway intervened & protested to the jurisdiction, contending that the ct. in its discretion ought not to hear the suit:—Held: the protest must be overruled.—RE THE MONARK (1883), 9 Q. L. R. 211.—CAN.

454 iii. ———.]—In an action by three seamen of an American vessel for wages, the consul of the United States addressed a protest to the ct., requesting that the matter in dispute should be left to be decided by the United States Consular Authorities. The seamen were engaged at Manila, in the Philippine Islands, & within the Spanish Dominions. Their contract was made in the Spanish language & contained a stipulation that they should be sent back to their home in Manila after the termination of the voyage for which they had engaged:—Held: though the ct. should not, as a general rule, interfere in disputes respecting the wages claimed by seamen of foreign vessels during the voyage, it should have jurisdiction & should exercise it where there appeared to be just cause for so doing.—RE THE MARY RUSSELL (1884), 10 Q. L. R. 265, V. A. C. 1884.—CAN.

454 iv. ——— Stay of proceedings.]—Pltfs., American citizens, shipped at New York as seamen for a voyage to Belfast, on board a North German ship belonging to Dantzig, & signed an agreement to be bound by shipping articles made in accordance with the Code of Commercial Law of

456. ——— Notice to court.]—When a foreign seaman sues in the Admty. Ct. for wages, if the consul from his country objects to the proceedings, the ct. should have immediate notice of that fact, as usually it would not be disposed any longer to entertain the suit.—THE FRANZ ET ELIZE (1861), Lush. 377; 5 L. T. 290; 1 Mar. L. C. 155. S. C. Nos. 770, 1035, post.

457. Ouster of jurisdiction—Foreign sailors stipulating not to sue in England.]—If foreign sailors before the commencement of a voyage stipulate in their own country that they will not sue the captain for any money abroad, but be satisfied with what he may advance them in reduction of their wages till they return home, they cannot maintain an action against him for wages, in the cts. of England.—JOHNSON v. MACHIELSNE (1811), 3 Camp. 44.

B. Exercise of Jurisdiction.

458. Conflict of laws—Maritime law enforced—Not municipal regulations.]—As wages are due by general maritime law, however modified by particular regulations of different countries, the ct., in order to prevent a failure of justice has, with consent of the accredited agent of their own Govt., entertained proceedings for wages, at the suit of foreign seamen against foreign vessels in which they have served, such vessels being in English ports. It is otherwise where the claim does not arise out of general maritime law, but out of a municipal law of their country.

In an action for wages brought by American seamen, the claim included three months' pay, payable over & above wages due, under an Act of Congress, in consequence of their being discharged in England:—Held: (1) the ct. would entertain the claim for wages with consent of the representative of United States of America; (2) the ct. had no jurisdiction to enforce a municipal regulation of that country & could not entertain the claim for three months' pay. Scmble: if the provisions of the Act of Congress had been embodied in the articles, so as to form part of the contract, the ct. might be empowered to enforce them.—THE COURTNEY (1810), Edw. 239.

459. ——— Lex fori.]—M. sailed in a ship belonging to United States of America, as second mate, Germany, which forbade a seaman to summon his captain before a foreign ct. of justice, but permitted him, in cases of immediate necessity, to appeal to the temporary decision of the National Consul. On the arrival of the vessel at Belfast pltfs. caused her to be arrested, & instituted a cause for wages. Notice was given to the Prussian consul at Belfast, whereupon he entered a protest against the proceedings. On motion by deft., the master of the vessel, the ct. decreed the proceedings to be stayed, but made no order as to costs. The Nina (1867), L. R. 2 P. C. 38, apprvd.—THE OBERBURGERMEISTER VON WINTER (1869), 18 W. R. 357; 41 L. T. 20.—IR.

454 v. ——— Effect of absolute appearance.]—The discretion vested in the Admty. Ct. whether to proceed or not in a cause of wages instituted against a foreign ship against which the foreign consul has entered a protest is not ousted by an absolute appearance by deft., & may be exercised on the motion of deft.—THE OBERBURGERMEISTER VON WINTER (1870), 18 W. R. 443, C. A.—IR.

on a voyage from San Francisco to England. During the voyage, by the death of the original master & of the first mate, the command of the ship devolved upon M. On arrival of the ship in England, he proceeded against the freight for wages earned by him as master:—Held: (1) the right of M. to recover such wages by an action against the freight must be governed by the lex fori or law of England, & not by the lex loci contractus, or law of United States of America; (2) by M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 191, M., though master of a foreign vessel, had a remedy against the ship & freight for wages earned by him as master.—THE MILFORD (1858), Sw. 392; 31 L. T. O. 460. ———.]—In proceedings in rem by the foreign master of an Argentine vessel in an English port, the claim of the master consisted of: (1) wages as supercargo, & afterwards as master; (2) disbursements whilst acting as supercargo, & afterwards as master. On the question of priority as against a mtgee. intervening:—Held: (1) though by the lex loci the master could only claim his wages & disbursements for the last voyage as a “privileged debt” in priority to mtgee., the question was one of remedy, & the lex fori applied; (2) by reason of the maritime lien conferred by M. S. Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 167, he could claim, in priority, the whole of his wages & disbursements whilst master; (3) he was also entitled to add thereto his wages as a seaman whilst acting as supercargo, & such disbursements as he had then made by way of advances to the crew on account of their wages.—THE TAGUS, [1903] P. 44; 72 L. which no appearance has been entered, & the proceeds remain in the registry, all preliminary proceedings in a cause of wages were waived, & money due paid out of ct. The ct. would not pay the money to a foreign consul at his request, but ordered the payment out of the amount of the claim on the solicitor of the parties undertaking to pay the consul the sums he had advanced.—THE JULINA (1876), 35 L. 466. ——— Action for wages not necessary—Ship under arrest.]—When a foreign ship is under arrest, & no appearance entered for her, the ct. will allow payment of wages & vialicum out of freight in the hands of pltf. in a bottomry suit, & order discharge of the crew, although no suit is instituted for their wages.—THE BRIDGWATER (1877), 37 L. SECT. 8.—DAMAGE BY COLLISION, ETC.

See, generally, SHIPPING & NAVIGATION.

SUB-SECT. 1.—NATURE AND EXTENT OF JURISDICTION.

A. Conditions of Jurisdiction.

467. Cause of action—Damage, not contact.]—In cases of collision between ships a mere contact without damage gives no right of action; the cause of action is the damage sustained by one ship through negligence of those on board another.—THE MARGARET (1881), 6 P. D. 76; 50 L. J. P. 67; 44 L. T. 291; 29 W. R. 533; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 375, C. A.

468. Collision not essential.]—If through negligence or misconduct of those on board a vessel another vessel receives or does damage, the owners of the wrong-doing vessel will be liable in the Admty. Ct. for the damage, even though there was no collision between the two vessels.—THE INDUSTRIE (1871), L. R. 3 A. & E. 303; 40 L. J. Adm. 26; 24 L. T. 446; 19 W. R. 728; 1 Asp. M. L. C. 17. S. C. 469. ——— Collision caused by third vessel.]—A collision between two vessels was caused by wrong navigation of a third vessel:—Held: the damage sustained in the collision could be recovered in a cause of damage instituted in the Admty. Ct. against the vessel so causing the collision.—THE SISTERS (1876), 1 P. D. 117; 45 L. J. P. 39; 34 L. T. 338; 24 W. R. 412; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 122, C. A. S. C. No. 1639, post.

d. Action by person residing out of jurisdiction—Liability to cross-action.]—One who sues for damage caused by collision at sea out of the jurisdiction of the High Ct. subjects himself to a cross-suit for damages caused by same collision, though himself residing out of the jurisdiction of the ct.—BOMBAY COAST & RIVER STEAM NAVIGATION Co. v. HELEUX (1867), 4 Bom. O. C. 149.—IND.

PART II. SECT. 8, SUB-SECT. 1.—A.

a. Foreign ships.]—Admty. Cts. have jurisdiction in rem with respect to “claims for damage done by any ship,” of whatever nationality. The Clara Killam (1873), L. R. 3 A. & E. 161, cited.—THE CZAR, p. 142, d, post.—CAN.

b. ———.]—In a case of collision where neither of the vessels was owned in the British possessions the ct. has jurisdiction.—THE CLEMENTINE (1875), Y. A. D. 186.—CAN.

c. ———.]—The High Ct. has jurisdiction, under the common maritime law of Bombay, to entertain a suit in respect of a collision upon the high seas between two foreign vessels, although that collision may not have occurred in British or Anglo-Indian waters, & notwithstanding the opposition of the consul of the state to which deft. belongs. Qu.: whether the High Ct. has a discretion to decline to entertain such suit. Even if there be such discretion, the ct. will ordinarily allow a suit of that nature to proceed.—BARDOT v. THE

Sect. 8.—Damage by Collision, etc.: Sub-sect. 1, A. B. & C.]

470. Personal liability of owner essential.]—A ship is not liable to be proceeded against in rem for damage unless her owners at the time of the accident are personally liable, & could be proceeded against in personam for damage.—THE TASMANIA (1888), 13 P. D. 110; 57 L. J. P. 49; 59 L. T. 263; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 305.

471. — Wilful tort of master.]—A foreigner suing in the Admty. Ct. for redress of a wrong inflicted within British jurisdiction must be ruled by the municipal law prevailing in the cts. of England.

Where a foreign vessel is wantonly injured by the master of a British steam tug, the owner of the British ship, not being in any way culpable, & not being responsible at common law, cannot be proceeded against in the Admty. Ct., & proceedings cannot be instituted against the ship.—THE DRUID (1842), 1 Wm. Rob. 391; 1 Notes of Cases, 444; 6 Jur. 441. S. C. No. 1029, post.

475. Damage to barge—By foreign ship.]—Damage done by a foreign vessel to a barge in the Thames; arrest according to ordinary process; absolute appearance & release of vessel thereon; petition filed. Plea that the barge was not a sea-going vessel within s. 6 of the above Act & that the ct. had not jurisdiction:—Held: (1) the ct. had jurisdiction by M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 527; (2) after absolute appearance defts. could not object that the arrest had not strictly followed the course prescribed in that sect.

The former Act does not give the ct. jurisdiction over damage done to a vessel not "a sea-going vessel" within the body of a county; but if the ship doing the injury is foreign, the ct. has jurisdiction by the latter Act, & any objection purely technical to the exercise of the jurisdiction cannot be allowed after absolute appearance.—THE BILBAO (1860), Lush. 149; 3 L. 477. — Action by bailees—Practice.]—In a cause of collision instituted by the bailees of a barge against a steamship:—Held: (1) plffs. were competent to sue in rem in the Admty. Ct.; (2) in order to protect defts. from the possibility of another suit by other parties interested in the same vessel, the money awarded as compensation for the damage should not be paid until it should be satisfactorily established that such payment would release defts. from all claims by the owners of the barge in respect of the collision.—THE MINNA (1868), L. 478. Damage by barge — Within body of county.]—Damage was done to a ship by a barge within the body of a county:—Held: (1) the Admty. Ct. would have had jurisdiction at common law in respect of such damage if done on the high seas; (2) by s. 6 of the above Act the ct. was given jurisdiction in respect of the same damage done within the body of a county, as it had before jurisdiction in respect of when done on the high seas.—PURKIS v. FLOWER (1873), L. R. 9 Q. B. 114; 43 L. J. Q. B. 33; 30 L. T. 40; 22 W. R. 239; 2 Asp. M. L. C. 226. S. C. Nos. 1370, 1723, post.

480. Collision with pierhead.]—A ship was damaged by collision with a pierhead:—Held: (1) the jurisdiction of the ct. under s. 6, of the above Act, was not limited to damage received by collision with another ship; (2) the case fell within the statutory jurisdiction. Semble: the jurisdiction of the Admty. Ct. at common law was not limited to cases of collision with another ship.—THE ZETA, Nos. 1377, 1723 post.

482. — Right to bring separate action—Costs.]—Where the owners of a cargo & the owners of a ship which is run down are different persons, the Admty. Ct. has no authority to compel the owners of the cargo to proceed at the same time, or to say they are not entitled to proceed at a later period, if they think it their interest so to do, but the ct. would be sorry to see vexatious proceedings & double suits; where it perceived parties, without just cause, resorting to such courses, it would not allow them the benefit of costs.—THE LITTLE HAMPTON (1842), 1 Notes of Cases, 358. 483. — Right of bailee.]—A collision occurred between the M. & the W., in consequence of which the M., which was carrying passengers & mails, sank, & the greater part of the mails was lost. The W. limited her liability under M. S. Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 502. At the reference before the registrar & merchants the Postmaster-General claimed against the fund in ct., as bailee for senders of registered letters & parcels lost by the collision, the estimated value of same, although he was under no liability to the owners of them:—Held: as bailee in possession, he could recover damages for the loss of the goods irrespective of his liability to the bailors.—THE WINKFIELD, [1902] P. 42; 71 L. 490. Damage to oyster-beds & oysters.]—Pltfs., owners of oyster-beds at the mouth of a navigable river, brought an action in rem against a vessel of defts. which was so negligently navigated as to ground on pltfs.' property & thereby damage their oyster-beds & oysters:—Held: (1) the damage was "done by a ship" within s. 7 of the above Act; (2) the action would lie.—THE SWIFT, [1901] P. 168; 70 L. 491. Damage to pier.]—The owners of a pier, who are undertakers within Harbours, Docks, & Piers Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 27), acquire, under s. 74, a maritime lien in respect of any damage done to their pier by a ship, & may proceed in rem to recover that damage in the Admty. Ct., & the ship-owners are debarred by the above sect. from setting up the defence of inevitable accident.—THE MERLE (1874), 31 L. T. 447; 2 Asp. M. L. C. 402.

492. Damage to piles & works — No direct impact.]—Pltfs. brought an action against the owners of the V. & the A. to recover damages occasioned by the V. colliding with certain piles & works, pltfs.' property. The V. admitted coming into contact with the pier, but alleged that she was forced so to do by the negligent navigation of the A.:—Held: the damage was due to negligence of the A., whose owners were ordered to pay pltfs.' costs & those of the owners of the V.—GREEN & BURLEIGH v. GOODYEAR & GENERAL STEAM NAVIGATION CO. (1884), 6 Asp. M. L. C. 281 n.

493. Damage to submarine cable.]—A ship cast anchor near the South Foreland. Her anchor fouled a submarine telegraph cable. The crew heaved up the anchor to the water's edge, & the cable came up entangled with it. In order to free the anchor from the cable, the mate of the ship, acting under the master's direction, cut the cable in two with a hatchet. By exercise of ordinary nautical skill the anchor might have been freed from the cable by the crew without cutting the cable:—Held: (1) the ct. had jurisdiction to entertain an action instituted by the owners of the cable against the ship for damage done to the cable; (2) the owners of the cable were entitled to judgment in the action.—THE CLARA KILLAM (1870), L. R. 3 A. & E. 161; 39 L. J. Adm. 50; 23 L. T. 27; 19 W. R. 25; 3 Mar. L. C. 463.

494. Chartered ship — Liable notwithstanding charter.]—By the maritime law there is a right of proceeding in rem against the vessel doing damage, which cannot be taken away by any voluntary contract of the owners with a third person.

The T. under charterparty to the French Govt. was towed by a steamer athwart the hawser of the M. The T. alleged that she was not liable for damage done, as her charterparty obliged her to obey orders & put herself in tow of the steamer:—Held: such obligation was no compulsion, so as to lay the ground for exemption from liability for damage done, as it arose from a voluntary stipu-

496. Yacht laid up—Default of baillee.]—Deft.'s yacht was intrusted for reward to yachting agents for sale, & by their servants, moored in the winter season without striking her topgear, whereby, on a gale occurring, the yacht drifted & fouled another yacht :—Held: deft.'s yacht was liable in a proceeding in rem in the Admty. 497. Tug & tow—Collision with third vessel—All to blame.]—Where a steam tug towing a vessel came into collision with a third vessel & all three vessels were found to blame :—Held: (1) such collision was a maritime tort within the jurisdiction of the Admty. Ct.; (2) the right to recover damages was governed by the rule prevailing in that ct., not by the common law doctrine of contributory negligence; (3) the owners of the tug & of the tow were liable for half the damages of the third vessel after deducting half the damages of the tug.—THE ENGLISHMAN & THE AUSTRALIA, [1894] P. 239; 63 L. 498. Liability of cargo.]—In a collision action in rem the decision may go against the cargo on the wrong-doing ship as well as against the ship.—TOMLINSON v. VOGUEL (1733), Burrell, 313.

499. — To extent of freight only.]—The cargo of a ship in fault for negligent collision can be arrested for the purpose of obtaining freight only, & according to all practice (upon which r. 49 of the Admty. Ct. Rules is founded), the cargo must be released upon payment of the freight. It cannot be attached for the purpose of making good by its own value the damages done by the ship in which it is conveyed. Although the liability of a foreign shipowner is not limited by M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), ss. 504, 511, to the value of ship & freight, the ct. has no jurisdiction, where the value is insufficient to pay the damage, to attach the cargo, even if it is the property of the foreign shipowner, in order to make it pay for the deficiency.—THE VICTOR (1860), Lush. 72; 28 L. 500. — — — Deductions allowed.]—The owner of cargo on board a ship sued for collision is only compellable to pay into ct. the freight due from him to the ship-owner. In computing the amount of such freight, deductions, as by charter, from gross freight will be allowed; & if the cargo is delivered at a place short of destination by reason of the collision, such reasonable reduction as may have been agreed upon between the ship-owner & the owner of the cargo. Costs of paying freight into ct. may also be deducted.—THE LEO (1862), Lush. 444; 31 L. J. P. M. & A. 78; 6 L. T. 58; 1 Mar. L. C. 200.

502. — — — Arrest & release.]—A pltf. in a cause of collision suing ship & freight may always arrest the cargo for freight, & if freight is not due, will not incur costs & damages; but upon affidavit that no freight is due, & that he is ready to carry on to destination, deft., owner of the ship sued, is entitled to have the cargo released.—THE FLORA (1866), L. b. — — — Hulk.]—A hulk used for storing ice, moored in a harbour, dragged her anchors across a telegraph cable, & injured it. g. Damage apart from collision—Tort—Colonial Courts of Admiralty Act, 1890 (c. 27).]—To establish a maritime lien for damage against a ship, the damage must be the direct result of some unskillful or negligent conduct of those in charge of the ship which does the mischief, the ship herself being the "instrument of mischief." The T., in dock, discharged a quantity of oil, which, floating on the dock-water & becoming ignited, caused damage to the C., lying in same dock. 503. Collision in river—Nondescript craft—Contributory negligence.—An action of damage for collision in a river brought by the owner of a launch against the owners of a dredger with wings employed in dredging the river:—Held: this was a common law, not an Admty. action; & as the negligence of the pltf. had contributed to the collision, he could not recover damages in respect either of the collision or of subsequent damage arising to the launch without negligence in consequence of the collision.—THE BLOW BOAT, [1912] P. 217; 82 L. J. P. 24.

504. Damage apart from collision—Wilful tort—Committed in foreign river.—The ct. has jurisdiction over causes of collision, but not over damage generally.

The master of a Danish schooner lying alongside the quay at the port I., in the Danube got on board an English barque lying outside him, & with a view to getting the schooner out, wilfully cut the barque adrift from her moorings, whereby she swung to the stream, & capsized a barge, which contained part of her cargo belonging to Turkish owners:—Held: the Turkish owners of the cargo destroyed could not sue the Danish schooner in the Admty. 507. 508. Claim by cargo-owner—Against carrying ship.—The jurisdiction conferred by Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 7, "over any claim for damage done by any ship," does not cover a claim by a cargo-owner against the ship carrying cargo for damage received by the cargo in a collision.

A foreign vessel pronounced to blame for a collision with another vessel was at the time of collision under orders for Malta, & laden with a cargo of sugar, portions of which were after the collision carried to Malta, & thence, as there ordered, to Havre.

The owners of the cargo instituted an action in rem in the Admty. Ct. against the vessel on which the cargo had been so laden, to recover for damage done to the cargo by the collision. The owners of the vessel appeared, & their agents deposed that no part of the cargo had been brought by the vessel proceeded against into any port of England or Wales:—Held: the action must be dismissed as brought without jurisdiction.—THE VICTORIA (1887), 12 P. The owners of the A. filed an admission of liability in the action brought by the owners of the T., but a few days later the charterers of the T. commenced proceedings in rem for loss alleged to have been caused to them by the collision, & arrested the A. Defts., who alleged that the T. was in the possession & control of her owners at the time of the collision, sought to stay the proceedings. At the time of collision the T. was running under a charterparty entered into between pltf.s & the owners of the vessel, whereby she was chartered for a fixed period with an option of renewal for various periods making twenty-four months in all; at the time in question she was employed by pltf.s in a regular trade between Goole & London. The charter was a source of profit to pltf.s, who had entered into engagements for freights, which engagements rendered it necessary for pltf.s to engage other steamers at an increased rate of hire during the time that the T. was under repairs; further, they had incurred expense in removing bunker coal belonging to them from the T.:—Held: (1) neither in Admty. nor at common law had a charterer a right of action against another vessel or her owners in respect of profit on the charterparty lost by reason of a collision; (2) as there were coals belonging to the charterers on board, & there had been some expense & delay the motion to set aside the writ on the ground that there was no jurisdiction whatever must fail, as there was a prima facie case of some small claim which would support a writ.—THE AMSTELSTROOM (1901), 18 Com. 510. Injuries caused by ship—Arbitration no bar.—By Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 7, the Admty. Ct. has jurisdiction to entertain a cause of damage for personal injuries done by a ship.

A diver, while engaged in diving in the Mersey, was caught by the paddle-wheel of a steamer & suffered considerable injury, for which he brought an action against the owners, which was referred to arbn. By the agreement of reference, all the rights of pltf. were reserved in case the award of the arbitrator should not be performed. The arbitrator awarded compensation, but defts. never paid. Pltf. instituted a cause of damage against the ship. On motion to dismiss the petition:—Held: (1) the ct. had jurisdiction to enter-

512. — Ship active instrument of damage.]—The words "damage done by any ship" in Admty. Ct. Act, 1861, s. 7, apply to cases of injury to the person as well as to damage to property; the sect. only confers jurisdiction where the ship is the active instrument causing the damage.

Pltf. issued a writ in rem, & arrested a vessel, claiming damages for personal injuries sustained through falling down into the hold of that vessel owing to the hatchway being only covered with a tarpaulin, when he was crossing to his own ship, which was moored outside the first-mentioned vessel in the Regent's Canal Dock. 512 iii. ——J.—Owing to a defect in the supports of a portion of the coverings of a hatch upon a steamship, pltf., who was employed by a stevedore to assist in discharging the cargo, & was standing on part of the coverings of the hatch whilst assisting to uncover it, was injured. He brought an action for damages against the ship in the Admty. jurisdiction of the Supreme Ct. :—Held : in view of the dicta in "The Vera Cruz" (No. 2) (1884), 9 P. D. 98, 99, 101, & the decision in "The Theta", [1894] P. 280, the damage was not "done by the ship" within Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 10, & there was no Admty. jurisdiction over the matter.—THE QUEEN ELEANOR (1899), 18 L. R. 78.—N. Z.

512 iv. ——*Negligence of fellow workmen.]—*Owing to the breakage of a stop valve, pltf. was injured whilst repairing the engines of a ship, & brought an action against the ship, claiming damages for injuries arising through the negligence of the owners of the ship in using defective machinery :—

(c. 57)—Action in rem—Whether maintainable.]—A collision took place between the B. & the S. within three miles of the shore of Gt. Britain, & the master & four of the crew of the S. were drowned. The B. was arrested in a cause of damage by the owners of the S. On an application on behalf of the representatives of the drowned men to the ct. to direct a citation in rem to issue against the vessel, for compensation in respect of their deaths on the ground that Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 7, extended the jurisdiction of the ct. to questions of damage done by any ship & that Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93) (Lord Campbell's Act), was applicable :—Held : (1) a sufficient prima facie case had been shown; (2) a citation should be issued.—THE BORODINO (1861), 5 L. 515. — Plaintiffs foreigners.]—A collision occurred on the high seas, out of British waters, between a British & a foreign ship. Foreigners on board the latter were drowned. A suit was brought for the benefit of their relatives against the British ship to recover compensation for their deaths :—Held : (1) the Admty. Ct. had jurisdiction to entertain a claim under Lord Campbell's Act by virtue of Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 7; (2) the claim was within Lord Campbell's Act, notwithstanding the persons killed were foreigners on the high seas.—THE EXPLORER (1870), L. R. 3 A. & E. 289; 40 L. a. Maritime Court Act—Pleading.]—Applt.'s child, a minor, was killed in a collision between two vessels, & applt. libelled under Maritime Court Act at Windsor, claiming damages suffered by her, owing to the death of her son & servant. Resp. demurred on the ground that the petition did not set forth a cause of action within the jurisdiction of the ct. :—Held : the maritime ct. of Ontario had no jurisdiction apart from R. S. O. 1877, c. 128 (re-enacting in that province Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93)), in an action for personal injury resulting in death, & therefore applt. had no locus standi, not having brought her action as the personal representative of the child.—*Re THE GARLAND, MONAGHAN v. C. Measure of Damages.

519. Admiralty rule not applicable.]—The A. & the B. collided through default of the masters & crews of each vessel, & two persons on board the A., one of the crew & a passenger, neither of whom had anything to do with the negligent navigation, were drowned. The representatives of the deceased having brought in the Admty. Div. actions in personam against the owners of the B. for negligence under Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93):—Held: (1) the deceased persons were not identified in respect of the negligence with those navigating the A.; (2) their representatives could maintain the actions; (3) they could recover the whole of the damages, the Admty. rule as to half damages not being applicable to actions under the above Act.—THE BERNINA (1888), 13 App. Cas. 1; 57 L. 521. Compensation payable under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (c. 58)—Recoverable.]—The A. & the B. collided owing to the negligence of the B. The master of the A. fell overboard & was drowned, & his employers, the owners of the A., had to pay his dependants £300 as compensation under s. 6 of the above Act. In a damage action by the owners of the A. against the owners of the B.:—Held: (1) the £300 paid to the dependants of deceased master was damage which arose from the negligent navigation of the B.; (2) it was recoverable in an action in personam.—THE ANNIE (1909), 100 L. T. 415; 11 Asp. M. L. C. Adm. 213.

522. — Not recoverable.]—A lightship owned by the Irish Lights Comrs. was run into & damaged by a German sailing ship in tow of a tug. The sailing ship was arrested in England in an action instituted by the owners of the lightship to recover the damage they had sustained, & an undertaking was given in the action to appear & put in bail to answer the claim. After the writ was issued & the undertaking given, one of the crew on the lightship made a claim under the above Act against her owners for compensation for injury caused by shock by fright before the collision actually took place, & an award was made in his favour in those proceedings which were taken in Ireland. The owners of the lightship claimed an indemnity for any sum paid or payable to the workman in respect of his injury, & sought to recover the sum so paid from the owners of the German sailing ship:—Held: (1) even assuming the seaman had sustained the shock alleged & was entitled to recover compensation under the Act from the comrs., & though the ship was for the purposes of the Act to be considered a British ship, the owners of the German sailing ship were not bound by the decision in the arbn.; (2) money paid under the award was not recoverable in an action in rem as it was not damage done by a ship, as the shock had been sustained before the collision happened; (3) the claim was too remote.—THE RIGEL, [1912] P. 99; 81 L. 523. Compensation payable under foreign law—Not recoverable.]—The Spanish s.s. C. collided with the French s.s. C. Some seamen on board the S. were drowned, & the owners of the S. had to pay to relatives of the drowned seamen certain sums under Spanish Accident Act, 1900. Such payments were payable under the Act, although there was no proof of negligence on the part of the shipowner who employed the seamen. The claims by the owners of the S. & the C. were settled on the terms that both ships were to blame for the collision. The owners of the S. sought to recover from the owners of the C. half the amounts paid under the Spanish Act to relatives of the deceased seamen:—Held: (1) they were not entitled to recover anything in respect of the amounts so paid, because these amounts were not damages recognised by English law, but payments made under a foreign Act in respect of an accident; (2) the rule as to division of loss as enforced in the Admty. Ct. could not apply to them, as they were not damages which could have been recovered under Admty. jurisdiction.—THE CIRCE, [1906] P. 1; 74 L. J. P. 106; 93 L. T. 640; 22 T. L. R. 525; 10 Asp. M. SECT. 9.—DAMAGE TO CARGO.

SUB-SECT. 1.—NATURE AND EXTENT OF JURISDICTION.

A. Where Jurisdiction exists.

524. Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 6—Construction of.]—The above Act being intended to remedy a grievance, by amplifying the jurisdiction of the English Admty. Ct., ought to be construed liberally, to afford the utmost relief which the fair meaning of its language will allow.—THE PIEVE SUPERIORE, Nos. 526, 539, 545, 555, 769, post.

525. — Breach of duty.]—In construing the above sect. the ct. will not be limited by considerations as to whether or not there would be a corresponding right of action at common law, but will so interpret the sect. as to give a remedy in all cases contemplated by the Act itself.

It is a breach of duty under the above sect. for the master to withhold from the holder of a bill of lading such particulars within his knowledge as are necessary in order to compute the amount of freight & general average contribution.—THE NORWAY, Nos. 534, 558, 1074, post.

526. — Effect of.]—The above Act does not confer a maritime lien. It only gives to the Admty. Ct. jurisdiction to entertain a suit either in personam or in rem by arrest of the ship whenever it comes within reach of process. The arrest cannot avail against any valid charge on the ship, or against a bona fide purchaser. The general words "any claim for any breach of contract on part of owner etc. of the ship," in the above sect., have relation to the contract in the bill of lading.—THE PIEVE SUPERIORE, No. 524, ante; Nos. 539, 545, 555, 769, post.

527. — Act retrospective.]—Held: the above sect. is remedial, & subject to equitable considerations applying to proceedings in rem, & conferred jurisdiction over causes of action which occurred before the time when the Act came into operation.—THE IRONSIDES, No. 37, ante; Nos. 528, 562, post.

529. — Chartered ship.]—A shipowner who charters his vessel to another, but not so as to give up possession, is liable for a breach of contract contained in a bill of lading, signed by the master, such as injury to goods by improper stowage, if it is not proved that at the time of shipment the shipper had notice of the charter. In the same circumstances (the owner of the ship not being domiciled in England or Wales) the ship is liable under ss. 6, 35 of the above Act.—*THE ST. 532. — — — — — Person in default.]—Semb: the Admty. Ct. has jurisdiction to proceed in rem against a ship for breach of contract, within the above sect., although the breach is committed by one of the part-owners of the ship only (the master), & is one for which the other part-owners would not be responsible.—THE EMILIEN MARIE (1875), 44 L. 533. — — — — — Consignee named in bill of lading.]—The consignees named in a bill of lading are entitled under the above sect. to sue for negligence in carriage of the goods, or for breach of contract contained in the bill of lading, although the property in the goods has not passed to them.—THE NEPOTER (1869), L. R. 2 A. & E. 375; 38 L. J. Adm. 63; 22 L. T. 177; 18 W. R. 49; 3 Mar. L. C. 355.

534. — — — — — Assignee of bill of lading Extent of right.]—The above sect. gives an assignee of a bill of lading a right to sue in the Admty. Ct. for damage done to his goods, or other breach of contract, before he is entitled to delivery of the goods; at least, if he is entitled to sue for non-delivery. If he is no party to the charterparty he cannot sue for breaches of it other than breaches of such portions as by construction are included in the bill of lading.

Where a charterparty stipulated for lump freight, "the master guaranteeing the ship to carry 3,000 tons on a draft of 26 ft. water, or to forfeit freight in proportion to the deficiency" & the ship could not, & in fact did not, carry a cargo of 3,000 tons:—Held: an assignee of a bill of lading for such cargo, making freight "payable as per charterparty" had no cause of action against the ship in respect of the master fraudulently guaranteeing its capacity.—THE NORWAY (1864), Brown. & Lush. 226; 10 L. 535. —————.]—In a suit for damage to cargo under the above sect. it appeared that the cargo was stowed while the charterer was on board & without any objection being raised on his part as to the mode of stowage. Part of the cargo consisted of oil shipped under a bill of lading which was assigned to merchants, purchasers of the oil, who had no notice of the charter. On the voyage leakage of the oil took place. The assignees sued the shipowners on the bill of lading for the loss of the oil:—Held: while the assignees of the bill of lading were entitled to recover by reason of the breach of contract contained in the bill of lading, the rights & liabilities as between the shipper & the master dehors of the bill of lading contract in respect of other goods or of the charterparty were unaffected by the transfer to the assignees of the bill of lading, the latter not incorporating the charterparty, & the shippers might also have sued the shipowner for the loss of the oil.—THE HELENE (1865), Brown. & Lush. 415; 5 New Rep. 448; reversd. on other points, Brown. & Lush. 429, P. 536. —————.]—Pltfs. were indorsees of the bill of lading of a cargo which, according to the charterparty which contained a reference to the bill of lading, was to be unloaded at S. "at the usual place of discharge, & according to the custom of the port." Pltfs. had agreed to sell the cargo to B. & Co., but the purchase-money had not been paid, nor had the bill of lading been indorsed to B. & Co. On arrival of the vessel at S., the master put into the South dock, when pltfs. ordered him to remove her to the G. dock, which the master refused to do until he had been paid the expenses incurred by entering the South dock. Both docks were usual places of delivery for similar cargoes. In a suit for breach of contract for non-delivery of the cargo:—Held: (1) pltfs. were entitled to sue in the Admty. Ct. under the above sect., when construed with Bills of Lading Act, 1855 (c. 111); (2) the master was guilty of breach of duty.—THE FELIX (1868), L. R. 2 A. & E. 273; 37 L. J. Adm. 48; 18 L. The ship was under a charter, but of this the shippers had no knowledge & had made a contract with the master, who put up the ship as a general ship. The oil-cake having suffered damage on the voyage, a suit was brought under the above sect. by pltfs. against shipowners for the amount of deterioration in its value:—Held: (1) the

547. ————.]—Pltfs., under a bill of lading, giving liberty to call at intermediate ports, & providing that any disputes as to its interpretation were "to be decided in Hamburg according to German law," shipped at Hamburg, on board a German vessel, owned by defts., ten cases of gold coin, for delivery to the order of pltfs., at Monte Video or Buenos Aires. The vessel called at Southampton on the way out; on her arrival at Monte Video only nine of the cases were delivered. On the return voyage to Hamburg the vessel again put into Southampton, where she was arrested on behalf of pltfs., in an action for breach of contract or duty in respect of the missing case. On objection by defts. to the jurisdiction of the English ct. —Held: under the words "goods carried into any port in England" in the above sect. the ct. had jurisdiction to arrest the vessel & entertain the action.—THE CAP BLANCO [1913] P. 130; 83 L. The vessel was a foreign vessel & the master was a foreign subject:—Held: (1) the facts disclosed a breach of duty or breach of contract within the above sect., in respect of which pltfs. were entitled to institute a cause in rem; (2) it was competent to plts. to institute such cause,

B. Where Jurisdiction does not exist.

561. No remedy at common law.]—With respect to damage to goods, the Admty. Ct. possesses no right of action not previously existing at common law. A bare assignee, to whom the property in the goods has not passed & who cannot sue at common law under Bills of Lading Act, 1855 (c. 111), is not entitled to sue in the Admty. Ct., notwithstanding the words "any assignee of a bill of lading" in Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 6.—THE ST. CLOUD, Nos. 529, 549, ante; No. 569, post.

562. Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 6.—After transhipment.]—The above sect. gives the ct. jurisdiction only where the breach of contract complained of has been committed by the ship which actually brings the goods into a port in England & Wales. Where a part of goods shipped on board the A. was lost, & the remainder was transhipped & brought into an English port on board the B. :—Held : no jurisdiction was given to it to arrest the B., to satisfy the owner of the goods lost.—THE IRONSIDES, Nos. 37, 527, 528, ante.

563. — Breach of duty abroad.]—A foreign vessel was chartered to carry coals on charterers' account to a foreign port, & bring home to England a return cargo of timber; & the charterers sued the ship under the above sect., claiming damages for (1) non-delivery of certain coals on the outward voyage, & (2) improper delivery of the timber on the return voyage.—Held : they were not entitled to sue in respect of non-delivery of the coals abroad, as the Act did not give the ct. such jurisdiction.—THE KASAN (1863), Brown. & Lush. 1; 1 New Rep. 246; 32 L. J. P. M. & A. 97; 9 Jur. N. S. 235. S. C. No. 542, ante.

564. — No breach of duty.—Reasonable delay.]—An apprehension of capture by enemies' cruisers in time of war, founded on circumstances calculated to affect the mind of a master of ordinary courage, judgment & experience, will justify him in delaying his ship in port during continuance of the risk of capture, & the ship is not responsible in a suit in rem in the Admty. Ct. for damage to the cargo caused by such reasonable delay, if the voyage is ultimately completed & the cargo delivered. Semble : if the voyage were abandoned, & the cargo not delivered according to contract, the shipowners would be bound to show that they had been actually prevented from performing the voyage.—THE SAN ROMAN (1873), L. For full anns., see SHIPPING & NAVIGATION—

565. — — No loss.]—The omission by the master to state in his protest all the circumstances in detail in which the damage took place does not deprive the owner of the goods of his right of action against underwriters on account of general average, & is not a breach of duty or breach of contract within the above sect.—THE SANTA ANNA (1863), 32 L. SUB-SECT. 2.—EXERCISE OF JURISDICTION.

566. Cause of damage to be pleaded.]—In a suit for damage to cargo under Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 6, the petition ought in general to state, so far as is practicable, the cause to which pltf. attributes the loss or damage.—THE HELENE, No. 535, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 535, ante.

567. Interpleader by master Not available.]—Where a suit has been instituted in the Admty. Ct. by the arrest of a ship, on behalf of a person claiming to be the owner of goods, on the ground of breach of duty on the part of the master in not delivering the goods to him, & a like proceeding has been instituted in same ct. by another claimant in respect of same goods. Semble : a bill of interpleader by the master of the ship will not lie, on the grounds : (1) the proceedings are not against him but against the ship; (2) the Admty. Ct. has jurisdiction to decide the whole question.—SABLICICH v. RUSSELL (1866), L. R. 2 Eq. 441; 14 W. R. 913.

568. Amount recoverable—Both ships to blame.]—The Admty. Ct. rule that in cases of collision the damages are to be equally divided where both ships are to blame does not apply to actions for breach of contract of carriage brought by owners of cargo against the carrying ship to recover damages for loss of, or injury to, their goods, & pltf. in such actions are entitled to recover their full damages from the owners of the carrying ship.—THE BUSHIRE (1885), 52 L. T. 740; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 416.

Annotation :—Refd. The Englishman & The Australia, [1894] P. 239.

569. — Reference to registrar.]—In cases brought under Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 6, the ct. will refer the damages for assessment to the registrar & merchants.—THE ST. CLOUD, Nos. 529, 549, 561, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 529, ante.

570. — — Where counterclaim.]—Where to a claim for damage to cargo a counterclaim of general average is set up, it is not necessary that such general average should have been adjusted; but if the evidence supports the fact of a general average loss having been sustained, that amount together with the amount of loss sustained through damage to the cargo will be referred to the registrar & merchants to report.—THE OQUENDO (1878), 35 L. SECT. 10.—LIMITATION OF LIABILITY.

SUB-SECT. 1.—NATURE AND EXTENT OF JURISDICTION.

571. Action in rem instituted—Bail given—Arrest not necessary.]—Where proceedings in rem have been instituted in the Admty. Ct. against a vessel, & bail has been given for the vessel, the ct. has jurisdiction to entertain a suit instituted by the owners of the vessel for limitation of liability, although the vessel may not actually have been under arrest of the ct.—THE NORTHUMBRIA (1869), L. PART II, SECT. 9, SUB-SECT. 1.—B.

562 i. Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 6—Owner within jurisdiction.]—The Admty. Ct. has no jurisdiction over claims by the owner or consignee of goods for damages done thereto by negligence or breach of duty by owner, master, or crew of the ship, if it is shown that at the institution of the cause any such owner, or part-owner, is within the Province.—*RITHEY v. b. Foreign ship—Charterparty—Stoppage of delivery of cargo.]—A Danish ship was chartered to proceed to a safe port in the sea of Azof, & there load a cargo of wheat for a safe port in the United Kingdom. Bills of lading were signed by the captain, & the ship arrived at T., & commenced to deliver the cargo; but, disputes arising between the captain & pltf., delivery was stopped & proceedings were instituted by pltf. against the ship to recover damages for non-delivery of the cargo :—Held : in the contract of affreightment there was nothing from which a right of maritime lien could flow so as to enable proceedings to be taken against the ship in specie before the Admty. Ct. The Bold, Burleigh (1851), 7 Moo. P. C. C. 267, cited.—ANON. (1859), 1 L. T. 200.—IR.

Sect. 11: Sub-sect. 1.]

572. Ship sunk—Action maintainable.]—The N. & the M. collided & the N. was sunk. Cross causes of damage were instituted, but had not been heard, nor the liability for the collision determined, but the owners of the N. paid into ct. the amount of their liability as limited by Act:—Held: (1) the ct. had jurisdiction in a suit for limitation of liability, though the N. had been sunk, & could not be arrested, notwithstanding Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10); (2) the ct. could grant an injunction to restrain actions at common law in respect of same collision; (3) actions at common law for loss of goods damaged by collision might be restrained, even though the goods were to be carried partly by sea & partly by land.—THE NORMANDY (1870), L. R. 3 A. & E. 152; 39 L. J. Adm. 48; 23 L. T. 631; 18 W. R. 903; 3 Mar. L. C. 519.

573. — Action not maintainable.]—Pltf., a passenger by the steamer N., which after negligently colliding with another ship, had been totally lost at sea, brought an action in the Exch. Ct. against defts., owners of the N., for personal injuries & loss of baggage occasioned to him thereby. Cross causes of damage were also instituted by the owners of both vessels in the Admty. Ct. & £5,000 paid in by defts. in lieu of bail. The latter began a suit under Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 13, for limitation of their liability to pltf. & similar claimants. The Admty. judge held that he had jurisdiction, entertained the suit, & ordered that the sum of £6,376, the amount of possible liability calculated at £15 per ton of the N., should be paid into ct. Defts., having paid in that sum, & admitted their liability, prayed for an injunction restraining the action of pltf., who thereupon declared in prohibition:—Held: as the Admty. Ct., although in some respects a Superior Ct., is one of limited jurisdiction, & as it had not jurisdiction, because neither the ship nor "the proceeds thereof" were "under arrest," within the above sect., prohibition would lie, & might issue.—JAMES v. L. & S. W. Ry. Co., Nos. 23, 94, ante.

574. Launch—Not registered.]—Two vessels came into collision. One of them, though intended to be fitted as a steamship, was at the time of collision without her engines & boilers & in the incomplete state of a launch, & came into collision with the other vessel on leaving the ways through the negligence of the person employed by her owner to launch her. In an action of damage brought against the launch the ct. ruled that the launch was solely to blame for the collision. The owner of the launch, a natural-born British subject, thereupon instituted an action of limitation of liability for the purpose of limiting his liability under M. S. Acts. At the hearing of this last-mentioned action it was admitted that the launch exceeded the burden of 15 tons, & was not registered as a British ship at the time the collision happened:—Held: (1) the damage arising out of the collision was damage caused by "improper navigation" within M. S. Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 54; (2) as at the time of the collision the launch was not a registered British ship, the suit must be dismissed.—THE ANDALUSIAN (1878), 3 P. D. 182; 47 L. J. 575. Tug.]—Under M. S. Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 3 (1), a small tug—solely employed in the manner mentioned in the sect.—of the "gross tonnage," if measured in accordance with the Act, of 35.99 tons, is exempted from registry, & therefore, as the vessel is properly exempted from registry, her owners are entitled, under s. 503, to limit their liability to £8 for each ton of her gross tonnage ascertained by measuring her in accordance with the Act.—THE BRUNEL, [1900] P. 24, C. A.

576. Chartered ship—Charterer by demise.]—The charterers by demise of a vessel found to blame for a collision are entitled to the statutory limitation of liability conferred by M. S. 583. No life salvage at common law—How far cognisable.]—For the mere preservation of life the ct. has no power of remunerating; it must be left to the bounty of the individuals; but if it can be connected with preservation of property, whether by accident or not, then the ct. can take notice of it, & the ct. is always willing to join that to the animus displayed in the first instance.—THE AID (1822), 1 Hag. 586. Extent of jurisdiction—Foreign ship—On high seas.]—M. S. Act, 1854, does not give the ct. jurisdiction over salvage of life only performed on the high seas at a distance of more than three miles from the shore of the United Kingdom, at least if the ship from which the lives are saved is a foreign ship. It is immaterial to this question that before action the ship has been brought by other salvors into a British port.—THE JOHANNES, No. 585, ante.

SUB-SECT. 2.—SALVAGE OF PROPERTY.

Property subject or not subject to salvage, see pp. 106, 107, ante.

A. Nature and Extent of Jurisdiction.

(a) Extent of Jurisdiction.

i. Where Jurisdiction exists.

593. Salvage—Extent of jurisdiction.—All questions relating to salvage, both as regards the amount due in respect of services rendered & the apportionment of such amount among the different classes of salvors, are within the jurisdiction of the Admty. Ct., subject to M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104).—ATKINSON v. WOODHALL (WOODALL) (1862), 1 H. & C. 170; 31 L. J. M. C. 174; 36 L. T. 361; 26 J. P. 759; 8 Jur. N. S. 720; 10 W. R. 671; 1 Mar. L. C. 224; 158 E. R.

594. ————.—An ordinary action for salvage is within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Admty. Div.—HUMPHREYS v. EDWARDS (1875), 1 Char. Pr. Cas. 81; 45 L. J. Ch. 112.

595. ————.—Agreement though made on land—Incidental matters.—A ship sunk on Nore Sand was raised & an action brought against her in a cause of salvage, civil & maritime. The owners appeared under protest, alleging that the ct. had no jurisdiction, the services having been rendered under an agreement made upon land. The protest was overruled on the grounds: (1) the services were salvage services, & the ct. had jurisdiction over the subject-matter; (2) having original jurisdiction over the subject-matter, the ct. had jurisdiction over the incidents; (3) the ct. had jurisdiction over agreements made upon land for performance of salvage services.—THE CATHERINE (1848), 6 Notes of Cases, Supp. xliii.; 12 Jur. 682.

596. Statutory jurisdiction.—A British steamship belonging to plffs., with cargo from & to a continental port, was in the English Channel, in distress, for want of fuel, twenty miles off the coast. A British steam tug towed her into Plymouth, & at the request of the master of the tug, deft., receiver of wreck at that port, detained plffs.' vessel two days pending the production of satisfactory bail to answer a claim for salvage. In an action for illegal arrest:—Held: deft. was entitled to judgment, as the words in M. S. Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 552, "salvage due under this Act" were not confined to salvage expressly made payable under that Act, but included salvage which might be awarded by the cts. mentioned in the Act, whose jurisdiction was conferred or recognised by it. Semble: the words in s. 546 "near the coasts of the United Kingdom" were restricted to the territorial limits.—THE FULHAM, [1899] P. 251; 68 L. J. P. 75; 81 L. T. 19; 47 W. R. 598; 15 T. L. R. 404; 43 Sol. Jo. 568; 8 Asp. M. L. C. 559, C. A. S. C. No. 708, post.

597. ————.—Statutory limitation removed.—Jurisdiction in salvage cases where the value of the property saved is under £1,000, taken away from the Admty Ct. by M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 460, & M. S. Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 49, is restored to that ct. by Cty. Cts. Admty. Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (c. 71).—THE EMPRESS (1872), L. R. 3 A. & E. 502; 41 L. J. Adm. 32; 25 L. T. 885; 20 W. R. 553; 1 Asp. M. L. C. 183.

598. Incidental jurisdiction—Though jurisdiction on principal matter taken away by statute.—Though, by reason of the value of property saved being under £1,000, the Admty. Ct. may not have jurisdiction to determine & award the amount of salvage due, yet it has jurisdiction to condemn, in costs & damages, salvors wrongfully arresting property & for other collateral purposes.—THE KATE (1864), Brown. & Lush. 218; 3 New Rep. 583; 33 L. J. P. M. & A. 122; 9 L. T. 782; 10 Jur. N. S. 444; 1 Mar. L. C. 421. S. C. No. 748, post.

ii. Where Jurisdiction does not exist.

599. Property not saved.—The Admty. Ct. has no power to award salvage for services wholly unsuccessful in saving any property whatever.—THE E. U. (1853), 1 Ecc. & Ad. 63.

600. Services not salvage services—Transshipment.—The Admty. Ct. has not jurisdiction over a mere question of transshipment; but conveying part of a cargo, consisting of tea, from a ship stranded near M. to L., it being needful to discharge the cargo & remove it to a place of safety, is not to be considered merely as a transshipment to fulfil the owner's duty of forwarding the goods to earn freight; but is a salvage service by persons rendering such service.—THE WESTMINSTER (1841), 1 Wm. Rob. 229; 6 L. T. 868.

PART II. SECT. 11, SUB-SECT. 2.— A (a) i.

593 i. Salvage—Extent of jurisdiction.—Where a claim is simply for salvage services, & no question of apportionment arises, an action at law can be maintained, although where apportionment of the amount among several claimants is asked for, it is probably a matter exclusively within the jurisdiction of the Admty. Ct.—CORPS v. READ (1876), 3 Pug. 527.—CAN.

593 ii. ————.—Where the vessel saved was brought into port in Newfoundland & then sold; but a portion of her materials was brought to Halifax,

& then proceeded against by two of the salvors who had not been paid in Newfoundland:—Held: the ct. had jurisdiction, salvage constituting a lien upon the goods saved.—THE FLORA (1869), Y. A. D. 48.—CAN.

PART II. SECT. 11, SUB-SECT. 2.— A (a) ii.

600 i. Services not salvage services—Blasting rock.—A ship having run aground, the captain employed plff. to blast away rock which held her. The operation was carried out successfully, & plff. claimed salvage:—Held: (1) al- though the removal of the rock might be regarded as a sine quâ non for the safety of the ship, it was not salvage, as, after the operation, the ship had to be towed off & navigated to a place of safety; (2) the only justification for bringing the action in the Admty. Ct. was that a question of salvage arose; (3) plff. having failed to prove salvage, the action might be dismissed with costs, but, the ct. having jurisdiction to award reasonable remuneration, it would do so, leaving each party to their own costs. The Wall (1843), 2 Wm. Rob. 70; The Accourde (1844), 2 Wm. Rob. 255; The Chetah (1868), L. R. 2 P. C. 205, refd.—THE COSTA RICA (1891), 3 Ex. C. R. 23.—CAN.

602. — Towage.—In a salvage suit, in which there has been no tender made by defts., an Admty. Ct. cannot, on finding that no salvage service has been performed by plffs. & that their service was mere towage, make a decree for the amount of towage due to plffs.—THE STRATHNAVER, No. 749, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 749, post.

603. — Services beyond what contemplated.—Where the owners of a tug contracted to tow a number of barges at sea for an agreed sum, it being part of the contract that, if the barges or any of them broke adrift during towage, the tug-owners were nevertheless to be entitled to the sum, & in consequence of severity of weather the voyage was unduly protracted, the barges broke adrift on several occasions, & were picked up again, & men in charge of the barges were saved from possible loss of life, the ct. awarded salvage on the ground that the services were beyond what was contemplated by the parties when entering into the towage contract.—FIVE STEEL BARGES, Nos. 147, 148, ante; Nos. 606, 613, post.

604. Bond taken by receiver of Admiralty drolts.—A receiver of Admty. drolts, on notice from the agent of salvors, detained a ship, which he afterwards released under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 99, s. 19 (repealed by M. S. Repeal Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 4), taking as security a bond, from two persons, as sureties for the master & owners of the ship & cargo, & submitting themselves to the jurisdiction of the Admty. Ct. to answer such salvage as should be decreed by that ct.; & unless they should so do, consenting that execution should issue against them, their heirs, exors., & administrators, goods & chattels, whosoever they should be found:—Held: the Admty. Ct. had not jurisdiction to enforce the bond.—THE BAGNALL (1848), 3 Wm. Rob. 112; 6 Notes of Cases, 542; 12 Jur. 1008.

605. Distribution of salvage—Awarded by inferior court.—Where an award has been made by magistrates in a cause of salvage, the parties are not at liberty to resort to the Admty. Ct. for a distribution, unless an application has been made first to the magistrates for an order of distribution, as the Admty. Ct. has no original jurisdiction as to distribution of salvage awarded by magistrates. THE HOVE (1841), 1 Wm. Rob. 265; 1 Notes of Cases, 110.

606. Persons interested.—The liability to pay salvage is not confined to actual legal owners of property saved, but extends to those who have an interest in that property, which interest has been saved by placing the property itself in a position of security.—FIVE STEEL BARGES, Nos. 147, 148, 603, ante; No. 613, post.

608. Action in rem—Or in personam.—On objection being taken that the only mode of proceeding for salvage was by a warrant of arrest of the ship, & that there was no precedent in the books of a monition against the owner personally:—Semble: the objection failed.—THE HOPE (1801), 3 Ch. Rob. 215.

609. — — — — ——In case of a salvage of a ship afterwards given up to the master for convenience of proceeding on the voyage, proceedings had been instituted by a monition calling on the owners to show cause why salvage should not be decreed. The owners appeared under protest, & in support of the protest took objection that a suit of salvage in a case civil & maritime should commence by arrest of the ship, as being a proceeding in rem; that in the arts., Feb. 18, 1633, it was particularly expressed "that if suit shall be in Admty. Ct. for building, amending, saving, or necessary victualling the ship against the ship, & not against any party by name, but such, as for his interest, makes himself a party, no prohibition shall be granted, though this be done within the realm," that for saving the ship the suit should originate against the ship, & not against the owner. The protest was overruled.—THE TRAILWAYNE (1801), 3 Ch. Rob. 216 n. S. C. on further proceedings (1802), 4 Ch. Rob. 223.

610. — — — — ——Proceedings in rem are the real foundation of the jurisdiction, though there may be some cases of special circumstances where salvors have been allowed to proceed by monition; but generally the ship & freight are alone liable. Where they can be proceeded against, the ct. is not disposed to regard salvors as having a right to follow cargo, as prize goods may be followed to abide final adjudication.—THE RAPID (1838), 3 Hag. Adm. 419.

612. Action in personam—Sale of ship.—Where a vessel was assisted on the coast of Africa in being got off the ground & repaired, & a bill was drawn on the owners for salvage, the ship meanwhile having been sold:—Held: the Admty. Ct. had no jurisdiction.—THE CHIEFTAIN (1846), 2 Wm. Rob. 450; 4 Notes of Cases, 459; 8 L. T. 440.

616. ——[Things floating, though between high-water & low-water marks, not having touched the ground cannot be wreccum maris; if fixed to land between high-water & low-water marks, though with some water round them, they are wreccum maris. If after having once touched land between high-water & low-water marks, they are again afloat, they are not necessarily wreccum maris, but their legal character will depend upon their state at the time they were seized & secured into possession; whether, for instance, the person who seized them as salvor was in a boat, or wading, or swimming. "Wreccum maris" is not such, in legal acceptation, till it comes ashore, until it is within land jurisdiction; whilst at sea, it belongs to the King in his office of Admty., as derelict, flotsam, jetsam, or ligam.—*R. v. Annotation:—Apprvd. The Kathleen (1874), L. R. 4 A. & E. 269.

618. — Wages.]—Two actions of wages had been entered against a ship on behalf of the late carpenter & a seaman, who had been left by the master at Hamburg & sent home by the British consul. Before the warrants of arrest could be served the ship had sailed. She was afterwards found a derelict at sea, & upon being towed into Selsea the Admty. proctor there arrested her, & she was condemned as a droit of Admty. 1 Will. 4. c. 25, had then been passed, enacting that the produce of the hereditary casual revenues arising from any droits of Admty. should be made part of the consolidated fund, & by s. 12 that nothing therein contained should affect certain rights or powers, which had been or might be exercised by authority of the Crown or other lawful warrant, as therein specified. The claims were for £237s. 4d. The proceeds were £72:—Held: the amount might be paid out of the proceeds.—THE SPECULATOR (1832), 3 Hag. Adm. 330.

619. Goods on board derelict vessel—Salvage payable—Rights of owner.]—The L. fell in with a merchant vessel water-logged & shattered. She was not an English vessel, & had been drifting about the sea several months; on board a trunk containing various gold coins to the value of between £300 & £400, some gold watches, rings, etc. & some cordage & claret were found. The cordage was used up on board the L. & the claret drunk by the master & crew; & J., the master, divided the gold coin with his crew in tolerably fair proportions. On an application for a monition against J. to show cause why the property found on board the derelict, or the value thereof, should not be brought into the registry of the ct., to be proceeded against as droits of Admty.:—Semble: (1) whatever property is found derelict must be restored, upon payment of a salvage, to the owner, if he appear in due time; (2) if not, it must, subject to the same demand, be condemned as a droit of Admty. J. having brought in the property, accompanied by an affidavit as to his perfect ignorance of the law, the ct. condemned the property & directed a moiety of the coin & other articles to be delivered out for a salvage remuneration.—R. v. PROPERTY DERELICT (1825), 1 Hag. Adm. 383.

621. Priorities—Previous forfeiture.]—A judicial sale of a vessel found at sea & brought into port as derelict, under order of the Instance Ct. of the Admty., on the part of the salvors & claimant (without fraud), is valid against the Crown's right of seizure for previous forfeiture incurred by the ship having been guilty of a forfeitable offence against the revenue laws, although the Crown was not a party to proceedings in the Admty. Ct., other than by the King's Procurator-General claiming the vessel as an Admty. droit, & although no decision of droit, or no droit, was awarded, & the sale took place pendente lite under an interlocutory

PART II. SECT. 12, SUB-SECT. 1.—A.

6151. Flotsam, jetsam & ligam—Effect of touching ground.]—A log of wood floating in the sea near the shore was drawn on a rock by a person wading into the water; another log having been cast upon the beach by the next tide swept out to sea, & then taken while floating. This log had been marked by a knife, with the object of claiming property in it for the grantee of wreck, before it was swept back to sea:—Held: both were droits of Admty., & did not belong to the grantee by patent of wreck on the coast.—STACKPOOLE v. R. (1875), 1 R. 9 Eq. 619.—IR.

a. Enforcement of jurisdiction—Possession by receiver-general of droits.]—The Admty. Ct., although possessing to the fullest extent its ancient jurisdiction in cases of wreck & droits of Admty. since the passing of Wreck & Salvage Act, 1846 (c. 99), is not bound to enforce its jurisdiction upon the application of the Queen's proctor when the wreck & droits of Admty. have been properly taken possession of by the receiver-general of droits, appointed by that Act, or his deputy lawfully authorised.—*HAMILTON v. B. Where no Jurisdiction exists.

622. Wreckum maris—Wreck cast on land.—The Admty. Ct. has no jurisdiction over any wreck of the sea, for that must be cast upon land before it becomes wreck. To constitute wreck of the sea, goods must have touched the ground, though they need not have been left dry.—R. v. FORTY-NINE CASKS OF BRANDY, Nos. 1, 615, ante.

625. ———.—A ship cannot be considered wreckum maris, nor the claim of the lord to wreck sustained, unless at time of taking possession she is either on the actual shore itself, or left high & dry on land. Priority of seizure is a fact of no importance in determining whether property be wreck of the sea, or a droit of Admty.

Where a vessel stranded within low-water mark was taken possession of by the bailiff & the lord of the manor, not at low-water, but when the tide was in to the extent of some feet, on a claim being made to proceeds of sale :—Held : (1) the vessel was not wreckum maris, but a droit of Admty.; (2) the lord's claim must be dismissed.—THE PAULINE (1845), 2 Wm. Rob. 358; 3 Notes of Cases, 616; 6 L. T. 558; 9 Jur. 286. S. C. No. 107, ante.

626. Property in possession of receiver of droits.—Where a vessel had become derelict, but was afterwards recovered by the owners, & taken possession of, under Wreck & Salvage Act, 1846 (c. 99), by the receiver of droits, who refused to relinquish possession until his charges were paid, the ct. declared it had no power to interfere, having no jurisdiction over the receiver.—THE TRITONIA (1847), 2 Wm. 627. S. P. THE DERELICT IRON (1851), 15 Jur. 300.

628. Goods derelict at sea—If enemy property—Prize.—During the Russian war one of H.M. ships of war, on her passage to O., fell in with & took possession of a raft of timber, having the Russian imperial mark painted on the several spars composing same :—Held : such timber must be condemned as a droit of the Crown, & not a droit of Admty.—THE RAFT OF RUSSIAN TIMBER (1859), 5 Jur. N. S. 1109.

629. Priorities—Previous forfeiture.—A ship was seized by the admiral's officers as a perquisite & afterwards seized by a Custom-house officer, as forfeited under French Prohibition Act; he exhibited an information, & moved for a prohibition, which was granted. WARD, C.B., cited a case in the time of Lord Hale, where goods were put on board, duty not being paid, & carried to sea & became flotsam; a suit was commenced in the Admty., who have jurisdiction of flotsam; & upon an information in the Exch. for forfeiture, in regard of the fact that they were shipped before duty paid, a prohibition was granted; for the Crown had a title by the forfeiture, & the goods becoming flotsam after did not purge the forfeiture.—SCORE v. LORD ADMIRAL (1709), Park. 273; 145 E. R. 777.

SUB-SECT. 2.—GOODS OF PIRATES.

630. Forfeiture on conviction—Restoration to owner.—By his patent the admiral has bona piratarum :—Held : (1) these meant the pirate's proper goods, & not goods which the pirate had stolen from others; (2) such goods must be restored to their owners, if claimed, otherwise they were forfeited to the King. The pirate ought to be attainted of piracy before forfeiture of his own goods to the admiral.—PRINSTON v. ADMIRALTY COURT (1615), 3 Bulst. 147; 81 E. R. 126.

Money taken on board a piratical vessel, not proved to belong to pirates, & not claimed, nor shown by proof or reasonable presumption to be property belonging to others :—Held : bona piratarum & droits of Admty.—THE PANDA (1842), 1 Wm. Rob. 423; 1 Notes of Cases, 603.

632. Goods recaptured — Unclaimed — Bona vacantia.—Goods recaptured from pirates, if unclaimed, belong to the King in his office of Admty. as bona vacantia.—THE MARIANNA (1835), 3 Hag. Adm. 206.

638. ———.]—In the case of a prohibition, prayed to the Admty. Ct. :—Held : if a pirate takes goods upon the sea, & sells them, the property of them is changed no more than if a thief upon land steals them, & sells them.—GREENWAY & BAKER'S CASE (1612), Godb. 193 ; 78 E. R. 117.

639. ———.]—Prohibition does not lie where the owner of goods taken by pirates seeks to recover them civilly in the Admty. Ct. from a purchaser.—R. v. MARSH, No. 121, ante.

640. ——— None, if ship bona fide purchased.]—Though goods piratically taken cannot be transferred to a third party as against their legitimate owner, yet that rule does not apply to a ship belonging formerly to a pirate, as the taint of piracy does not, in the absence of conviction or condemnation, continue, like a maritime lien, to travel with the ship through her transfer to various owners.

A ship was arrested by the Crown in Tortola, on a charge of piracy. The affidavit which led to the warrant of arrest alleged that the ship was bought at S. in Hayti, from a British subject by the revolutionary Govt. of Hayti, & that the ship, having been equipped as a ship of war, was afterwards employed in acts of hostility. The ship had been sold by public auction, six months before seizure, to a bona fide purchaser, a British subject. The Vice-Admty. Ct. of Tortola sustained a protest to the jurisdiction of the ct. & decreed restitution of the ship but without costs or damages. On appeal :—Held : there was no authority to be derived from principle or precedent for a ship, sold by public auction to a bona fide innocent purchaser before any proceedings had been taken on the part of the Crown against the ship, being afterwards arrested & condemned on account of having been engaged previously in piratical acts.—THE TELEGRAFO OR RESTAURACION (1871), L. SECT. 13—FORFEITURE, ETC.

642. Illegal colours.]—A warrant of arrest will be granted against the master of a private ship of war for wearing false colours, as a warrant of course.—THE MINERVA (1800), 3 Ch. Rob. 34.

643. ———.]—A master of a British merchant vessel was condemned in the penalty of £50, & in costs, for wearing illegal colours, a red pennant at the main peak of his merchant steam vessel, near the Douro, on the coast of Portugal.—R. v. BENSON (1833), 3 Hag. Adm. 96.

644. ———.]—A British merchant ship was boarded, having an ensign with the St. George's Cross, etc., colours other than those legally worn by merchantmen. A warrant of arrest was directed to issue against the master, upon affidavit of the facts in lieu of declarations in support of them.—R. v. EWEN (1856), 2 Jur. N. S. 454.

645. Contempt—Failing to salute H.M. ship.]—A warrant of arrest will issue against the master of a merchant schooner for contempt in passing one of H.M.'s ships without striking or lowering her royal, being the uppermost sail she was then carrying.—THE NATIVE (1829), cited 3 Hag. Adm. 97 n.

646. Concealment of British character—Nominal transfer to foreign flag.]—Where a British subject, owner of a British ship, by a representation to the collector of customs at the port of registry that his ship has been sold to foreigners procures the closing of the registry, & sails her under a foreign flag, whilst he continues to own her & to receive the profits of working her, doing such acts with the intent to conceal her British character from the officers of customs, & prevent her seizure as unseaworthy, he commits an offence against M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 103, by reason of which his ship is liable to, & will be condemned to, forfeiture to Her Majesty.—THE SCEPTRE (1876), 35 L. T. 429 ; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 269.

647. ——— Subsequent bona fide purchase immaterial.]—The forfeiture incurred under M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 103, accrues at the time of the illegal & fraudulent act, & a subsequent seizure relates back to the date of the act constituting the cause of forfeiture, & this is so even as against a bona fide purchaser without notice of such act.

The A., with the consent of the British owners, sailed under the Belgian flag in 1874. In 1876 deft. bought her bona fide, & for valuable consideration. The ship was claimed as forfeited to the Crown under the above Act. Deft. pleaded his bona fide purchase for valuable consideration. Pltf. demurred :—Held : such sale was of no effect as against the prior forfeiture which accrued at the time of the act of sailing under foreign colours. The original British owners, who were added as defts. by order of the ct., & who had not appeared, were condemned in costs.—THE ANNANDALE (1877), 2 P. D. 218 ; 47 L. J. P. 3 ; 37 L. T. 139 ; 26 W. 648. Breach of Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870 (c. 90), s. 8.]—A French ship of war captured in the English Channel a Prussian ship as prize of war. A prize crew under a French naval officer was put on board. The prize ship being driven by stress of weather into the Downs, anchored within British waters, & after lying there two days the French consul at Dover engaged an English steam-tug then lying in the Downs to tow the captured ship from British waters to a port of the captors, & under such agreement the tug towed the prize to Dunkirk Roads :—Held : (1) the engagement by the owners of the tug for the express purpose of towing the detached prize crew, its prisoners & prize vessel, speedily & safely into French waters, where the prisoners & prize would be taken charge of by the French authorities, & the prize crew set free, was dispatching a ship within the above sect., for the purpose of taking part in the naval service of a belligerent ; (2) the tug must be condemned as a forfeiture to the Crown. Qu. : whether the Admty. Ct. has power under the above Act to condemn the Crown in costs.—THE GAUNTLET (1872), 8 Moo. P. C. N. S. 428 ; L. R. 4 P. C. 184 ; 26 L. T. 45 ; 20 W. R. 497 ; 1 Asp. M. L. C. 211 ; 17 E. 650. Application of equity.]—Although in the decision of cases properly within the jurisdiction of the Admty. Ct. equitable considerations ought to have weight, yet that ct. has not jurisdiction to do all that an Equity Ct. might do, in suits instituted by persons, suing either for themselves or on behalf of themselves & others, for administration of assets or distribution of a common fund.

Where the owners of a vessel & part of the cargo, lost in a collision, brought an action in the Admty. Ct. against the damaging vessel, & obtained a decree for condemnation of the ship, referring the amount of damages to the registrar & merchants who were to report them; & on the same day the decree was pronounced the owners of the remaining portion of the cargo brought an action against the damaging vessel, & applied to the ct. to be let in to participate rateably in the proceeds of the condemned ship remaining in the registry:—Held: (1) the Admty. Ct., in such circumstances, had no jurisdiction to decree a rateable distribution, & thereby take away the priority of the prior petens; (2) the decree for damage & reference to the registrar & merchants was a definitive sentence.—THE SARACEN (1847), 6 Moo. 651. Beaconage.]—An action to recover beaconage should be brought in the Admty. Ct. although the profits of the beacon belong to the admiral.—CROSSE v. DIGGS (1863), 1 Sid. 158; 82 E. R. 1030.

Float Whitton (No. 2), [1895]

652. Breach of charterparty—Before shipment.]—The Admty. Ct. has not jurisdiction over breach of a stipulation in a charterparty with regard to acts to be done before the goods are shipped.

A ship was chartered to proceed to a port abroad & there take in cargo. The charterers instituted a suit against the ship, & in their petition alleged, inter alia, that the master of the ship improperly refused to proceed with the ship to the agreed port of loading & proceeded with her to another port:—Held: (1) such conduct on the part of the master did not constitute a breach of duty or breach of contract within Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 6; (2) the ct. had no jurisdiction to entertain any claim for damages arising therefrom.—THE DANNEBROG (1874), L. R. 4 A. & E. 386; 44 L. J. Adm. 21; 31 L. T. 759; 23 W. R. 419; 2 Asp. M. L. C. 452.

653. Claim for damages—In personam.]—The Admty. Div. has jurisdiction to entertain a claim in personam for damages for breach of a charterparty.—THE CHEAPSIDE, No. 967, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 967, post.

654. Exception to jurisdiction.]—If an exception is taken to the jurisdiction of the ct. it can only be sustained by the allegations contained in it. In order to decide the question raised by the exception, the ct. must necessarily examine the grounds laid before it by the exception itself, & rule whether they are well founded in law; if the exception does not set forth good & valid grounds on the face of it, it will be overruled.—THE EVANGELINE, No. 851, post.

Appearance under protest, see pp. 166, 167, post.

655. General average.]—The Admty. Ct. has not, as an ordinary rule, jurisdiction in cases of general average, because it has not the power to bring all parties interested before the ct.—LA CONSTANCIA (1846), 2 Wm. Rob. 487; 4 Notes of Cases, 677; 10 Jur. 845.

657. — How far cognisable in Admiralty.]—An Admty. Ct. will not interfere to enforce a lien for general average which does not depend on possession or to adjust the rights which grow out of it. But where a clear legal right of lien is proved in the Admty. Ct. to exist, the ct. will not dispose of the property without regarding it. The possessory lien for general average of the captain will be supported when it arises incidentally in the progress of a cause over which the ct. properly has jurisdiction.—THE GALAM, CARGO EX (1863), 2 Moo. P. C. C. N. S. 218; Brown. & Lush. 167; 3 New Rep. 254; 33 L. J. P. M. & A. 97; 9 L. T. 550; 10 Jur. N. S. 477; 12 W. R. 495; 1 Mar. L. C. 408; 15 E. R. 883, P. C. S. C. No. 690, post.

658. — Effect of Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66).]—Semble: since the above Act the Admty. Div. has acquired a right to entertain a claim for a general average loss which the Admty. Ct. did not possess.—THE OCEANO, No. 570, ante.

R. 3 A. & E. 14; 21 L. T. 727; 3 Mar. L. C. 316.

660. —.]—When there are circumstances rendering it advisable that an action which a ct. ct. has jurisdiction to try under Cty. Cts. Admty. Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (c. 71), s. 3, should be commenced in the Admty. Ct., such as the necessity for a commission abroad, that ct. will grant leave for a writ to issue under ss. 3, 9, of the above Act, though the cause of action may be of less amount than the limit of the ct. ct. jurisdiction. In such a case notice of the order made by the ct. should be given when the writ is served.—ELLIS & Co. v. GENERAL STEAM NAVIGATION CO., LTD. (1878), 38 L. T. 570; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 581.

661. Jurisdiction by transfer—County court—Demurrage.]—The Admty. Ct. may, by transfer from a ct. ct., acquire jurisdiction in a cause upon a question of demurrage, as to which the ct. has

662. ——— Damages for breach of charter-party.]—The Admty. Ct. may, by transfer from a ct. ct., acquire jurisdiction to hear & determine an action in rem for damages for breach of charter-party, although the action could not have been instituted in the Admty. Ct. originally.—THE MONTROSA, Nos. 888, 1710, post.

663. ——— Conditions of.]—Where a cause of necessities is instituted in a ct. ct. under Cty. Cts. Admty. Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (c. 71), & is transferred under s. 8 to the Admty. Ct., & the petition of pltf. shows the claim to be based on a bottomry bond (the ct. ct. having no jurisdiction over bottomry bonds), the ct. will reject the petition.

Semble: where a suit is instituted in a ct. ct. over which that ct. has no jurisdiction, the Admty. Ct. cannot acquire jurisdiction by transfer, even if it has original jurisdiction in such suit.—THE ELPIS, Nos. 888, 1721, post.

SECT. 1.—ACTIONS IN REM.

SUB-SECT. 1.—WRIT OF SUMMONS.

A. Since the Judicature Acts.

(a) In General.

667. Writ—Amendment—Discretionary.]—Pltf., having brought an action in rem against a yacht purchased by deft., in respect of wages due from her former owner, brought a second action in rem against the yacht in respect of necessities supplied to the former owner:—Held: (1) the second action was misconceived, not being an action in rem; (2) leave to amend the writ in the second action must be refused by the ct. in the exercise of its discretion, as by amending the writ in the first action pltf. could obtain all relief to which he was entitled.—KENNERLEY v. THE OLGA (OWNER) (1898), 42 Sol. Jo. 792.

668. ——— Increase of amount.]—Where, in a salvage action in rem, pltf. on their writ claimed £5,000 & defts. solr. gave an undertaking to put in bail for that amount, the ct., having awarded £7,500, allowed pltf., before the decree was drawn up, to amend their writ by altering the sum of £5,000 as therein claimed to £8,500.—THE DICTATOR, [1892] P. 64; 61 L. J. P. 72; 66 L. T. 863; 7 Asp. M. L. C. 175.

Annotation:—Folld. The Alert (1894), 72 L. T. 124.

669. Parties—Misdescription of plaintiff—Title of action.]—In an Admty. action in rem for damage to cargo, the writ was issued in the name of a firm, & indorsed "pltf., as owners of goods laden on board" the carrying ship, claim compensation. The owners of the carrying ship appeared as defts., gave bail, & on their demand for particulars of names & addresses, pltf. gave the name of a single individual residing in Paris, trading under the firm name at a London address. Defts. applied for security for costs, & on this application being refused, moved to set aside the writ on the ground that under R. S. C., O. 48A, r. 1, the firm in the name of which the writ was issued must consist of two or more persons:—Held: (1) as the indorsement on the writ stated that pltf. sued as "owners" of the cargo, the practice in Admty. would have been satisfied if the word "owners" had appeared on the face of the writ; (2) the mistake was a mere "irregularity" which could be cured by leave to amend under R. S. C., O. 70, r. 1; (3) as defts. had, by applying for security for costs, taken a fresh step after knowledge of the irregularity, they were precluded by ibid., r. 2, from taking advantage of the irregularity.

The Admty. practice as to the title in an action in rem for damage to cargo is not abrogated by the rules of procedure under Jud. Acts (JEUNE, P.).—THE ASSUNTA, [1902] P. 150; 71 L. J. P. 75; 86 L. T. 660; 50 W. R. 544; 18 T. L. R. 570; 9 Asp. M. L. C. 302.

670. ——— Addition of parties—Rights of added parties affected.]—Pltf. commenced an action in rem under Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93), in respect of loss of life by collision at sea. It was held the Admty. Ct. had no jurisdiction in such actions, & pltf. applied to add as defts. the owners of the wrongdoing ship personally:—Held: (1) under R. S. C., O. 16, r. 11, proceedings against the parties proposed to be added would only be deemed to have commenced from the date of service upon them of the writ of summons, & hence the action would not have been commenced against

PART III. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 1.—A (a.)

6671. Writ—Indorsement—Action for personal injuries.]—In an action for damages through negligence a claim under M. S. Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 207, for expenses incurred in hospital cannot be included in the same indorsement of the writ.—WYMAN v. THE DUART CASTLE (1889), 6 Ex. C. R. 387.—CAN.

66711. ——— Amount involved.]—In an action by the managing owner of

them within the time provided by the Act; (2) the ct., being of opinion that it had no power to add parties as defts. in personam in an action in rem, ought not to make the order merely because the objection as to time was an objection which ought strictly to be taken at a later stage.—THE BOWESFIELD (1884), 51 L. T. 128; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 265.

671. ———.—Pltfs., owners of a s.s., issued a writ in rem against the owners of, & parties interested in, another s.s. for damage by collision. The owners of the other s.s. appeared, & statements of claim, defence & counterclaim were respectively delivered, the defence including an allegation of compulsory pilotage. Pltfs. then applied to the district registrar for liberty to add, as a deft., the pilot who was compulsorily in charge of the other s.s. at the time of the collision. The registrar refused the application; but on appeal to the Admty. Div. pltfs. obtained the order on the ground that no difficulty would result from engrafting a claim in personam on an action in rem:—Held: assuming there was jurisdiction, the order ought not, as a matter of discretion, to be made, as the trial of the action might thereby be embarrassed.—THE GERMANIC, [1896] P. 84; 65 L. J. P. 53; 73 L. T. 730; 44 W. R. 394; 8 Asp. M. L. C. 116, C. A.

Annotation:—Distd. The Cheapside, [1904] P. 339, C. A.

672. ———.—Damage to cargo—Real owners.]—A collision occurred between two Norwegian ships, the P. & the C., in the North Sea, & the cargo on board the P. was damaged. The C. was arrested upon arrival in England by pltfs. alleging they were the owners of the cargo on board the P. A preliminary objection was taken that pltfs. were not the owners of the cargo, & this objection was held to be good, & the C. was ordered to be released. An application was then made to add the real owners of the cargo as pltfs.:—Held: the ct. had jurisdiction so to do.—THE CHARLOTTE (1907), 23 T. L. R. 750.

673. ———.—Joinder of plaintiffs—Separate causes of action.]—The practice which existed in the Admty. Ct. before Jud. Acts, permitting several pltfs. to sue collectively, has not been affected or altered by the Jud. Acts or the rules made thereunder.

Pltfs., the owners, masters, & crews of four steam-tugs, issued a writ of summons in rem in the Admty. Div. claiming reward for alleged salvage services rendered to a ship, her cargo, & freight. The owners of the ship, & cargo, appeared as defts., under protest, & moved to set aside the writ, or, in the alternative, to strike out all pltfs., except one, on the ground that their causes of action were separate & distinct:—Held: the motion must be dismissed, the practice in Admty., as to parties to the suit, & joinder of causes of action, not being affected by R. S. C., O. 10, r. 1, & O. 18, r. 1, as interpreted by Smurthwaite v. Ilmanay, [1894] A. C. 494.—THE MARECHAL SUCHET, [1896] P. 233; 65 L. J. P. 94; 74 L. T. 789; 45 W. R. 141; 12 T. L. R. 510; 8 Asp. M. L. C. 158.

(b) Service of Writ.

674. Mode of service—How far effective.]—The rules of the Supreme Ct. of Judicature as to service of writ of summons in Admty. actions in rem are to be strictly followed. Service of the writ on the captain of the ship on board & nailing of the warrant of arrest on the mast are not sufficient notice of a suit in rem against the ship to all whom it may concern.—THE MARIE CONSTANCE (1877), 37 L. T. 366; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 505.

675. ———.—Access to cargo.]—There is no power in an action in rem to issue either the writ of summons or the warrant to arrest cargo & freight unless there is access to the cargo, except that in the case where access is refused service may be effected on the custodian.—THE KALETEN, No. 700, post.

676. ———.—Foreign ship—Service on consul not sufficient.]—A foreign ship, after coming into collision with pltfs.' pier, became a total loss, & the foreign vice-consul, acting as agent of the owners, sold the wreck & stores, having previously given pltfs. an undertaking on behalf of the owners to hold the proceeds of the sale until the question of liability for damage to the pier was determined. In an action in rem against the owners, pltfs. served the writ upon the vice-consul:—Held: the service was bad.—THE FORNJOT (1907), 24 T. L. R. 26.

677. By whom effected—Solicitor's clerk.]—In an action in rem the writ of summons was served by a clerk in the employment of pltfs.' solrs. in the manner prescribed by the rules, namely by affixing it to the mast of the vessel, no appearance was entered, & the action came on for judgment by default under R. S. C., O. 13, rr. 12, 13. The affidavit of service of the writ was made by the solr.'s clerk who had served such writ:—Held: (1) service of a writ in rem by a solr. or his clerk, & not by the marshal or his substitute, was a valid service; (2) the affidavit was sufficient.—THE SOLIS (1885), 10 P. D. 62; 34 L. J. P. 52; 52 L. T. 440; 33 W. R. 659; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 368.

678. ———.—THE NAUTIK, No. 679, post.
For full anns., see S. C. No. 679, post.

679. Effect of service—Arrest unnecessary.]—A writ in rem was duly served within the jurisdiction by nailing it to the mast of a foreign vessel proceeded against for damage to cargo, & a warrant for her arrest was issued, but, before it could be served, the master clandestinely put to sea. On motion for judgment by default:—Held: the ct. had jurisdiction to pronounce judgment, for, though according to the ordinary practice, the property proceeded against must be under the arrest of the ct., still the service of the writ by which actions in rem are now commenced is notice to all persons interested in the property of the claim indorsed on the writ, & has the same effect, so far as notice is concerned, as service of the warrant under the former practice.—THE NAUTIK, [1895] P. 121; 64 L. J. P. 61; 72 L. T. 21; 43 W. R. 703; 7 Asp. M. L. C. 591; 11 R. 716. S. C. No. 678, ante.
Annotation:—Refd. The Messicano (1916), 32 T. L. R. 519.

680. On whom effected—Default actions—Registrar—Amended writ.]—After a vessel has been sold under an order of the judge of the Admty. Div., & the proceeds are in the registry, no owner having appeared, the writ in an action against those proceeds, whether original or amended subsequent to the sale, must be personally served on the registrar. An amended writ must in all cases be served in the same way as an original writ would be in similar circumstances. Where a writ is served on the registrar to render the service good, R. S. C., O. 9, r. 13, must be strictly adhered to.

In an action in rem for necessities supplied a writ was served on the ship, but the owners did not appear. The ship was sold & the proceeds brought into ct. in a previous action. Pltfs. in the second action then amended their writ by adding a claim as mtgees.:—Held: the amended writ making a new claim must be served on the registrar & indorsed with the date of such service according to R. S. C., O. 9, r. 13, & not merely delivered to him to be filed.—THE CASSIOPEIA (1879), 4 P. D. 188; 48 L. J. P. 39; 40 L. T. 869; 27 W. R. 703; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 148, C. A.

Sect. 1.—Actions in rem: Sub-sect. 1, A. (b) & B.; sub-sect. 2, A. (a).]

681. — Affidavit of service unnecessary.—Pltf., having on the order of the master of the French ship B. supplied necessaries, issued after the sale of the ship in another action a specially indorsed writ in rem against the B. or the proceeds of sale of the vessel then in ct., claiming £26 for the necessaries supplied, & £3 3s., or such as might be allowed on taxation, for costs. The writ was served on the registrar, who indorsed it with an acceptance of service. Pltf. then filed a notice of trial & also an affidavit verifying the claim with a copy of his account annexed. The action then came on by way of motion for judgment by default against the proceeds of the vessel, & a clerk to pltf.'s solr. was called as a witness to give the date when the writ was served on the registrar. The ct. gave judgment for pltf. against the proceeds for £26 & taxed costs, subject to priorities, & dispensed with an affidavit of service of the writ.—THE BERENGÈRE, [1905] W. N. 18. S. C. No. 1002, post.

682. Agreement to accept service—Solicitor's authority withdrawn.—Where in a collision action in rem solrs. for defts. accept service of the writ & indorse it with the words "We accept service on behalf of the defts., the owners of the A., & undertake to put in bail in a sum not exceeding the value of the A.," & in consequence of their authority being withdrawn by defts. they do not enter an appearance, they do not thereby commit a breach of their undertaking so as to render themselves liable to attachment, inasmuch as they have never expressly undertaken to appear.—THE ANNA & BERTHA (1891), 64 L. T. 332; 7 Asp. M. L. C. 31.

683. Leave to serve abroad.—A collision took place on the high seas between a British ship & the C. belonging to foreigners. Neither the C. nor her owners were within the territorial jurisdiction of the Admlty. Ct. An application that a writ should issue for service upon the owners abroad was refused.—Re THE CITY OF MECCA, Re SMITH (1876), 45 L. J. P. 92.

B. Before the Judicature Acts.

684. Procedure—Act on petition—Plea & proof.—In proceedings in the Admlty. Ct., the suitor is entitled to choose his own mode of proceeding, whether by act on petition, or by plea & proof. A proceeding by plea & proof was the ancient law of the Admlty. Ct.—THE MINERVA (1841), 1 Wm. Rob. 1, 169.

685. — Power of court to direct.—It is competent generally for proceedings in the Admlty. Ct. to be either by act on petition, or by plea & proof, & the examination of witnesses by commission; but the ct. necessarily has the option of directing the proceedings to be in one form or the other.—THE ACTÆON (1853), 1 Ecc. & Ad. 176. S. C. Nos. 1167, 1205, post.

686. S. P. THE FAME (1849), 7 Notes of Cases, 55; 13 Jur. 546.

687. ——The admission of an act on petition may be opposed, but there are very few instances of that mode of proceeding; the better way is to answer it, & so raise the point intended to be taken.—THE N. R. GOSFABRICK, Nos. 339, 350, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 339, ante.

688. — Change of mode—Not allowed where prejudicial.—An action in a cause of damage was entered on behalf of the owners of the A. against the B.; an appearance was given for the owners of this ship, & the usual assignments made, as though the suit was to be by act on petition. The proctor for the A. prepared his act from the information given him by her crew, who then went to the East Indies. Before the original act was brought in the proctor for the B. prayed a libel.—Held: the motion must be refused.—THE BALDUR (1852), 16 Jur. 802.

689. Parties—Salvage by Queen's ship.—It is the most regular mode that a suit for salvage services rendered by a subordinate officer of the crew of a Queen's ship should be brought in the commander's name.—THE ALEXANDER ROBERTSON (1842), 8 L. T. 30.

690. — Effect of abandonment to insurers.—The practice in the Admlty. Ct. is for the original owners of maritime property to be the parties in a cause, although they have abandoned the property to underwriters & received from them payment as for a total loss.—THE GALAM, No. 657, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 657, ante.

691. — Assignment of cause of action.—In a suit for building & equipping a vessel deft. pleaded that pltf.'s claim had vested in their trustee under a composition deed; & pltf's. in their reply alleged they had assigned the causes of action before the execution of the deed, & the suit was now brought in their names as trustees for the assignees. On motion in objection to the reply:—Held: (1) the assignment of the causes of action carried with it all rights of action, which though inchoate at the time might become complete; (2) where there is an absolute assignment of a beneficial interest in a debt, the assignor may sue as trustee for the assignee, notwithstanding his execution of a composition deed.—THE WASP (1867), L. R. 1 A. & E. 367; 16 L. T. 854; 2 Mar. L. C. 552.

692. — Appearance by proctor—Authority.—A proctor may commence or defend a suit in the Admlty. Ct. upon his own responsibility without the production of any proxy; but the ct. may, at any time during the proceedings, call upon him to state, not generally, but specifically by name, the whole of the parties for whom he is authorised to appear. A demand for the exhibition of a proxy is contrary to the ordinary practice of the ct., & except in special circumstances, the proctor for the opposite parties is not chargeable with laches in not making the demand.—THE WILHELMINE (WILHELMINE), Nos. 1256, 1266, 1509, post.

693. — — — — ——THE EUXINE, No. 1802, post.

694. Amendment—Title of cause—Where necessary.—The institution of a suit as a cause of necessities does not estop pltf. from pleading & proving that his claim is in respect of repairs; but the title of the cause must be amended.—THE SKIPWIT (1864), 10 L. T. 43; 10 Jur. N. S. 445; 2 Mar. L. C. 20.

For full anns., see SHIPPING & NAVIGATION.

695. — — Præcipe—Cause of action.—In the præcipe to institute the cause pltf's. stated the suit as one of "damage to cargo," & the affidavit to lead warrant alleged pltf's. had sustained damage by breach of duty & breach of contract. After arrest of the ship & appearance entered on behalf of her owners, a motion to amend by striking out of the præcipe to institute the words "damage to cargo," & substituting the words "breach of duty & breach of contract on the part of the master & crew," was granted on payment of the costs, occasioned by the mis-statement in the præcipe.—THE PRINCESS ROYAL (1869), L. R. 3 A. & E. 27; 39 L. J. Adm. 29; 3 Mar. L. C. 328.

696. — — Amount.—An action of damage having been entered in the sum of £2,500, it was discovered that that amount would not pay the expenses of repairing pltf.'s vessel. No bail had been given in the cause, as defts.' vessel had not been arrested. A motion before the hearing of the cause to increase the amount for which the action was entered was granted.—THE MEANDER, THE FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE (1862), 6 L. T. 400; 1 Mar. L. C. 221; affd. Brown. & Lush. 29, P. C.

697. ——— At what stage allowed.]—The ct. will, in special circumstances, permit the præcipe to institute to be amended by increasing the amount in which the suit is instituted, even after admission of liability & order of reference.—THE JOHANNES (1870), L. R. 3 A. & E. 127; 39 L. J. Adm. 41; 23 L. T. 26; 3 Mar. L. C. 462.

SUB-SECT. 2.—WARRANTS OF ARREST AND CAVEAT WARRANTS.

A. Since the Judicature Acts.

(a) In General.

698. Caveat warrant.—Liability of solicitor signing præcipe.]—A solr. who, without any qualification, signs a præcipe for caveat warrant is personally liable to see that the undertaking to give bail therein given is complied with.—THE CRIMDON, No. 709, post.

699. Detainer by telegram.]—The practice prevailing in the Admty. Ct., where on the issue of a warrant the marshal, if so requested by pltf.'s solr., at once communicated by telegram with his substitute at the out port, directing him to detain the property proceeded against until the warrant could be served, is still in force in the Admty. Div.—THE SERAGLIO, No. 704, post.

Annotation :—Refd. Curtice v. London City & Midland Bank, [1908] 1 K. B. 293, C. A.

700. Warrant against freight—Freight already paid.]—A warrant cannot issue against freight separately from ship or cargo, or against the proceeds of the freight already paid to the owners of the ship by the owners or consignees of cargo.—THE KALETEN (1914), 30 T. L. R. 572. S. C. No. 675, ante.

701. Effect of arrest—Ship security for plaintiff's claim.]—Where proceedings in rem are taken under Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 4 or s. 5, the ship, from the moment of her arrest by the ct., is held as a security for the amount for which judgment is afterwards recovered in the action. The security is not affected by the liquidation of the owners, a limited co., after commencement of the action but before judgment.—THE CELLA (1888), 13 P. D. 82; 57 L. J. P. 55; 59 L. T. 125; 32 W. R. 540; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 293, C. A.

702. Interference with arrest—Contempt.]—A foreign ship under arrest, which had been placed with the permission of the ct. in a wet dock, was moved into a dry dock for repairs because she showed signs of sinking.—Held : a technical contempt had been committed, the proper course before moving the ship being to communicate with the collector of customs, who was acting as agent for the marshal of the ct.—THE VICTOR PRETOT (1898), 14 T. L. R. 244.

704. ——— Though arrest not complete—Detainer by telegram.]—A warrant for arrest of a ship lying at Plymouth having been issued, the marshal telegraphed to the collector of customs at Plymouth, who arrested her. The master telegraphed for instructions to his owner, who ordered him to proceed to sea. The master sailed with the custom-house officer on board.—Held : the owner had been guilty of contempt of ct.—THE SERAGLIO (1885), 10 P. D. 120; 54 L. J. P. 78; 32 W. R. 865; 34 W. R. 32; 1 T. L. PART III. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 2.—A (a).

a. Affidavit to lead warrant—Sufficiency—Discretion of registrar—Admiralty Rules of Exchequer Court of Canada.]—In an action in rem for necessities supplied, the affidavit did not state the national character of the ship or that the aid of the ct. was required. Deft. sought to set aside the warrant of arrest on the grounds that the affidavit did not contain all the particulars required by the Admty. Rules, rr. 35-37, & that the registrar had no jurisdiction to issue the warrant.—Held : the motion must be dismissed, as the registrar had "thought fit" to dispense with some of the prescribed particulars which he was entitled to do under r. 39.—LEWSON v. THE TULADI (1912), 17 B. C. R. 170; 21 W. L. R. 570.—CAN.

b. ———.]—An affidavit to lead warrant made by a town agent is sufficient under Admty. O. 3, r. 1 (1).—THE ALPHA (1893), 27 L. T. 137.—IR.

c. Supplementary affidavit—When allowed to be filed.]—Upon an application to vacate warrants issued against a ship under arrest in an action in rem for necessities, although it appeared that, on the facts disclosed in the affidavits filed before the registrar, the ct. would not have justification to issue the warrant for arrest, pltf's. were allowed to file supplementary affidavits to show that there was jurisdiction to issue the warrants & that the case was one in which the discretion of the registrar could be properly exercised.—VICTORIA MACHINERY DEPOT CO., LTD. v. THE CANADA & THE TRIUMPH, p. 127, c. ante.—CAN.

701. Effect of arrest—Ship security for plaintiff's claim—Unauthorised release—Order for pleadings.]—Acting on a telegram from the A.-G., a customs officer arrested the T. Later, a telegram from the Public Works Department was sent to the solrs. for the crown, reading:—"T. was sold by Marshal, Admty. Ct., in 1903. Claim now invalid; attorney advises release." On the following day this telegram was cancelled. A person interested in the T. obtained from the Public Works Department a copy of the telegram advising the release, & re-telegraphed it to the customs officer, who, acting solely on this telegram, released the ship.—Held : (1) the rules of the Admty. Ct. respecting the release of ships & property arrested under its warrants were set out in rr. 53-59, & ships so arrested were in the custody of the ct. & could only be released by order of the judge, or by a release issued by the registrar under the prescribed conditions as to security; (2) the act of the collector was clearly unauthorised; (3) after a bond has been given & approved an order for pleadings may issue.—R. v. THE TUTTLE (1905), 11 Ex. C. R. 174; 5 O. W. R. 384.—CAN.

701. ii. ——— Marshal's liability for dock dues.]—The arrest of a vessel puts an end to any contract for repairs which she may be undergoing at the time, & the marshal in whose custody she remains is responsible for subsequent dock dues. He may include in his account a charge for the dock dues from arrest until sale.—CANADA SHIPPING CO. v. THE CHRYSOLITE (1888), 14 Q. L. R. 341.—CAN.

704. i. Interference with arrest—Contempt—Though arrest not complete—Detainer by telegram.]—A marshal sent a telegram to his deputy to arrest the L. & informed him that the writ & warrant had been mailed to him. The deputy, before receiving the warrant, went on board, read the telegram & a copy of the writ to the master, informed him that the ship was under arrest, & mailed up the copy writ on the ship. The mate, without the knowledge of the master, took the ship out of port before the warrant arrived.—Held : the arrest upon the telegram was valid & the master was guilty of contempt of ct.—The Seraglio (1885), 10 P. D. 120, fold. & apud.—Re THE ISHPPENING (1903), 8 Ex. C. R. 379.—CAN.

d. Re-arrest—When allowed—Judgment unsatisfied.]—The A. was arrested, released under a bail bond, & later judgment was recovered against her with costs, but had not been paid. An application for an order for a warrant to issue for re-arrest of the A. was granted. The Freedom (No. 3) (1871), L. R. 3 A. & E. 495, refd.—THOMSON v. THE AURORA (1913), 18 B. C. issued a writ in rem against the owners of a s.s., her cargo & freight, in respect of salvage services rendered on Feb. 6, 1915, but they did not arrest the vessel, & subsequently abandoned their claim against the cargo which was the property of the Crown. The owners of the ship & her freight appeared as defts., & gave an undertaking in lieu of bail. In September, 1914, the ship had been requisitioned by the Crown under a royal proclamation & thereupon became a King's ship within M. S. Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 557. The Crown applied by motion that the writ & all subsequent proceedings in the action be set aside, or that the proceedings against the ship & her freight be stayed so long as the ship should remain in the service of the Crown:—Held: all further proceedings in the action with a view to the arrest or detention of the ship should be stayed so long as the vessel remained under requisition in the service of the Crown.—THE BROADMAYNE, Nos. 69, 131, ante; No. 1262, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 131, ante.

706. —.]—An action in rem in respect of a collision was brought against a ship requisitioned by the Govt. of a state, one of Great Britain's allies in the European war. Service of the writ, which was in the ordinary form, was accepted by the solrs. for the shipowners. A warrant of arrest having been issued & duly served, an appearance was entered by the solrs. for the owners & an undertaking to give bail given, under protest, in order that the ship might be released. On a motion to dismiss the action:—Held: (1) the fact that the ship was requisitioned did not deprive plffs. of the right of action, although it precluded them from exercising some of the rights ordinarily incident to the action; (2) the appearance entered under protest, the warrant of arrest, & the arrest thereunder, & the undertaking to give bail, given under protest, must be struck out & set aside, & the time for entering appearances extended for 8 days; (3) all further proceedings in the action with a view to the arrest or detention of the ship must be stayed for so long as the ship should remain under requisition in the service of the Govt. of the allied state.—THE MESSICANO (1916), 32 T. (b) Wrongful Arrest.

See, generally, MALICIOUS PROSECUTION & PROCEDURE.

707. Principles governing liability.—Where a ship was wrongfully arrested by Admty. process, an action will lie in Admty. without proof of actual damage, if the arrest was made malâ fide or crassa negligentia so as to imply malice. Semble: an action lies at common law for malicious arrest of a ship by Admty. process.—THE WALTER D. 709. When damages awarded.—Defts.' solrs. signed, without qualification, a notice, under R. S. C., O. 29, r. 12, undertaking to enter an appearance & give bail in a sum not exceeding the value of ship, cargo, & freight. Plffs., notwithstanding the caveat which on filing of the above notice in the registry had been entered, took out under ibid., r. 18, a warrant for the arrest of defts.' vessel in a salvage action:—Held: (1) defts.' solrs., by signing the undertaking without qualification, rendered themselves personally responsible; (2) plffs. might have taken a reasonable time to make inquiry whether the undertaking was satisfactory; (3) as, instead of so doing, they had insisted upon the security of the ship, plffs. had failed to show "good & sufficient reason" within

r. 18 for arresting the vessel, & must be condemned in damages & costs.—THE CRIMDON, [1900] P. 171; 69 L. J. P. 103; 82 L. T. 660; 48 W. R. 623; 16 T. L. R. 403. S. C. No. 698, ante.

711. Costs.—Where the holder of a bottomry bond arrests the vessel & freight on which the bond is secured before the bond is due, & the bond is paid at or before maturity, the shipowner is entitled to the costs occasioned by the proceedings, but not, in the absence of malice or gross negligence on the part of the bondholder, to damages.—THE EUDORA (ENDORA) (1879), 4 P. D. 208; 48 L. J. P. 32; 40 L. T. 166; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 78.

712. Co-ownership action—Duty of managing owner.—Where part-owners wrongfully institute an action of restraint & arrest the ship thereon, it is the duty of the managing owner to take all reasonable steps to minimise losses & expenses consequent on such arrest, & the arresting owners are not liable for such losses & expenses after a reasonable time has elapsed within which such steps could have been taken.—THE VINDOBALA (1887), 13 P. 713. Demand for excessive bail.—In a salvage action in which plffs. arrested the salvaged ship in the sum of £3,000, & the ct. on a value of £14,000 awarded £450, the salvors were ordered to pay all costs & expenses of finding bail for £3,000, such sum being in the opinion of the ct. unreasonably excessive.—THE GEORGE GORDON (1884), 9 P. D. 46; 53 L. J. P. 28; 50 L. T. 371; 32 W. R. 596; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 216. S. C. No. 912, post.

(a) Proceedings to Arrest.

714. Arrest—Mode of instituting proceedings—What may be arrested—Appurtenances.—The mode of initiating a suit by arrest of the ship, tackle, apparel & furniture is the ancient formula of the ct. The liability to arrest extends to the appurtenances of the ship, i.e., the indispensable instruments without which the ship cannot execute its mission & perform its functions. On the other hand, cargo is not an appurtenance of the ship; its connection with the ship is merely transitory & it bears a distinct character of its own. The fishing stores of a ship engaged in the Greenland fisheries are appurtenances of the ship, & not cargo.—THE DUNDEE (1823), 1 Hag. Adm. 109. S. C. No. 719, post.

716. — Freight.—A ship was arrested on account of wages, & motion made on behalf of a bondholder for a warrant of arrest against the freight, the bond in terms binding only the ship. The ct. directed the warrant to issue though it would not, upon motion, determine whether the bond in such case extended to the freight.—THE MARY ANN (1845), 9 Jur. 94.

Ct., & no bail has been given in either ct., & the ship is already under the arrest of the ct. in other suits, the ct. will order the issue of a caveat to prevent her release, in case the other causes should be withdrawn.—THE RIO LIMA (1873), 28 L. 722. — When improperly executed—Ship on voyage.—The diligence of arrestment is inapplicable to a ship sailing on her voyage; & force must not be used to bring her back to port.

An arrestment ad fundandam jurisdictionem was used on a vessel lying in Glasgow Harbour. A second warrant of arrestment on dependence of the action was then given to the messenger-at-arms to execute; he, finding the vessel had sailed on her voyage, pursued her on board a steam-tug with 30 men, & overtaking her some way down the Clyde, within the jurisdiction of the Scotch cts. as she was approaching the high seas, seized her, & brought her back to port, & dismantled her :—Held : the execution of arrestment was illegal, & should be recalled.—BORJESSON & WRIGHT v. After issue of the warrant the salvors should move for leave to intervene. If the case be one of only trivial importance, the ct. will then direct the filing of affidavits in proof of claims, etc. In cases of greater moment, it will sanction an act on petition, with the usual pleadings & proof under the Rules of 1859; & when there are claims represented by several proctors, or subsequent to each other, a consolidation will be ordered, as in other cases of salvage.—THE SARAH (1871), Y. A. D. 102.—CAN.

727. Warrant of arrest—Notice to all the world.—The warrant for arresting a ship by the Admty. & the subsequent citation is notice to all the world of the subsequent proceedings.—A.-G. v. NORSTEDT, No. 621, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 621, ante.

728. — Notice to persons interested.—The warrant of arrest calls upon all persons who have an interest to appear & show cause; & if the party in possession at the time when the warrant was executed is no longer in possession, it is his own default; he has, by not appearing to give bail, acquiesced in being dispossessed, & has thus allowed the proceeds arising upon the sale of the ship to come into the registry of the ct.—THE NEPTUNE, Nos. 56, 58, 243, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 56, ante.

729. Position of necessary men.—The ct. will not permit a tradesman to retain the sails of a ship left in his possession for the purpose of repairs until the repairs are paid for, if such ship is under arrest. It will order them to be delivered up & will protect the right of the tradesman. A monition against a sailmaker to bring in the sails of an arrested vessel was directed to issue.—THE HARMONIE (1841), 1 Wm. Rob. 178. S. C. No. 733, post.

Marshal responsible for safe custody.—On a demand made against the marshal, to recover the value of a long-boat, & best bower cable, lost whilst the ship was under his custody, no appearance for the marshal having been given :—Held : (1) it was the duty of the marshal to answer the complaint & to show that the property was not lost by any default of his; (2) the marshal was liable; (3) as no answer had been given, the marshal must pay the costs.—THE HOOP (1801), 4 Ch. Rob. 145.

(c) Interference with Arrest.

731. Contempt—Removal of ship.—Where a vessel was under arrest for bail to the amount of a part-owner's interest, & after a commission to take bail, at the instance of the master, the other part-owner, had issued, was removed by the master & others to Jersey, the ct. decreed an attachment against the master & mate for their contempt (& they were imprisoned) & a monition against others to show cause.

Such offence is an offence of great enormity—a great breach of the law, & a great violation of the rights of property, a species of theft & piracy. All parties who conspire to effect this violence are guilty of contempt; it is not confined to those who actually carry off the vessel, but it includes all who are privy to & assist in the transaction.—THE PETREL (1836), 3 Hag. Adm. 299.

732. — Sale of cargo.—After a ship had been taken possession of, under warrant of the Admty., as derelict, & the cargo had been put into a warehouse by the agent of the Admty., the warehouse was broken open, & the cargo taken out & sold; the ct. decreed a monition to show cause why an attachment should not issue for contempt.—ANON. (1799), 1 Ch. Rob. 331.

733. — Exercise of lien.—THE HARMONIE, No. 729, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 729, ante.

734. — Rigging sold by harbour-master.—To pay harbour dues.—A harbour-master was arrested by order of the Admty. Ct. for carrying off & selling part of a vessel's rigging, etc., to pay harbour dues, though the vessel had been arrested by warrant of the Admty. Ct. He was released on giving bail to answer any damage & expenses caused by his act.—THE HARMONIE (1841), 1 Wm. Rob. 179.

735. — Removal of tackle.—Under distress warrant.—A warrant of distress issued by magistrates in a suit for seamen's wages under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 112 cannot be executed against a ship under arrest, & an auctioneer acting on such warrant & removing part of the ship's tackle & furniture is guilty of contempt.—THE WESTMORELAND (1845), 2 Wm. Rob. 394; 4 Notes of Cases, 173.

736. — Any interference with property under arrest.—THE ARMENIAN (1874), March 20, unreported.

737. — Though arrest wrongful.—If a warrant issued under the authority of the ct. be forcibly superseded, parties so doing, or who have advised or aided in it, are liable to attachment for contempt of ct.; the proper mode of obtaining redress is to make an affidavit of the facts & apply to the ct. to supersede the warrant.—THE BURE (1850), 16 L. T. O. S. 285; 14 Jur. 1123.

738. — Party arrested in Scotland.—Brought to England.—Release ordered by Scottish court.—A vessel, under arrest by warrant of the Admty. Ct., was forcibly removed to Scotland. An attachment issued against the party guilty of the contempt, & an order of concurrence was, upon petition, made by the Lord Ordinary in Edinburgh. The party was, under this last order, arrested in Scotland & brought to England, where he was taken under attachment by the marshal of the Admty. & lodged in the Queen's Bench prison. The Lord Ordinary was moved to issue a note of suspension of the arrest, & after hearing counsel, ordered a warrant of liberation to issue. From this last order an appeal was instantly lodged in the inner Ct. of Sess. The judge of the Admty. Ct. ordered the prisoner to be released.

The true principle of Admty. jurisdiction I take to be this; whenever an attachment has issued from this ct., it must be lawfully served, wherever it is served; there is no limitation whatever to the place where it may be served, provided it be served according to the law of the country where it is attempted to be put in force (DR. LUSHINGTON).—THE MATHESSIS (1844), 2 Wm. Rob. 286; 3 Notes of Cases, 133; 8 Jur. 582.

739. When second arrest allowed.—General principle.—The jurisdiction, which the ct. undoubtedly possesses, to order a second arrest in respect of the same cause of action, should be cautiously exercised. Application for such arrest should generally be made to the ct. itself.

Pltf. having re-arrested, after the ship had been released on bail, the ct. made an equitable order, allowing the re-arrest to stand, but cancelling the bail-bond, & directing the value of the ship (which had been repaired since the release) should be estimated at the time of the first arrest.—THE FLORA (1866), L. R. 1 A. & E. 45; 35 L. J. Adm. 14; 14 L. T. 191; 2 Mar. L. C. 324.

740. — Bond defective.—A vessel released from arrest upon a bail-bond, taken before a comr. in the country & signed by two persons in partnership, was ordered to be re-arrested notwithstanding 24 hours' notice of the bail tendered had, in accordance with Admty. Ct. Rules, 1859, r. 43, been given to pltf.'s agents in London, pltf.'s solr. in the country having, within that time, given to deft.'s solr. there formal notice of objection to the bail. The omission of pltf.'s country solr. to order, by telegraph, a caveat release to be entered:—Held: in the circumstances, not to amount to negligence.—THE CORNER (1863), Brown. & Lush. 161; 3 New Rep. 94; 33 L. J. P. M. & A. 16; 12 L. T. 62; 2 Mar. L. C. 168. S. C. No. 802, post.

741. — Mistake in sum claimed.—Clerical error.—In a cause to recover for damage sustained in a collision pltf. ordered his proctor to enter the action for £2,600. The proctor filled up the præcipe correctly & gave it to his clerk to enter the action. The clerk, by mistake, entered the action for £1,000 instead of £2,600, & the mistake was not discovered for some time. The ct., on application made before judgment had been given in the cause, decreed the re-arrest of the vessel for the larger sum, but ordered pltf. to pay all expenses arising from the mistake.—THE HERO (1865), Brown. & Lush. 447; 13 W. R. 927.

Annotation:—Reid. The Dictator, [1892] P. 304.

742. — Amount awarded in excess of bail.—Where a suit has been instituted against a vessel, & bail given for an estimated amount to cover damages & costs, & the damages recovered & the costs taxed are a larger sum than the bail given, & there has been no carelessness on the part of pltf's., the ct. will issue a writ under Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), ss. 15, 22, for the re-arrest of the ship to satisfy the costs, & will direct such writ to the marshal for execution. The fact that generally the amount in which a suit is instituted is laid to cover probable damages & costs is simply a matter of convenience.—THE FREEDOM (1871), L. R. 3 A. & E. 495; 41 L. J. Adm. 1; 25 L. T. 392; 1 Asp. M. L. C. 136.

744. — Second action.—Different parties.—A warrant of arrest of a ship was granted by the Admty. Ct. at the suit of several passengers, who had lost property in consequence of negligent collision; the ship had already been arrested in a previous action. The ct. can prevent inconvenience to owners by means of the costs.—THE EUROPA (1849), 13 Jur. 856. S. C. No. 1158, post.

745. When re-arrest not allowed—After ship unlawfully brought back.]—A ship on her voyage having been arrested by a warrant on dependence of an action, & brought back by force into harbour, the arrestment was recalled as illegally executed. Other arrestments were then used against the vessel by parties acting in concert with the original arresters:—Held: the second arrestments must also be recalled.—BORJESSON & WRIGHT v. CARLBERG (1878), 3 App. Cas. 1322, H. L.

746. — Damage in excess of bail—Second action.]—When bail has been given for a certain amount in a suit for damage by collision, & the ship has been released from arrest, if the damage decreed exceed that amount, the ship cannot be arrested in a new action to make up the deficiency.—THE KALAMAZOO, No. 808, post.

747. — —.]—In a cause of collision, the ship having been released from arrest upon bail given in the full sum in which the cause was instituted cannot be re-arrested by pltf. to answer his damages, if, after the ordinary decree & reference, they prove to exceed that sum; & if the ship has been sold by the ct. in another action brought by other parties, the ct. cannot under its general authority, or under Admlty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 15, order the proceeds of the ship to be applied to satisfy damages or interest or costs in the first action.—THE WILD RANGER (1863), Brown. & Lush. 84; 2 New Rep. 402.

(c) Wrongful Arrest.

748. Damages not awarded if bonâ fide.]—The ct. will not make a decree for damages unless the circumstances show mala fides or crassa negligentia on the part of the salvors in arresting, whereof the fact that the salvors arrested without first obtaining a valuation of the property from the receiver of wreck (as provided for by M. S. Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 6), s. 50, is not conclusive evidence.—THE KATE, No. 598, ante.

749. —.]—Defts. in a salvage suit have no right to recover damages for demurrage against pltf., who, having bonâ fide & through mere error of judgment arrested defts.' vessel & carried on the suit to recover reward for their alleged salvage services, are held to have performed no salvage, but mere towage, services.—THE STRATHNAVER (1875), 1 App. Cas. 58; 34 L. T. 148; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 113, P. C. S. C. No. 602, ante.

Annotation:—Refd. The Walter D. Wallet (1893), 69 L. T. 771.

750. — Mistake in identity — Identity not proved.]—A collision took place at sea. The vessel causing the damage got away. From the appearance of a vessel in port, the owners of the damaged vessel caused her to be arrested to answer an action for damages. The vessel seized was a foreign vessel, & as the owner had no funds in England, she was detained for some months before she was released on bail. Pltfs. failed in identifying the vessel seized as being the one causing the damage, & the Admlty. Ct. dismissed the action with costs, refusing to award damages:—Held: the decree must be affirmed, there being no evidence of mala fides, or crassa negligentia, which might imply malice, on the part of pltfs. in arresting the ship, such arrestment being necessary & the foundation of the action in the Admlty. Ct., the proceedings being in rem.—

751. — —.]—In a cause of damage, if the identity of defts.' vessel as that which caused the damage be not proved, the ct. nevertheless does not condemn pltfs. in damages as well as costs, unless there be proved against them either mala fides or such crassa negligentia as would imply malice.—THE ACTIVE (1862), 5 L. T. 773; 1 Mar. L. C. 191.

752. — Abandonment of proceedings by mortgagee.]—The mtgee. of four sixty-fourth shares of a vessel caused her to be arrested in a suit which he subsequently abandoned. The ct. condemned him in costs, but not in damages.—THE EGERATEIA (1868), 38 L. J. Adm. 40; 20 L. T. 961; 3 Mar. L. C. 241.

753. — — Interest on money in court.]—A ship was mtgd. to deft. to secure a sum exceeding £1,400; the mtge. was duly registered, & deft. took possession of the ship & advertised her for sale. Before the sale pltf., who held a mtge. on the ship, made & registered after the date of the registration of the mtge. to deft., instituted a suit against the ship to enforce his mtge., & caused the ship to be arrested. Deft., to obtain the release of the ship, paid £500 into ct. in lieu of bail. The ship was sold by deft., & the proceeds were insufficient to satisfy deft.'s mtge. Pltf., when the cause was ripe for hearing, abandoned the suit. The ct. condemned pltf. in costs, & ordered him to pay to deft. interest on the £500 paid into ct.—THE WESTERN OCEAN (1870), L. R. 3 A. & E. 38.

Annotation:—Distd. The Acacia (1879), 41 L. T. 564.

754. Damages awarded — Negligence.]—No general rule can be laid down as to condemning salvors in costs & damages for arresting in the Admlty. Ct. property of less total value than £1,000. The fact that the arrest was made without verbal claim, & for a sum disproportionate to the value of the property & the services rendered, is evidence that the arrest was made negligently.—THE ELEONORE (1863), Brown. & Lush. 185; 3 New Rep. 95; 33 L. J. P. M. & A. 19; 9 L. T. 397; 12 W. R. 218; 1 Mar. L. C. 400. S. C. Nos. 773, 1401, post.

755. — Wrong ship.]—The O. was arrested at the suit of the W.'s owners. In a few days it was found that the O. was not the ship which had collided with the W. The action was subducted & the O. was released, having been under arrest 6 days. The owners of the W. were condemned in the costs, losses, charges, damage, demurrage, & expenses caused by the illegal arrest of the O. & her freight, & the amount was referred to the registrar.—THE ORION (1852), 12 Moo. P. C. C. 356 n.; 14 E. R. 946.

756. — — Security.]—Where in a cause of damage in which the vessel of defts. had been arrested it appeared upon affidavits that pltfs. were mistaken as to the identity of the vessel proceeded against, & defts. offered to disclose the real wrongdoer, the ct. refused to accede to an application to extend the security to be given by pltfs. to meet the costs if unsuccessful so as to cover the damages caused by the wrongful arrest. Semble: cases may arise in which the security would be extended.—THE D. H. PERI (1862), Lush. 543; 32 L. J. P. M. & A. 46; 8 Jur. N. S. 1230; 11 W. R. 44. S. C. No. 1033, post.

Sect. 1.—Actions in rem: Sub-sect. 2, B. (e); sub-sect. 3, A. & B. (a) & (b).]

757. — Proceedings unwarrantable.]—On a case of salvage coming before two JJ. it appeared that under M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 460, the JJ. had no jurisdiction. They, however, by consent of the parties, heard the case & awarded £53. The salvors refused to accept the award or to appeal, but entered an action in the Admty. Ct. against ship & cargo for £250. The owners tendered the £53, which the salvors, after the vessel had been for some time under arrest, accepted:—Held: the salvors were liable for costs & damages occasioned by improper arrest of the ship.—THE NAUTILUS (1856), Sw. 105.

758. — —.]—Pltfs. were awarded £40 by the Comrs. of the Cinque Ports for salvage services to the G. Being dissatisfied with the award they lodged an appeal against it, but arrested the G. in an action in the Admty. Ct. for £1,200. The action was abandoned after appearance:—Held: (1) the action in the Admty. Ct. was illegal to all intents & purposes; (2) pltfs. were liable for costs, damages, demurrage & expenses.—THE GLORIA DE MARIA (1856), Sw. 106.

759. — Where no jurisdiction.]—If a pltf. institutes or continues a suit against a vessel & so causes it to be kept under arrest, knowing the ct. to be without jurisdiction, he will be condemned in the damages consequent on the detention.

A salvaged vessel was valued by a receiver of wreck at £746 on Dec. 3. On Dec. 8 the salvors instituted a suit in the sum of £2,500; on Dec. 18 they applied for an appraisalment of the vessel; on Jan. 14 following they gave notice that they proceeded no further in the suit:—Held: (1) the salvors must have been aware within a short time of taking out the appraisalment that the value fixed by the receiver was substantially correct; (2) they must be condemned in costs & in damages from Dec. 22 to Jan. 14.—THE MARGARET JANE (MARGARET AND JANE) (1869), L. R. 2 A. & E. 345; 38 L. J. Adm. 38; 20 L. T. 1017; 17 W. R. 1064; 3 Mar. L. C. 296.

760. Improper detention.]—Salvors who detain a vessel after the owners have given in their affidavit of value & applied for a supersedeas are guilty of vexatious conduct, & will be condemned in costs for the further detention of the vessel; they will not be condemned in costs in the absence of any such application.—THE INDIA (1842), 1 Wm. Rob. 406, 411.

For full anns., see SHIPPING & NAVIGATION.

761. — Salvaged property released by receiver of wreck.]—After release of salvaged property by the receiver of wreck upon security to his satisfaction, salvors have no right to detain the property, or to arrest it by warrant of the Admty. Ct.; release in such case will be granted, with costs, against the salvors.—THE LADY KATHERINE BARHAM (1861), 1 Lush. 404; 5 L. T. 693; 1 Mar. L. C. 184.

762. — Of cargo—After freight paid.]—Where cargo is improperly detained under arrest, the owner is entitled to costs & damages.

PART III. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 3.—A.

a. Entry of appearance—Waiver of objection to jurisdiction.]—Entering an appearance to an action is not a waiver of objection to the jurisdiction.—RITCHIE v. THE BARBARA BOSQWITZ & PORTER, No. 562, 1, ante.—CAN.

764 i. Appearance under protest—Waiver of objection to jurisdiction.]—Defts.' steamer was attached to respond such judgment as pltf. might obtain in an action for breach of a charterparty. Defts. appeared under protest, without prejudice to the right to object to the jurisdiction of the ct., & subsequently moved to set aside the summons & attachment, on the ground that the service was irregular:—Held: (1) the defective service of a summons, regularly issued, & in proper form, was cured by the appearance of defts.; (2) such a thing as appearance "under protest" was unknown to the practice of the Supreme Ct. of Nova Scotia, but, even if defts.' right to object to the legality of the service could be protected by protest, the protest, in this case, was limited in terms to the jurisdiction.—DOMINION COAL CO., LTD. v. KINGSWELL S.S. CO., LTD. (1898), 30 N. S. R. 397.—CAN.

A cause of collision was entered against a foreign ship, freight & cargo. The ship was arrested, & the cargo was arrested for the freight. The ship was released upon an appearance & bail being given for the owners of the ship. The ct. pronounced for the damage. An appearance was entered for the freight & the freight paid into ct., & the surrogate was prayed to release the cargo. The value of ship & freight being insufficient to satisfy the damage, pltf. prayed the surrogate not to release the cargo. The surrogate referred the question to the judge:—Held: the cargo, even if the property of the owners of the ship, was not liable for the damage, & must be released with costs & damages for improper detention of it.—THE VICTOR, Nos. 499, 718, ante; Nos. 500.

763. Detention by leave—After suit dismissed—Damages awarded.]—A vessel having been arrested in a cause of damage, & the suit having been dismissed with costs, pltf. obtained leave to detain her for 12 days that he might have time to consider whether he would appeal. On the 13th day the vessel was released:—Held: doft. entitled to damages for the 12 days detention.—THE CHESHIRE WITCH (1864), Brown. & Lush. 362; 11 L. T. 350; 2 Mar. L. C. 145.

SUB-SECT. 3.—APPEARANCE BY DEFENDANTS.

A Since the Judicature Acts.

764. Appearance under protest—Practice.]—Where a doft. objects to the jurisdiction in a cause in rem & appears under protest, the former practice of the Admty. Ct. as to proceedings under protest must be observed throughout.—THE EVANGELISTRIA, No. 171, ante; No. 783, post.

766. Effect of absolute appearance—Submission to jurisdiction.]—Pltfs., owners of a British ship, commenced an action in rem & caused a vessel within the jurisdiction to be arrested in respect of a collision on the high seas. The owners of the vessel arrested were foreigners domiciled abroad. They appeared & obtained the release of their vessel by giving bail to the value of ship & freight. They then defended the action, denying their liability, & counterclaiming for damage they had sustained by reason of collision. The foreign vessel was found alone to blame, & judgment pronounced in the usual form condemning defts. & their bail in the amount of damage sustained by pltfs. together with costs of the claim & counterclaim. Defts. moved to vary the decree by limiting it to the value of their vessel, freight, & costs:—Held:

764 ii. — Subsequent acts amounting to waiver of protest.]—A summons & warrant were served & executed & an appearance entered "under protest." A bond was given (not under protest) & the ship released:—Held: the giving of a bond, in which the sureties on behalf of the owners of doft. ship submitted themselves & consented to the jurisdiction of the ct., being given after the appearance under protest, was a step in the cause, & thereby a waiver of the protest.—DUNBAR DREDGING CO. v. THE MILWAUKEE (1907), 11 Ex. C. R. 179.—CAN.

apart from any application for a statutory limitation of liability, the appearance of defts. being voluntary & their proceedings in the action amounting to a submission to the jurisdiction of the ct., they were personally liable to the full extent of pltf's. proved claim.—THE DUPLEIX, [1912] P. 8; 81 L. 767. — Objection to plaintiffs' title not excluded.—Where shipowners, in an action of restraint instituted by mtgees. alleging themselves to be owners, enter appearance not under protest & give bail for the safe return of the ship, they are not precluded at the trial from questioning pltf's. title, & if it in fact appears that pltf's. are merely mtgees. the ct. will order the bond to be given up & cancelled.—THE KEROUOLA, Nos. 235, 253, ante.

768. Entry of appearance—Action in district registry.—Where a cause in rem has been instituted in the Liverpool district registry of the Admty. Ct. the owners of the ship proceeded against, if resident out of the limits of the Liverpool district, may appear in the London registry of the Admty. Div., but the præcipe to enter an appearance must contain a recital of the institution of the cause in the Liverpool district registry of the Admty Ct. showing the title under which the cause was entered at Liverpool.—THE GENERAL BIRCH (1875), 33 L. T. 792; 24 W. R. 24; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 99.

B. Before the Judicature Acts.

(a) Form of Appearance.

769. Appearance under protest—Facts excluding jurisdiction to be stated.—Where a petition on protest is filed on the ground of want of jurisdiction, before pltf.'s petition setting forth the particulars of his damage, the petition on protest ought to state the facts which show want of jurisdiction.—THE PIEVE SUPERIORE, Nos. 524, 526, 539, 545, 555, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 545, ante.

770. — When not proper course—Case within jurisdiction.—Where an action for wages is brought against a foreign ship, defts. should not appear under protest, as the ct. has jurisdiction if it thinks proper to exercise it.—THE FRANZ ET ELIZE, No. 456, ante; No. 1035, post.

Annotation :—Distd. The Nina (1867), L. R. 2 A. & E. 44.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 456, ante.

771. Absolute appearance—Effect of—Formal objection to jurisdiction not available.—Formal objections to jurisdiction are not allowed to be taken after an absolute appearance given.

Damage having been done by a foreign ship to a barge in the Thames, the ship was arrested according to the ordinary process; there was an absolute appearance & release of the vessel thereon. On the petition being filed, deft. pleaded the barge was not a sea-going vessel within Admty. Ct. Act, 1840 (c. 65), s. 6, & that the ct. had no jurisdiction:—Held: (1) ct. had jurisdiction by M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 527; (2) after absolute appearance defts. could not object that the arrest had not strictly followed the course prescribed in that sect.—THE BILBAO, Nos. 85, 475, 507, 724, ante.

772. — Estoppel.—In a salvage suit defts. entered an absolute appearance. The vessel being arrested, was released on Jan. 11, on an undertaking by the proctors of the owners to file an affidavit of value within a week. On Jan. 15 they filed an affidavit stating the value of the vessel, freight, & cargo to be over £1,000. On Jan. 19 a receiver of wreck made an affidavit that the value was under £1,000. On Feb. 1 defts. applied upon this affidavit, to dismiss the suit with costs on the ground that the ct. had not jurisdiction, which in such case lay with JJ. under M. S. Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 49:—Held: in the circumstances, defts. had estopped themselves from objecting to the jurisdiction.—THE DART (1870), 21 L. T. 765; 3 Mar. L. C. 327.

773. — No estoppel where no jurisdiction.—Where the ct. has not jurisdiction deft. is not prejudiced in his claim for damages by having appeared absolutely. THE ELEONORE, No. 754, ante; No. 1401, post.

774. — Plea to jurisdiction allowed.—Where a party objects to the jurisdiction of the ct., the proper course is to appear under protest. Where the jurisdiction is admitted, on a proper case stated (ex p.), the ct. will allow the party to sever his defence, & to plead in bar in the first instance, reserving to him the right to plead generally, if the plea in bar be not sustained.—THE SARAH JANE (1843), 7 Jur. 659.

775. ——Where deft. intends to object to the jurisdiction of the ct. on the ground of the value of the property salvaged he ought to enter an appearance under protest; but if he appears absolutely, & raises the objection after the petition is filed, the ct. will entertain it, but will not give him costs.—THE LOUISA (1863), Brown. & Lush. 59; 9 Jur. N. S. 676; 11 W. R. 614. S. C. No. 607, ante.

776. Second appearance—Change of solicitors—Lien of first solicitor.—Where a solr. for a deft. in a wages suit was entitled to a lien for his costs on the balance of the proceeds of the ship in the registry (after payment of pltf.'s claim & costs) & deft., wishing to dispute the registrar's report on pltf.'s claim to which he had previously submitted, caused a second appearance to be entered for him by other solrs. without previously paying his original solr.'s costs, the ct. ordered the second appearance to be set aside, & the original solr.'s costs to be paid out of the fund after payment of pltf.'s claim & costs, leaving the other solrs. to apply to enter an appearance after this had been done.—THE ONEIZA (1872), L. R. 4 A. & E. 36; 27 L. T. 632; 21 W. R. 232; 1 Asp. M. L. C. 476.

(b) Who may Appear.

777. Insurers.—The former practice of the ct. was to permit only the master or owners of a ship arrested to appear & defend. But the ct. will allow the insurers of the ship to defend, on terms, if they show a substantial interest which may be prejudiced by pltf. proceeding to judgment.

A ship having been arrested in a cause instituted in the Admty. Ct., & the owner not appearing, the foreign insurers then entered an appearance & applied for leave to defend, upon the ground that if the ship was sold by the ct., they might be made responsible to the owner for a total loss. The ct. granted the application upon their giving security for costs. In another action brought for necessities against same ship, no appearance having been entered for the owner, the same insurers appeared & paid the amount of the claim into ct., making at the same time an offer to pay costs. The ct.

a. Persons interested.—Where a proceeding in rem is instituted in the Admty. Ct. to enforce a maritime lien, it is immaterial to whom the res belongs. The owner or other persons interested may intervene to defend the 778. Persons not bound to appear—Public officers—Crown interests involved—Collision with H.M. ship—Lords of Admiralty.]—Public officers of the Crown are not bound to appear at the suit of private individuals when the interests of the Crown are concerned. The ct. cannot compel the Lords of the Admty. to appear by their proctor in a suit against a Queen's ship, & a monition will be refused for this purpose; but the ct. will intimate to their lordships that such an application has been made & the monition refused.—THE ATHOL (1842), 1 Wm. SUB-SECT. 4.—RELEASE ON BAIL, ETC.

Re-arrest, see pp. 164, 165, ante.

A. Since the Judicature Acts.

779. Value—Appraisement—Conclusiveness of.]—In an action of salvage pltf. obtained an award of £1,500 upon an appraised value of defts.' ship of £1,250 & of her cargo of £5,004; total £6,254. The ship was sold by the marshal for £713, the cargo, which was of a nature not readily saleable in England, for £1,049, & the total £2,363 was reduced by fees & disbursements to £1,025. An award of £130 obtained by the pilot & £100 by boatmen in separate actions in respect of same salvage operations brought the total salvage claims up to £1,730, which more than absorbed the whole proceeds. On motion by defts. to vary the decree by reducing the award of £1,500:—Held: the application must be refused as defts. had allowed the ct. to proceed to award salvage upon the basis of the appraisement without taking any exception at the time, & beyond the difference between the appraised value & the sum realised by the sale, there was nothing to indicate that the appraisement did not fairly represent the value at the time & place when the property was brought into safety.—THE GEORG, [1894] P. 330; 71 L. T. 22; 7 Asp. M. L. C. 476. S. C. No. 1225, post.

781. ——— Affidavit of—Evidence.]—Where, in a salvage action, defts. file affidavits of value of their ship, freight, & cargo, which values are accepted & agreed to by pltf., defts. will not be allowed at the hearing to give evidence to decrease the values.—THE HANNA (1877), 37 L. T. 364; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 505.

782. Discharge of bail—Change of indorsement on writ.]—Bail given to answer judgment in a cause where the appearance is under protest will not be discharged on account of a change in the indorsement on the writ of summons, which renders the protest of no avail.—THE CITY OF MECCA (1881), 6

783. Action of possession—Bail.]—In suits for possession the Admty. Ct. can take bail.—THE EVANGELISTRIA, No. 171, ante; No. 764, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 171, ante.

784. Action of restraint—Value of plaintiff's shares.]—In an action of restraint the bail bond should not be given to pay what may be adjudged against deft. in an action, but simply for the appraised or agreed value of pltf.'s shares, in case the ship does not return to the particular port named in the bond.

It has never been the practice to give a bond in double the value (BUTT, J.).—THE ROBERT DICKINSON, THE GLANNIBANTA (1884), 10 P. D. 15; 54 L. J. P. 5; 52 L. T. 55; 33 W. R. 400; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 341. S. C. No. 227, ante.

785. ———.]—In an action of restraint the amount of bail to be put in by defts. is the same proportion of the whole value of the vessel as the number of shares held by pltf. bears to the whole number of shares in the vessel.—THE CAWDOR (1898), 79 L. T. 357; 8 Asp. M. L. C. 475.

786. Caveat release—Groundless objection to bail.]—Where a pltf., being dissatisfied with the sufficiency of bail, enters a caveat against the release of a vessel, he will, on its appearing to the ct. that his objection to the bail was groundless, be condemned in damages & costs.—THE DON RICARDO (1880), 5 P. (a) Persons entitled to Release.

787. Person entitled to freight—Mortgagee in possession.]—If a ship is arrested for ship & freight, a person showing a prima facie title to freight is entitled to a release of the ship upon giving bail in the action. In an action against ship & freight for master's wages, the mtgee. in possession is entitled to a release of the ship, upon giving bail in the action, notwithstanding that the master has become liable in respect of bills of exchange drawn upon the charterers for the ship's use. The mtgee. in possession has a prima facie title to freight, & therefore has a right to give bail.—THE RINGDOVE (1858), Sw. 310. S. C. No. 248, ante.

788. ——— Receiver appointed by the court—Before arrest—Without bail.]—The Ct. of Chancery appointed certain persons receivers of a freight, which, before they had obtained possession, was arrested in a suit in the Admty. Ct. Upon motion, in the Admty. Ct. on behalf of the receivers, the release was decreed, but without costs.—THE BLOOMER (1864), 11 L. T. 46; 2 Mar. L. C. 147.

789. Cargo owner—Release of cargo—Conditions.]—Cargo arrested for freight will be released upon payment of the freight into ct., with an affidavit of value.—THE VICTOR, Nos. 499, 718, 762, ante.

779 1. Value—Appraisement—How valuation should be estimated.]—Where, in a case of salvage, there is no market value for the ship in the port where it is brought by the salvors, the res should be valued, not on the basis of a forced sale, but as a "going concern" in the hands of a solvent owner, using it for the particular purposes of his trade at the sum for which the owner, as a reasonable man, would be willing to sell it.—VERMONT S.S. Co. v. THE ABBY PALMER (1904), 8 Ex. C. R. 446.—CAN.

upon the whole cargo must be paid into ct. before the portion on board at the time of arrest could be released.—THE ROECLIFF (1869), L. R. 2 A. & E. 363; 38 L. J. Adm. 56; 20 L. T. 586; 17 W. R. 745; 3 Mar. L. C. 243.

Annotation :—Reld. The Kaloten (1914), 30 T. L. R. 572.

791. Salvage action against injured ship—Intervention of owner of ship to blame.—Where a ship has been found to blame in a cause of collision, & a cause of salvage has been instituted against the other (the injured) ship, the owners of the ship found to blame have a right to intervene in the salvage cause to protect their own interest; if they choose to put in bail to answer the claim of the salvors in lieu of bail given by the owners of the injured vessel, the Admty. Ct. will give them the conduct of the defence of the salvage suit; in such circumstances the owners of the injured vessel are entitled to have their bail released, & to be paid their costs up to the time when the new bail is put in.—THE DIANA (1874), 31 L. T. 203; 2 Asp. M. L. C. 366.

792. Arrest under Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870 (c. 90)—Conditions of release—Amount of bail.—Where a vessel is arrested under the above Act, the ct. will admit her to bail with the consent of the Crown. Semble: the consent of the Crown is not necessary. The ct. will only require bail to be given to the extent of the value of the ship & her equipment, & not any further sum for costs.—THE GAUNTLET (1871), L. R. 3 A. & E. 319; 24 L. T. 597; 1 Asp. M. L. C. 45.

(b) Appraisement.

793. Commission of appraisement—Commission of unlivery.—It is the right of salvors if they cannot obtain a full valuation of ship & cargo to apply for a commission of appraisement, & it may be also for a commission of unlivery; but the former is an extreme measure & not to be resorted to except in cases of extreme necessity. In the case of cargo the commission of unlivery will be granted as the cargo cannot be duly appraised without being unladen. In the particular case the ship & cargo were released upon affidavits of value, the right being reserved to the salvors to have another valuation & the owners undertaking to afford every facility for ascertaining such valuation if the value was impeached.—THE GLASGOW PACKET (1843), 8 Jur. 67.

794. Affidavit of value.—In a salvage suit the regular course is for the owners to bring in an affidavit, but the first step on the part of the salvors is to demand one before taking out a commission of appraisement.—THE SARAH (1849), 6 Notes of Cases, 677; 13 L. T. O. S. 103; 13 Jur. 263. S. C. No. 1276, post.

795. Appraisement—Where value disputed.—In all cases where the value of property to which salvage service has been rendered is disputed, the proper mode, if practicable, is to resort to a decree of appraisement.—THE LADY EGLINTON v. THE BLACK SEA (1856), 3 L. T. 218.

Costs of appraisement.—See p. 206, post.

796. Effect of appraisement.—An appraisement made by the marshal of the ct. will be held conclusive as to the value of the property salvaged.—THE VENUS, CARGO EX (1866), L. R. 1 A. & E. 50; 12 Jur. N. S. 379; 14 W. R. 406.

797. Second appraisement—When made.—When the valuation of the ship is impeached, a new appraisement, to be made at the expense of the party applying, is permitted.—THE MARGARET, Nos. 211, 226, 231, 236, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 226, ante.

798. Appraisement unnecessary—Where question one of law.—Where the question is one, not of fact, but of law, a commission of appraisement is unnecessary.—THE CHARLOTTE WYLIE (1846), 2 Wm. Rob. 495; 5 Notes of Cases, 4.

799. Where no appraisement—Value fixed by arbitration.—In a cause of mixed military & civil salvage (rescue from pirates) against the owners, the ct. is unwilling, though no bail has been given, to disturb a valuation, not clearly excessive, made under a reference on the spot to three arbitrators chosen by the salvors & consignees of the vessel.—THE SIR FRANCIS BURTON (1828), 2 Hag. Adm. 156.

800. — Question for registrar & merchants.—In a cause of damage the responsive allegation pleaded the value of the ship :—Held : the value of the ship, where not agreed upon or ascertained by appraisement, was a question for the registrar & merchants, & one which the ct. would not decide from evidence given upon the allegation.—THE SPECULATOR (1848), 12 Jur. 546.

(c) Bail.

i. In General.

801. Bail bond—Substitute for res.—Bail bonds are not mere personal securities to individual captors, but are given to the ct. to abide the adjudication of all events impending before it at the time; they are regarded as pledges or substitutes for the thing itself, in all points fairly in adjudication before the ct.—THE NED ELWIN (1811), 1 Dods. 50.

802. — Sureties—Partners disqualified—Sufficiency for registrar.—By the practice of the Admty. Ct., sureties to a bail-bond must not be partners. A question of sufficiency of bail is to be referred to the registrar.—THE CORNER, No. 740, ante.

Annotation :—Fold. The Don Ricardo (1880), 5 P. D. 121. For full anns., see S. C. No. 740, ante.

803. — Omission of description.—A bail-bond to lead the supersedeas of an arrest, signed before a comr. by the sureties simply, without the addition of their descriptions & addresses, is good.—THE TAMARAC (1860), Lush. 28.

804. Effect of bail—Unloading of cargo stopped.—The ct. will stop salvors under a decree of appraisement (after bail has been given) from unloading the cargo at an outport.—THE SUSSEX (1836), 3 Hag. Adm. 339.

805. — Release—Supersedeas.—When a supersedeas is issued instant obedience must be paid to it.—THE TOWAN, No. 1343, post.

B (b).

795 i. Appraisement—Excessive value—Order for sale at upset price.—After two commissions of appraisement had been issued & the returns in both cases found too high, so that no sale could be effected, the ct. fixed an upset price, ordered a sale at short notice, & made a decree of salvage upon the proceeds thereof.—THE CAMBRIDGE (1870), Y. A. D. 63.—CAN.

795 ii. — Setting aside—Derelict.—An appraisement of a derelict was objected to on the grounds: (1) the appraisers had been chosen by the proctor for the salvors; (2) the writ had not been directed to the marshal or to comrs., but to the appraisers themselves :—Held : the appraisement could not be sustained.—THE CAMBRIDGE, No. 795, i, ante.—CAN.

796 i. Effect of appraisement.—The ct. will not allow an appraisement ordered at the instance of the salvors, which has been duly made by reliable parties, to be questioned.—THE S. B. HUME (1881), Y. A. D. 228.—CAN.

796 ii. — Appraisement after sale.—An appraisement, made by the marshal after sale of the ship :—Held : void.—THE QUEEN (No. 1) (1869), 19 L. T. 705.—IR.

ii. Limits of Liability.

806. Liability limited to amount of bail.—Where an action for damages is prosecuted by an arrest of the vessel, & where bail is given & accepted for the value of the vessel, the ct. cannot enforce payment of the damage beyond the amount of that bail, but will condemn the owners in costs.—THE VOLANT, No. 472, ante; Nos. 816, 1032, 1503, post.

807. —.—A bottomry bondholder entered an action against ship, cargo, & freight. The owners of the cargo appeared, & gave bail in the sum of £350. The proceedings were in penam. The bond was pronounced for, the ship sold, & proceeds of sale & the freight were brought into the registry. The claims for wages, which proved unexpectedly heavy, having been settled, the deficiency on the ship's account for the bond & proctor's costs amounted to £409 9s. 2d. which the owners of the cargo were called upon to pay. They tendered £350 the amount of their bail:—Held: (1) though the master may become ex necessitate agent of the owners of the cargo, he can render them liable only to the value of the cargo; (2) any liability beyond that can arise only from the conduct of such owners in contesting the validity of the bond; (3) they cannot be liable to costs not occasioned by their conduct; (4) the amount of their bail is the limit of their liability, as regards the bond; (5) the bail might have been taken to the full value of the cargo; & its not having been so taken was the act of the bondholder himself, who must abide by the consequence.—THE NOSTRA SENORA DEL CARMINE (1854), 1 Ecc. & Ad. 303; 18 Jur. 730.

Annotation:—Distd. The Temiscouata (1855), 2 Ecc. & Ad. 208.

808. — No second action if bail insufficient.—When bail has once been given in an action for damage, & the ship is released, the party proceeding must be content to abide by the sum which such bail will cover; he cannot enter a fresh action for any further sum. The bail represents the ship, & when a ship is once released upon bail, she is altogether released from that action. When a party has once proceeded before the ct. & recovered judgment, he is barred from proceeding in a second action.—THE KALAMAZOO (1851), 18 L. T. O. S. 66; 15 Jur. 885. S. C. No. 746, ante.

809. Liability limited to value of res.—Though bail in greater amount.]—In a cause of damage the bail is only liable to the extent of the value of the ship & freight, & not for the full amount of the damage done, even though bail may have been given for a sum beyond the value of the ship & freight.—THE DUCHESSE DE BRABANT (1857), Sw. 264; 30 L. 810. Bail not conclusive of real value.—Where in a cause of collision bail is given & accepted between the party charged with damage & the party promoting the suit, the promoter of the suit, if he succeeds in his action, is not precluded from disputing before the registrar & merchants the real value of the ship & freight.—THE MELLONA (1848), 3 Wm. Rob. 16; 6 Notes of Cases, 62; 11 L. T. O. S. 182; 12 Jur. 271.

811. Appropriation of bail.—Where part of claim outside jurisdiction.]—In a suit against ship & freight, bail to obtain a release was given generally. The freight was not liable:—Held: it was proper to order an inquiry as to the respective values of the ship & freight, & to hold the bail as a security only for that which might be found to be the value of the former.—THE STAFFORDSHIRE (1872), 8 Moo. 812. Benefit of bail.—Available only for party to action.]—A sum of money having been deposited by the party found in fault, to answer costs, & proceeds of the sale of the ship proving to be more than sufficient to pay the damages to the shipowner with costs:—Held: the deposit must be returned to the wrongdoer, & could not be claimed by the proprietor of the cargo, as he did not proceed with an action at the same time as the shipowner.—THE BALDUR (1853), 5 L. 814. Release of bail.—If action compromised.]—The Admty. Ct. having decreed for damage in a collision cause & referred the amount to the registrar & merchants, the case was afterwards settled by compromise, without going before the registrar & merchants:—Held: the bail was released.—THE HARRIETT (1841), 1 Wm. iii. Amount of Bail.

815. Value of ship & freight.—Limit of liability.]—The responsibility of shipowners in an action for damage by collision is limited by 53 Geo. 3, c. 159, to the value of the wrong-doing vessel, & to the freight due or to grow due for the then voyage; nor is such responsibility extended by having given bail, unconditionally, in a sum plus the real value to answer the action.—THE RICHMOND (1838), 3 Hag. 817. —.—Held: (1) the value of the ship, to which the liability of a shipowner for damage done by his ship, without his fault or privity, was limited by 53 Geo. 3, c. 159, was to be taken at the moment of the collision; (2) the bail was liable to the extent only of such value; (3) it was immaterial that bail had in fact been given unconditionally for a greater amount.—THE MARY CAROLINE (1848), 3 Wm. Rob. 101; 6 Notes of Cases, 536; 12 L. T. O. S. 247; 12 Jur. 945.

818. —.—Bail should be given for value of ship & freight, not for the amount of damage, & if given for a larger amount, it will be reduced by the ct., according to practice, to the value of ship & freight. Bail is not liable for the deficiency of that value to pay the damage, although given for a larger amount.—THE DUCHESSE DE BRABANT, No. 809, ante.

820. Salvage—Proportionate to services.—Proctors are not justified in entering actions & requiring bail to an amount quite disproportioned to the service.—THE EARL GREY (1850), 1 Ecc. & Ad. 180.

821. Action of possession—Double value.—In a possession suit bail was decreed in double the value of the ship. Semle: this was the ordinary practice.—ALSTROM v. HOULTUYN (1727), Burrell, 310.

822. Reduction of bail—Where part of claim outside jurisdiction.—An action upon various claims was entered & bail given in the sum of £1,500. The ct. having upon motion decided that it had no jurisdiction over some of the claims, the amount for which bail was necessary was reduced to £460—i.e., £260 to answer the remaining claims, & £200 for costs.—THE CHIEFTAIN, Nos. 378, 382, 387, ante.

SUB-SECT. 5.—SALE OF PROPERTY UNDER ARREST BEFORE JUDGMENT.

A. Since the Judicature Acts.

824. Default action—Property deteriorating.—Where in a salvage action, in which no appearance had been entered, it was alleged upon affidavit that the ship & cargo were daily deteriorating in value, & large expenses were being incurred in respect of the charge of the property & plffs. had been in communication with the owners as to a sale, the ct., on motion by plffs. prior to decree, ordered an appraisal & sale of the property.—THE ANNA HELENA (1883), 48 L. T. 681; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 61.

825. — Foreign ship.—The ct. will not order the sale of a foreign ship in a default action in rem merely on the affidavit to lead the warrant & the report of the marshal alleging that it is desirable the ship should be sold, but it further requires an affidavit verifying the cause of action & stating that no appearance has been entered on behalf of the ship.—THE HERCULES (1885), 11 P. D. 10; 54 L. T. 273; 34 W. R. 400; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 545.

PART III. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 4.—

822 i. Reduction of bail—Application for.—If a vessel is held to bail in too large a sum, her owners should bring forward a substantive motion to reduce it; but if, instead of so doing, they plead extraneous matter, they will not

826. Sale by private contract—Consent of mortgagees—Notice to claimants.—In an action for master's wages & disbursements, where the ship proceeded against was subject to other claims by mtgees. & material men, the ct. upon motion, no opposition being offered, ordered an official appraisal of the ship to be made, & the ship to be sold by the marshal by private contract for a sum of money not less than the appraisal, upon proof that the mtgees. assented to such sale & notice of the motion had been served upon all claimants.—THE PLANET (1883), 49 L. T. 204; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 144.

827. Sale not ordered—Ship not under arrest—Plaintiff's ship.—An order will not be made for the sale of a vessel, even upon the application of the owner, where such vessel is not proceeded against in the ct.

The owners of a vessel seriously damaged in a collision, who had issued but had not served a writ in an action of damage in rem instituted against the vessel with which their vessel came into collision, applied, while their vessel was under their control & without the territorial jurisdiction of the ct., that the ct. should order a sale of their vessel, so as to bind debts. on the question of damages:—Held: the application was unprecedented, & must be refused.—THE WEXFORD (1887), 13 P. D. 10; 57 L. J. P. 6; 58 L. T. 28; 36 W. R. 560; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 244.

B. Before the Judicature Acts.

828. Property deteriorating.—A foreign ship, being at the time on a slip in the building yard of C. at G., was arrested for necessities supplied by D. On affidavit from D. that the amounts claimed would exceed the present value of the ship, & the vessel was rapidly deteriorating, the judge ordered her removal from the building yard, & appraisal & sale without prejudice to the claim or lien of C. for rent & other charges on the proceeds of sale.—THE NORDSTJERNEN (1857), Sw. 260.

829. — Barque laden with a cargo shipped at Charleston under bills of lading whereby the cargo was to be delivered on payment of freight at Bremen, whilst prosecuting her voyage to Bremen was run into in the English Channel & damaged by another vessel, which was alone to blame for the collision. The master & crew of the barque abandoned her, & in her abandoned state she was taken possession of by salvors, who brought the barque & her cargo into Dover. The cargo was damaged by sea-water & was alleged to be deteriorating. In a suit instituted by some of the salvors against the barque, her cargo & freight, the ct., on an application made on behalf of plffs. without notice to the owners of the barque, ordered the cargo to be sold. The owners of the barque afterwards hearing of the order, & wishing to have the cargo transhipped & carried on to its destination, applied to the ct. to rescind the order, & offered to give bail for the cargo. The ct., being of opinion that it was for the benefit of all parties that the cargo should be sold refused to prevent the sale, but reserved all questions of freight. Afterwards the cargo was sold & the proceeds brought into ct., & the owners of the barque then applied to the ct. to order the payment out of the proceeds in ct. of a sum of money in respect of freight:—Held: (1) by the abandonment of the barque the contract to pay freight had been dissolved; (2) the owners of the barque were not entitled to any payment in respect of freight.—THE KATHLEEN (1874), L. 839. ————.]—A collision occurred in the English Channel, outside British territorial waters, between a British s.s. & a French sailing vessel, which at the time was in tow of a British steam tug. The French vessel was towed into a French port. The owners of the British s.s. commenced proceedings in personam in England against the owners of the French vessel & the owners of the tug:—Held: after due service of the writ upon the owners of the tug, leave could be given under R. S. C., O. 11, r. 1 (g), to issue a concurrent writ & serve notice thereof out of the jurisdiction upon the owners of the French vessel as being, within the rule, proper parties "to an action properly brought against some other person (the owners of the tug) duly served within the jurisdiction."—THE DUC D'AUMALE, [1903] P. 18; 72 L. 840. ———— When allowed or refused.]—A ship sailing under a foreign flag, & belonging to a co. established abroad, came into collision with an English ship on the high seas. The owners of the English ship applied for leave to issue a writ, of which notice should be given out of the jurisdiction, claiming damages against the foreign co.:—Held: leave must be refused.

Under the old law the ct. would have possessed no jurisdiction in personam over owners of the res unless they could have been served with a citation within the territorial jurisdiction. Parliament, in enacting Jud. Act, 1875 (c. 77), Sched. I., O. 11, r. 1, did not contemplate any alteration of the law in cases similar to the present (SIR R. PHILLIMORE).—Re SMITH (1876), 1 P. 841. ————.]—A collision took place at sea, about 10 miles from the South Stack Lighthouse, between an American & a Spanish vessel. Both vessels sank in consequence, & the owners of the American vessel applied in the registry for leave to issue a writ for service out of the jurisdiction in an action to recover compensation for loss of their vessel against a British subject resident in Spain, alleged to be one of the owners of the Spanish vessel. The registrar having granted the necessary leave, the writ was issued & service effected on deft. in Spain. An appearance under protest was entered on his behalf. On these facts being brought before the judge of the Admty. Ct., on motion, the ct. ordered the action to be dismissed. On appeal:—Held: the order was right.—THE VIVAR (1876), 2 P. D. 29; 35 L. 842. ————.]—M. S. Act. 1854, (c. 104), s. 527, which gives a remedy in certain cases against the owner of a foreign ship for damage done to a British subject in any part of the world, is confined to damage to property, & does not extend to injury to the person.

The ordinary cts. of England have no jurisdiction over acts done by foreigners on the high seas below low-water mark; & R. S. C., 1875, O. 11, r. 1 (see now, R. S. C., 1883, O. 11, r. 1), does not warrant an order for the service of a writ on a foreigner residing abroad, in respect of a cause of action arising at sea below low-water mark, though within 3 miles of the English coast.—*HARRIS v. 843. ————.]—A German ship belonging to a German co. carrying on business in Germany having stranded on the English coast, her master entered into a written contract with a German & a Swedish salvage co. by which they undertook to get the ship off & to convey her to Southampton against "a salvage reward or compensation" of 50 per cent. of the value of the salvaged property, the value in case of difference to be settled by arbn., the money to be paid to the German salvage co., which was to have a lien upon the ship & cargo. No place of payment was named in the contract. The ship was got off, & delivered to her owners in Southampton. The value was ascertained by arbn. held in Germany. In these circumstances the Swedish co. commenced an action in personam in the Admty. Div. against the German shipowners to recover its proportion of the salvage money due under the contract, & sought to obtain leave under R. S. C., O. 11, r. 1 (e), to serve notice of the writ out of the jurisdiction:—Held: (1) there was no breach of contract which ought to be performed within the jurisdiction; (2) plffs. were not entitled to serve notice of the writ upon defts. out of the jurisdiction.—THE EIDER, [1893] P. 119; 62 L. 845. Appearance under protest.]—Deft. in an Admty. action desiring to object to the jurisdiction of the ct. may enter an appearance under protest in accordance with the practice in the Admty. Ct. before the coming into operation of Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66).—THE VIVAR, Nos. 765, 841, ante; No. 1608, post.

846. Consolidation—Not before writ served in principal action.]—Consolidation of cross causes of damage will not be ordered where service of the writ in the principal action has not been effected.—THE HELENSLEA, THE CATALONIA, No. 833, ante.

847. Counterclaim—Security for damages.]—Foreign owners of a tug, sunk in collision in the English Channel with a British vessel, brought an Admty. action in personam against the owners of the British vessel, who appeared, counterclaimed, & applied that all proceedings in the action might be ordered to be stayed until foreign plffs. gave security for damages under the counterclaim:—Held: there was no jurisdiction to make the order, either under the special powers conferred on the Admty. Ct. by Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 34, or under the general powers of the cts. of law & equity kept alive & conferred on the High Ct. & the C. A. by Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25 (5), (7).—THE JAMES WESTOLL, No. 1024, post.

brought a co-ownership action in personam under Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 8, applied to the ct. for an order for the sale of the E. Deft., owner of four shares, consented to the sale. The owner & the mtgee. of the remaining shares were dead, & their representatives were not forthcoming. The sale appeared to be for the benefit of all persons interested:—Held: the order should be made, the E. to be arrested & appraised, & after sale the proceeds to be brought into ct., & representatives of owners of the remaining shares to be advertised for.—THE ESTRELLA (1895), 39 Sol. Jo. 761.

849. Default action—Specially indorsed writ.]—The practice of the Admty. Div. as to the procedure in default actions under R. S. C., O. 13, r. 3, is the same as in other divisions.

Where plffs. issued a specially indorsed writ in an action in personam in the Admty. Div.:—Held: they were entitled to enter final judgment on expiration of the time allowed to defts. to appear.—THE MADELINE & THE ANDRÉ THEODORÉ (1903), 73 L. J. P. 24; 89 L. T. 675; 20 T. L. R. 83; 9 Asp. M. L. C. 508.

850. Short cause.]—An action against a master upon bills of exchange drawn by him upon the owners & given in payment for necessities, but dishonoured at maturity, is a proper case to be brought under Short Cause Rules, 1908.—THE CAIRO (1908), 99 L. T. 940; 11 Asp. M. L. C. 161.

SUB-SECT 2.—BEFORE THE JUDICATURE ACTS.

851. Action in personam—Available equally with action in rem—Necessity for appearance.]—An exception to the jurisdiction, to the effect that "there has been no proceeding in rem," will be overruled, as it is the well-settled practice of the Admty. Ct. that the first process may be either in personam or in rem. If a personal action is instituted, no judgment can be awarded until deft. appears, & if he does not appear voluntarily, or enter into a stipulation of bail, the Admty. Ct. may compel his appearance, by his arrest under a warrant; but if deft. does not appear, & pltf. still goes on with his suit, the ct. will allow an exception to its jurisdiction, taken on that ground.—THE EVANGELINE (1860), 2 L. T. 137. S. C. No. 654, ante.

852. Cross-action—Security for costs.]—In an action & cross-action, if the proceedings are in personam, & the ship has not been arrested nor bail given in the principal cause, the ct. cannot stay the proceeding in the cross-action until pltf. in the principal cause has given security for costs as deft. in the cross cause.—THE AMAZON, THE OSPREY (1866), 36 L. J. Adm. 4.

853. Separate action—Evidence in action in rem—Available only by consent.]—Where a cause of damage, arising out of a collision between two ships, has been heard & decided, & both ships have been found to blame, & the owners of cargo on board the ship proceeded against in the former cause subsequently institute a cause in personam against former plffs. in respect of same collision, the Admty. Ct. has no power to make an order allowing plffs. (the cargo owners) to use the evidence given in the former cause, on the hearing of the latter, if defts. refuse to consent to such order. Qu.: whether if defts. refuse their consent they will be entitled to their costs.—THE DEMETRIUS, No. 863, post.

SECT. 3.—CONSOLIDATION.

SUB-SECT. 1.—SINCE THE JUDICATURE ACTS.

854. Consent of plaintiffs unnecessary.]—Where more than one salvage action has been brought in respect of services rendered to the same property & in relation to the same peril, the ct., having regard only to questions of convenience & economy, will, where it can so do without injustice to either of the parties, make an order for the consolidation of the actions, notwithstanding the refusal of one or more of the parties to consent to such consolidation.—THE STRATHGARRY, [1895] P. 264; 64 L. J. P. 59; 72 L. T. 202; 7 Asp. M. L. C. 573; 11 R. 732.

For full anns., see SHIPPING & NAVIGATION.

855. — Desirable.]—The ct. has power to order the consolidation of salvage suits in all cases, but it will not usually exercise the power contrary to the wish of the various plffs.; if plffs. institute & prosecute several suits without necessity, they will be condemned in costs.—THE JACOB LANDSTROM (1878), 4 P. D. 191; 40 L. T. 38; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 58.

856. Separate representation at trial—By leave—Costs.]—Where a party obtains leave to appear separately at the trial of a salvage action, he does so subject to his costs being disallowed.—THE LONGFORD (1881), 6 P. D. 60; 50 L. J. P. 28; 44 L. T. 254; 20 W. R. 491; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 385.

SUB-SECT. 2.—BEFORE THE JUDICATURE ACTS.

857. General principle—Wider principle applied in salvage suits.]—The universal practice of the ct. has been to consolidate actions where the decision of each action depends on precisely the same facts. In salvage suits the ct. has gone further, consolidating actions where there are several sets of salvors not rendering precisely the same services.—THE WILLIAM HUTT (1860), Lush. 25; 1 L. T. 448. a. Separate actions—Collision—Discretion of judge.]—Separate actions for damage by collision against deft. ship were brought in the Nova Scotia Admty. District by the owner of the other ship & the owner of her cargo. Deft. applied for consolidation, or for an order for release of the ship upon tendering bail to the amount of her appraised value, & for a commission of appraisement. The local judge made an order for appraisement, & that upon bail being given for the appraised value for each action, the ship be discharged from arrest, & the two actions be tried together. Deft. appealed to the Exch. Ct., & contended that there should have been an order for consolidation & for release of the ship in both actions upon giving bail to the amount of her appraised value:—Held: (1) it was within the discretion of the local judge to grant or refuse an order for consolidation, & as such ought not to be interfered with on appeal; (2) the order should be varied to allow in the alternative the ship to be released in respect of both actions, upon payment into ct. of her appraised value & the amount of her freight, if any.—

859. Wages.]—Actions for wages may be consolidated.—THE ADVENTURE (1834), 3 Hag. Adm. 153.

860. Separate actions—Undesirable.]—The ct. may sometimes see excuse for two sets of salvors bringing separate actions; but it is displeased with such a course when it can be avoided:—THE CHARLES ADOLPHE (1856), Sw. 153.

For full anns., see SHIPPING & NAVIGATION.

861. — Different parties.]—Owners of ship & cargo, being different parties, are not both bound to proceed at one & the same time to recover against the wrongdoer; it may be agreed that the judgment in one case shall govern the other. The ct. inflicts the penalty of costs where vexatious proceedings & double suits unnecessarily take place.—THE LITTLE HAMPTON, No. 482, ante.

862. — Distinct cause of action—Disagreement as to conduct of case.]—A sailor who saves life in addition to the services rendered by him in connection with the other salvors is not bound to consolidate where the other salvors cannot agree as to the conduct of the case.—THE MOROCCO (1871), 24 L. 864. Severance of consolidated actions.]—Where several actions are brought against a ship in respect of one collision by different plffs., & several bail bonds given, & the actions are consolidated by order of the ct., & the damage pronounced for in the usual course, the ct. has power to open the order of consolidation & dis sever the actions, but will not do so unless due cause be shown. If the cause is remitted from the Appeal Ct. with injunction "to proceed according to the tenor of former acts had & done," the ct. has no authority to relax an order made previous to the appeal.—THE WILLIAM HUTT, No. 857, ante.

865. Separate representation—Conflicting interests.]—Where salvage suits have been consolidated by order of the ct., but it appears the interests of one of plffs. conflicts with those of the others, the ct. will give leave for that plff. to appear separately by counsel at the hearing.—THE SCOUT, No. 1110, post.

866. Separate reference—Where convenient.]—The ct. will, where it is convenient so to do, order one of several consolidated causes to be referred to the registrar separately.—THE HELEN R. COOPER (1871), L. R. 3 A. & E. 330; 40 L. J. Adm. 46.

867. Costs.]—Semble: though actions of salvage have been consolidated the ct. can deal separately with the costs in each action.—THE MELPOMENE, No. 858, ante.

SECT. 4.—TRANSFER OF ACTIONS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—ACTIONS COMMENCED IN THE HIGH COURT.

868. Transfer to Admiralty Division—Transfer allowed—Case involving salvage.]—An action commenced in the Ex. Div., ostensibly in contract but which might possibly turn out to be one of salvage, had been transferred to the Admty. Div. by a judge at chambers & was in the Queen's Bench Div. refused to be retransferred, cases of salvage properly belonging to the Admty. Div.—NELSON v. SINGAPORE S.S. Co. (1876), 2 Char. Pr. Cas. 88. S. C. No. 875, post.

869. — Personal injury resulting from collision.]—A collision having occurred between ships A. & B., by which, besides damage to cargo, personal injuries were occasioned to a fireman on board ship A., an action in the Admty. Div. by the owners of that ship resulted in ship B. being adjudged solely to blame. The owners of the latter having thereupon instituted a limitation action also in the Admty. Div., the fireman issued a writ in the Queen's Bench Div. claiming £1,000 damages for personal injuries from the owners of ship B. By the statement of claim in the limitation action it was alleged that the fireman's was the only claim arising out of the collision in respect of personal injuries, & that it was for £500. Defts. in the limitation action, of whom the fireman was one, replied that his claim was for £1,000. Judgment was given in the limitation action on this basis. In these circumstances the fireman's action was transferred from the Queen's Bench Div. to the Admty. Div. upon application made by defts. under R. S. C. 1875, O. 41, r. 2.—HAWKINS v. MORGAN (1880), 49 L. J. Q. B. 618.

Annotation:—Refd. Ocean S.S. Co. v. Anderson (1885), 33 W. R. 536.

870. — Transfer refused—No question of seamanship.]—An application was refused which sought transfer to the Admty. Div. of an action for negligence arising out of a collision in the Thames between two vessels, one at anchor, the other in charge of a pilot, the occurrence not having taken place on the high seas & not involving questions of seamanship, etc. Costs ordered to be p'ts. in any event.—GENERAL STEAM NAVIGATION Co. v. LONDON & EDINBURGH SHIPPING Co. (1876), Bitt. Prac. Cas. 127; Char. Cham. Cas. 67.

871. — Jury case.]—Although an action in which the sole question is a question of salvage may, under R. S. C., O. 49, r. 3, be properly transferred to the Admty. Div., such transfer should not be ordered where there are other questions in the action capable of being tried by a jury.—OCEAN

PART. III. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 1.

868 i. Transfer to Admiralty side of King's Bench Division—Transfer allowed—Collision.]—Plffs. brought an action in the K. B. Div. for damages to their barge, occasioned by a collision in the Foyle. The venue was laid in the county of the city of L., admittedly the most convenient venue, having regard to the residences of the witnesses. The ct. ordered all further proceedings in the action to be carried on as an action in the K. B. Div.

872. — Action under Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93).—The owners of a ship which had been lost at sea obtained a decree in the Admty. Div. limiting their liability to a certain sum. The personal representative of a deceased person who was lost with the vessel brought an action against the shipowners in the Queen's Bench Div. for damages under the above Act. The shipowners admitted that the limited amount of their liability would not exceed the amount of the numerous claims made against them. Upon an application by the shipowners for the transfer of the Queen's Bench action to the Admty. Div.:—Held: the judge at chambers rightly refused the application.—ROCHE v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. Co., [1899] 2 Q. B. 502; 68 L. J. Q. B. 1041; 81 L. T. 315; 48 W. R. 1; 15 T. L. R. 514; 8 Asp. M. L. C. 588, C. A.

873. Transfer from Admiralty Division—Transfer ordered—Right to jury.—Pltfs., as owners of a causeway abutting on the Thames, claimed to recover the amount of damage done to the causeway through, as they alleged, negligent navigation of a steamship which at the time was compulsorily in charge of deft., as a Trinity House pilot. Pltfs. brought an action in personam in the Admty. Div. against deft., & they also brought an action in rem against the owners of the steamship. Deft. took out two summonses asking respectively that the action against him might be tried with a jury & transferred to the King's Bench Div. The judge dismissed both summonses on the ground that there being an action in rem against the ship which would, according to the usual practice, be tried by a judge with assessors, it would not be convenient that the personal action should be tried before another tribunal. On appeal:—Held: the action should be tried in the King's Bench Div. by a judge with a jury.—METROPOLITAN ASYLUMS BOARD v. SPARROW (1913), 29 T. L. R. 450, C. A.

874. — No jurisdiction.—When an action is commenced in the Admty. Div. in a matter over which that div. has not jurisdiction, deft. can insist as of right on its transfer to another div.—THE SEAHAM (1879), 48 L. J. P. 29; 40 L. T. 38; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 58. S. C. No. 1101, post.

875. — Transfer refused—Case involving salvage.—NELSON v. SINGAPORE S.S. Co., No. 868, ante.

876. Effect of transfer—Measure of damages.—Where an action is transferred to the Admty. Div. by consent of the parties to assess the amount of damages, the registrar & merchants are entitled, in accordance with the practice of the Admty. Div., to give interest in addition to actual damages, even where such interest would not be recoverable in the div. whence the action is transferred.—THE BARON ABERDARE (1888), 36 W. R. 616; 4 T. L. R. 431, C. A.

Annotation:—Reid. The Orwell (1888), 13 P. D. 80.

SUB-SECT. 2.—TRANSFER FROM COUNTY COURTS.

A. Since the Judicature Acts.

877. Transfer discretionary.—An application to transfer an action for demurrage brought in the City of London Ct. to the High Ct. on the ground that a commission might be issued to examine witnesses abroad, having been refused, on appeal:—Held: (1) the matter was entirely one of discretion; (2) defts. could not succeed unless they could show that the discretion had been wrongly exercised; (3) there were no circumstances in the case to show that the judge was so wrong that his decision ought to be reversed.—THE NELLY WISE (1887), 4 T. L. R. 33, C. A.

878. Mode of transfer—Summons.—A wages suit having been instituted in a cty. ct. sitting in Admty., defts., in accordance with Cty. Ct. Admty. Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (c. 71), s. 6, moved in the Admty. Div. that the action should be transferred to the High Ct. The application to the High Ct. was made by motion in ct.:—Held: (1) the transfer should be made; (2) the proper method of asking for a transfer from the cty. ct. to the High Ct. under s. 6 of the above Act was by way of summons in chambers.—THE INDRA, [1905] W. N. 150; 94 L. T. 110; 22 T. L. R. 12; 10 Asp. M. L. C. 196.

879. Proceedings after transfer—Pleadings.—Where a case is transferred to the Admty. Ct. under Cty. Cts. Admty. Jurisdiction Act, 1868, s. 8, pleadings must be delivered as in actions originally commenced in the Admty. Div.—THE CARISBROOK (1890), 38 W. R. 543.

880. Concurrent action in High Court—Consolidation after transfer—Conduct of consolidated action.—Where an action was brought in a cty. ct. by the owners of the C. against the V., & a second action begun in the Admty. Ct. by the owners of the V. against the C., the first action was transferred to the Admty. Ct. & made the principal cause.—THE COSMOPOLITAN (1874), 9 P. D. 35 n.

881. ——Where a cty. ct. action, instituted to recover damages arising out of a collision with defts.' vessel, is, at the instance of *pltf.*s, transferred to the High Ct., & there consolidated with an action instituted in the Admty. Div. by defts. in the cty. ct. action against *pltf.*s in that action subsequent to the institution of the cty. ct. action, *pltf.*s in the cty. ct. action, being the first to institute proceedings, will have the conduct of the consolidated actions.—THE NEVER DESPAIR (THE STORK, THE NEVER DESPAIR) (1884), 9 P. D. 34; 53 L. J. P. 30; 50 L. T. 369; 32 W. R. 599; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 211.

Annotation:—Consd. The Mersey, [1901] P. 369.

882. ——The rule laid down in The Never Despair, No. 881, ante—namely, that when an action is transferred from an inferior ct. & consolidated with a cross-action begun in the High Ct., *pltf.*s in the action in the inferior ct. will be placed in the position of *pltf.*s in the consolidated actions, if they began the action in the inferior ct. before the cross-action in the High Ct.—will not be followed unless there is clear priority in time, so that where commencement of the two actions is practically simultaneous the action in the High Ct. will be treated as the principal cause.—THE MERSEY, [1901] P. 369; 70 L. J. P. 100; 85 L. T. 584; 18 T. L. R. 14; 9 Asp. M. L. C. 273.

883. — Transfer after judgment in county court.—Where causes of necessities & wages had been instituted against a ship in the High Ct., & other causes of necessities in a cty. ct. against the same ship, & the latter causes had been transferred after decree made to the High Ct. for the purpose of enforcing the decrees, the ship being under arrest of the High Ct., the High Ct. ordered all the causes to be referred to the registrar & merchants to report the amount due therein.—THE TURBANI

873 i. Transfer from Admiralty Division—Transfer ordered.—The judge in Admty. has jurisdiction to remit an action for demurrage for trial in the Dublin Recorder's Ct. where the amount claimed in the writ is under £50.—BULL v. PILE, THE ERMINIA (1893), 27 L. T. 136.—IR.

(1875), 32 L. T. 841; 2 Asp. M. L. C. 603. S. C. No. 1762, post.

884. ———.]—A foreign vessel was under arrest in three actions of necessities, one in the City of London Ct. & the other two in the Admlty Ct., & after judgment pronounced in the City of London Ct. was about to be sold by the bailiff of that ct. In these circumstances pltf. in one of the actions in the Admlty. Ct. applied for an order to transfer the action in the City of London Ct. to the former ct., alleging that a sale by the marshal would be to the benefit of all parties. The ct. made the order, but directed that it should be without prejudice to any priorities claimed by pltf. in the action ordered to be transferred.—THE IMMACOLATA CONCEZIONE (CONCEZZIONE) (1882), 8 P. 885. ———.]—Qu.: whether if a judgment has been obtained in the cty. ct., & the action is afterwards transferred to the High Ct., such judgment would give priority, or whether pltf. in the cty. ct. action should only be admitted to share in the proceeds in the High Ct. on terms of equality with suitors in that ct.—THE AFRICANO, [1894] P. 141; 63 L. B. Before the Judicature Acts.

887. Effect of transfer—Extension of jurisdiction—Where no original jurisdiction.]—The Admlty. Ct. may, by virtue of Cty. Cts. Admlty. Jurisdiction Acts, 1868 (c. 71) & 1869 (c. 51), transfer to the Admlty. Ct. an Admlty. or maritime cause pending in a cty. ct. & instituted there by virtue of the latter Act, notwithstanding that the suit may relate to matters over which the Admlty. Ct. has not original jurisdiction.—THE SWAN (1870), L. R. 3 A. & E. 314; 40 L. J. Adm. 8; 23 L. T. 633; 19 W. R. 424. S. C. No. 661, ante.

888. ———.]—Jurisdiction over case as transferred—No general jurisdiction.]—A suit of necessities was instituted against the owners of a foreign ship in a cty. ct. having Admlty. jurisdiction, & was afterwards transferred to the Admlty. Ct. under Cty. Cts. Admlty. Jurisdiction Act, 1868, s. 8. The claim disclosed by pltf. was a claim founded on bottomry, over which the cty. ct. could exercise no jurisdiction:—Held: (1) the Admlty. Ct., to which the suit had been transferred as a suit of necessities, could not admit the petition; (2) notwithstanding that a simple contract debt for necessities once existed in favour of *pltf.*s, it must be considered on the facts pleaded to have become merged in the bottomry security, so that the only contract which *pltf.*s. could enforce would be a contract arising out of bottomry.—THE ELPIS (1872), L. R. 4 A. & E. 1; 42 L. J. Adm. 43; 27 L. T. 664; 21 W. R. 576; 1 Asp. M. L. C. 472. S. C. No. 663, ante; No. 1721, post.

Annotation:—Consd. The Haabet, [1899] P. 295.

889. Concurrent proceedings.]—Of two sets of salvors, the first in possession claimed salvage, summarily, before magistrates; the second, cognizant of such claim, sued in the Admlty. Ct. by action. The owners appealed from the magistrate's award; & the ct., rejecting an application on the part of the owners not to hear, on appeal, until the case of the second salvors was ready for adjudication, affirmed the award; & subsequently, on dismissing the action:—Held: (1) the second salvors ought to have intervened before the magistrates; (2) the first salvors had a primary interest, & had a right to choose their own jurisdiction, to proceed before the magistrates. Semble: if parties have equal rights, a resort to the subordinate jurisdiction, when objected to, would be improper.—THE EUGENE (1834), 3 Hag. Adm. 156.

SECT. 5.—PRELIMINARY ACTS IN DAMAGE ACTIONS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—SINCE THE JUDICATURE ACTS.

890. Where necessary—Action not in Admiralty Division.]—The principle of filing a preliminary act, under R. S. C., O. 19, r. 28, applies to every division of the High Ct., & is not confined exclusively to actions in the Admlty. Div.

Pltf. had a quantity of goods on board a barge. This barge was sunk by a vessel belonging to defts., & pltf.'s goods were damaged. Cross actions were brought by the owners of the barge & vessel respectively, but these actions were dismissed, as both parties were to blame. Afterwards an action was brought in the Queen's Bench Div. by pltf., the owner of the goods, against the owners of the vessel, for the damage to his goods. Defts. required pltf. to file a preliminary act under the above rule:—Held: (1) the damage sued for was "damage by collision" within the rule; (2) pltf. must file a preliminary act.—SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. HEWITT & Co., Ltd. (1888), 60 L. T. 334; 5 T. L. R. 152; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 384.

Annotation:—Distd. Armstrong v. Gaslee (1889), 5 T. L. R. 182.

891. ———.]—Loss of life.]—In an action for loss of life by collision between vessels, preliminary acts must be filed.—WEBSTER v. MANCHESTER, SHEFFIELD & LINCOLNSHIRE RY. Co. (1884), Bitt. Rep. in Ch. 172.

892. Where not necessary—Damage to barge.]—An action was brought in the Queen's Bench Div. by the owner of a barge & her cargo against the owners of a tug for negligence in towing, in consequence of which, as pltf. alleged, the barge came into collision with another vessel, & was lost with her cargo:—Held: (1) the action was not one "for damage by collision between vessels" within R. S. C., O. 19, r. 28; (2) the parties were not required to file preliminary acts as prescribed by the rule.—ARMSTRONG v. GASELEE (1889), 22 Q. B. D. 250; 58 L. J. Q. B. 149; 59 L. T. 891; 37 W. R. 462; 5 T. L. R. 182; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 353.

893. ———.]—Damage to cargo.]—*Pltf.*s. in an action instituted by the owners of cargo laden on board the A. against the owners of the A. to recover for damage sustained by such cargo in consequence of a collision between the A. & the B. took out a summons calling upon defts. to show cause why an order should not be made that preliminary acts should be filed in such action:—Held: preliminary acts need not be filed.—THE JOHN BOYNE (1877), 36 L. T. 29; 25 W. R. 756; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 341.

far as it is capable of rising & falling with the tide is not a "vessel" within R. S. C., O. 19, r. 28; & in an action for damage by collision between a s.s. & such landing stage, the parties cannot, under that rule, be ordered to file preliminary acts. Even assuming that under Admty. Ct. Rules, 1859, a practice existed according to which preliminary acts might be ordered in cases of collision other than collision between vessels, inasmuch as these Rules have been repealed by R. S. C., Introduction & Appendix O. (22), that practice has also been repealed & has not been continued in force by R. S. C., O. 72, r. 2.—THE CRAIGHALL, [1910] P. 207; 79 L. J. P. 73; 103 L. T. 236; 11 Asp. M. L. C. 419, C. A.

895. Contents—Magnetic or true course—Collision in river.]—In damage actions resulting from collisions in rivers in which the colliding vessels are on a fixed course as opposed to a course which has to be constantly changed, either the magnetic or the true course, & not the compass course, should be pleaded in the preliminary act.—THE RIEVAULX ABBEY (1910), 102 L. T. 864; 11 Asp. M. L. C. 427.

896. — Distance & bearing of other vessel.]—THE GODIVA, No. 900, post.

897. — Lights of other vessel.]—Defts.' preliminary act contained the following statements in answer to R. S. C., O. 19, r. 28, par. (k): "The mast-head, towing, & both side lights of the 'T.'"; & in answer to ibid., par. (l). "None." In fact the master of defts.' vessel, after seeing all lights on pltf's vessel, saw the green light shut in, leaving the red open alone, & then the red light was shut in & the green alone left open:—Held: the answer to the question contained in par. (l) ought to show not merely the fact that further or other lights were seen, but what the exact alterations in the lights were.—THE MONICA, [1912] P. 147; 81 L. J. P. 92; 106 L. T. 349; 28 T. L. R. 154; 12 Asp. M. L. C. 164.

898. Binding effect—Departure—Not without special leave.]—A statement of fact in a preliminary act is a formal admission binding the party making it, & can only be departed from by special leave (FLETCHER MOULTON, L.J.).—THE SEACOMBE, THE DEVONSHIRE, [1912] P. 21; 81 L. 899. — Amendment not allowed—Though of clerical error.]—The ct. will refuse to allow a mistake in a preliminary act to be amended, even though the application for an amendment be made before the hearing of the suit, & be supported by affidavit alleging that the mistake was the result of a clerical error.—THE MIRANDA (1882), 7 P. D. 185; 51 L. J. P. 56; 47 L. T. 447; 30 W. R. 615; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 595.

900. Amendment ordered—Answer not sufficient.]—In an action for damage by collision defts. in their preliminary act instead of stating, as required by R. S. C., O. 19, r. 28, "the distance & bearing of the other vessel when first seen" stated only that "the L. when first seen was at anchor":—Held: (1) the question in the preliminary act must be answered fully; (2) an amendment must be made.—THE GODIVA (1886), 11 P. D. 20; 55 L. J. P. 13; 54 L. T. 55; 34 W. R. 551; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 524. S. C. No. 896, ante.

904. — Amendment not allowed.]—The object of the preliminary act is to commit the parties to statements of the facts when they are fresh in their recollection. At the hearing of a cause of damage the ct. refused to allow a material averment in the preliminary act to be amended, but admitted before the evidence was given a corresponding alteration in the answer.—THE FRANKLAND (1872), L. PART III. SECT. 5, SUB-SECT. 1.

898 i. Binding effect—Admissibility of evidence.]—Deft's preliminary act alleged that at a certain point the bearing of the ship at fault was "a little abaft the starboard beam" of the injured ship; evidence was admitted to show that the line of approach was not more than two points abaft, or was forward of the beam of the injured vessel.—MAGDALEN ISLANDS S.S. CO. v. THE DIANA (1907), 11 Ex. C. R. 40; 3 E. L. R. 158.—CAN.

898 ii. — Correction of errors.]—A n error or a misstatement of a material fact in the preliminary act is not absolutely fatal or binding on the party making it. Such amendment may be rectified in the pleadings &, if so rectified, will be a subject for comment at the hearing, but, if the parties go to trial without pleadings or with pleadings which do not correct errors, they will be held most strongly to their preliminary acts.—MONTREAL TRANSPORTATION CO. v. NEW ONTARIO S.S. CO. (1908), 40 S. C. R. 160.—CAN.

899 i. — Amendment not allowed.]—Pltfs. objected to a motion by defts. to amend a preliminary act by including points on which information for the first time came to their knowledge on an inquiry under Canada Shipping Act:—Held: there was no reason for departing from the practice laid down in The

are not in all circumstances to be rigidly complied with, but rather to be taken as the class of pleading it is desired to introduce. In salvage actions it may be proper in some cases, owing to the practice of the ct. that where defts. admit facts alleged in the statement of claim pltf's. are not allowed to give any evidence at the hearing, to use a fuller form of statement of claim than that given in the example in R. S. C. Appendix C., s. 3, form No. 6, & approaching more nearly to the old form.

In a salvage action where pltf's. had delivered a statement of claim in accordance with the above form the ct., on motion by defts., ordered pltf's., under R. S. C., O. 19, r. 7, to deliver a further & better statement of the nature of their claim, & ordered costs of the motion to be costs in the cause.—THE ISIS (1883), 8 P. D. 227; 53 L. J. P. 14; 49 L. 908. — Amendment of—Time for.—In a salvage action defts. having by their defence admitted the facts alleged in the statement of claim, but not the inferences drawn therefrom, pltf's. at the trial asked for leave to amend the statement of claim on the ground that discovery of defts.' documents, obtained after the defence had been delivered, particularly letters & telegrams of defts.' master, disclosed material facts tending to lead to inferences increasing the value of services rendered by pltf's.:—Held: (1) further evidence at the trial as to the salvage services was inadmissible, the ct. being only concerned with the inferences to be drawn from the admitted facts; (2) the application was too late, & should have been made before the trial, after discovery had been obtained; (3) it must be refused.—THE BUTESHIRE, [1909] P. 170; 78 L. 912. — Pleading unnecessary facts—Salvage.]—An allegation by defts. in a salvage suit, pleading that a specified amount had been accepted by persons not parties to the suit in satisfaction of whatever salvage assistance had been rendered to defts. on the occasion on which the services proceeded on were rendered, will be disregarded by the ct. as surplusage.—THE GEORGE GORDON, No. 713, ante.

913. Reply—How far necessary—Salvage action.]—Qu.: whether a reply is necessary in a salvage action where the only defence is admission of pltf.'s facts & tender of a sum in satisfaction which is rejected by pltf. Leave was given to reply & the claim was amended before reply.—THE MARIA, No. 1058, post.

914. — Where counterclaim—Payment by insurers.]—In an action of wages by a master against the shipowner, deft., by way of set-off & counterclaim, claimed damages for loss of the ship by pltf.'s negligence. Reply, the ship was insured against a total loss, & the underwriter had paid or agreed to pay to the owner the whole amount payable by him on a total loss. On demurrer:—Held: the reply was bad, because pltf. had not pleaded that the money had been actually paid to deft., or that the counterclaim had been brought without the underwriter's authority.—THE SIR CHARLES NAPIER (1880), 5 P. D. 73; 49 L. J. P. 23; 42 L. T. 167; 28 W. R. 718; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 231, C. A.

915. Admissions in pleadings—Effect of.]—The defence in a salvage action admitted the facts, & denied only the inferences drawn from those facts by pltf's. in their statement of claim. At the trial of the action the ct. refused to allow pltf's. to give evidence as to the facts of the salvage services.—THE ROTHBURY (1893), 10 T. L. R. 60. S. C. No. 910, ante.

916. — — — — ——To recover remuneration for services rendered to a stranded s.s., seven actions of salvage were commenced on behalf of eight tugs & the crews of two lifeboats. These actions were consolidated & one defence put in, the material paragraph of which stated that "defts. admit the facts alleged in the various statements of claim . . . but not the inferences sought to be drawn from the facts, & they submit themselves to the judgment of the ct. thereon." At the trial leave was asked on behalf of some of the salvors to put in the log of defts.' vessel, on the ground that discovery of defts.' documents, obtained after the defence had been delivered, particularly the letters & telegrams of defts.' master, had disclosed material facts tending to lead to inferences increasing the value of the services rendered by these pltf's.:—Held: the application must be refused, on the ground that further evidence at the trial as to the salvage services was inadmissible, the ct. being only concerned with inferences to be drawn from admitted facts.—THE BUTESHIRE, No. 908, ante.

908 i. Statement of claim—Amendment of—Time for.]—The local judge in Admty. found that a collision occurred between pltf.'s ship N. & defts.' ship W., and held defts. liable for the resulting damage. In the preliminary act pltf's. stated that the parts of each ship which first came into contact were "the port bow of the W." & the "port quarter of the N. abreast of the kitchen." The parties went to trial practically on the statement of facts contained in the preliminary act. The captain of the N. stated that the "bluff of the W.'s bow struck the N.'s stern," & the judge found that the impact was "not near the bows," but somewhere near the sterns, & admitted evidence to support this finding, although a protest was made. The statement of claim was not amended until after the judgment, & then on the invitation of the judge.

In the case no application was made to amend the pleadings before the trial, & it was not proper to have made the amendments allowed after the trial & so set up an entirely new & different case from that stated in the preliminary act & pleadings. The Frankland (1872). 922. — Failure of defence set up.]—Pltf. in a collision case is only bound to plead such facts from which the ct. may infer that the collision was occasioned by default of the party proceeded against. A counter allegation by deft., pleading a certain fact as cause of collision, may as an answer to the action fail to be proved; nevertheless, pltf. must establish his case according to his own pleadings & evidence, not upon failure of the defence set up by deft.—THE EAST LOTHIAN (1860), 14 Moo. P. C. C. 177; Lush. 241; 4 L. T. 487; 1 Mar. L. C. 76; 15 E. R. 271, P. C. S. C. Nos. 937, 960, post.

923. Presumptions not to be pleaded.]—It is not necessary for pltf. in a collision case in their petition to state every fact material to their case—as that they complied with certain sailing rules—but it lies upon defts. to allege violation of such rules.—THE WEST OF ENGLAND (1866), L. R. 1 A. & E. 308; 36 L. J. Adm. 4.

924. When particular allegation necessary.]—A party cannot, at the hearing, avail himself of a rule of seamanship, in order to show misconduct in the other party, no charge of misconduct being made in the pleadings.—THE EBENEZER (1843), 2 Wm. Rob. 206; 7 Jur. 1117. S. C. No. 1303, post.

928. Violation of statute — Exact violation to be pleaded.] —The ship proceeded against, a steamer, on her passage down the river T. came into collision with a sailing vessel. In answer to the case set up against her it was pleaded by the owners of the steamer that the sailing vessel, just previous to the collision, "was seen to be suddenly, & in violation of M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 296, approaching the steamer on her port bow":—Held: (1) in pleading it was necessary to state, as accurately as the circumstances would admit, in what respect it was intended to allege that the above Act has been violated; (2) in the instance before the ct. it was sufficient to plead that the helm of the sailing vessel had not been ported in accordance with the Act.—THE IRONMASTER (1860), 6 Jur. N. S. 782.

929. —.]—Where it is intended to charge a breach of M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 296, with respect to the rule of port helm, the act done or not done should be specifically pleaded to be done in violation of the Act.—THE BOTHNIA, No. 926, ante; No. 947, post.

Objection being taken to the article, the ct. directed it to be struck out.—THE COSMOPOLITAN (1853), 1 Ecc. & Ad.

933. —.]—In a cause of salvage against ship, freight, & cargo, the shipowner, after institution of the cause, paid a sum in settlement of the claim against him, which was accepted by pltf. Pltf. proceeded against the cargo & pleaded in their petition payment of this sum by the shipowner, & stated the amount:—Held: pltf. not entitled to plead the amount so accepted by them, although they might plead the fact that they had so settled with the shipowner.—THE DUE CHECCHI (1872), L. 938. — When mere denial not sufficient—Collision.]—Pleadings should be framed so as to assist not only the party in his statement of the case, but also the ct. in its investigation of the truth between the litigants; & deft. in a collision case in his answer cannot rely on a simple negative, but must enter into a detail of circumstances leading to the collision, & this statement must be free from vagueness.

To a petition alleging that the M. had been for some time close-hauled on the starboard tack, & the W. on the port tack came into collision with her, the answer admitted that the W. was close-hauled on the port tack, & alleged that the M. was seen on the port tack, distant about a mile:—Held: defts. were bound to allege what was subsequently done on board the W. & before the collision, & the mode of the collision.—THE WHY NOT (1868), L. A pltf. whose vessel has been run down at anchor may charge negligence generally, & the burden of proof, the collision being proved, is thrown upon deft. to establish his defence. Where pltf.'s vessel was run down at anchor, & pltf. pleads that fact, charging negligence generally, & the answer pleads that the collision was not occasioned by negligence, but by violence of tempest & sea, which prevented the anchor of deft.'s vessel from holding, pltf. may reply that the collision was occasioned by default of deft.'s ground tackle.—THE BOTHNIA (1860), Lush. 52; 29 L. 951. —. —. —.]—The rule that a party seeking redress for an injury can only recover secundum allegata et probata applies only to cases where the averments alleged in the pleadings are material to the issue raised.

Where, in a case of collision caused by a vessel drifting & driving down upon another at anchor in the same anchorage, though the relative bearing of the two vessels previous to the collision was incorrectly pleaded & alleged by the vessel proved to be entitled to redress:—Held: the vessels not being in motion, their previous relative bearing when at anchor was not such material fact to the issue, namely, which vessel caused the collision, as to render actual proof of the damage of no avail, & so entitle the offending party to the benefit of the rule. Semble: in the case of a collision between two vessels originally at anchor, the bearing of one vessel with respect to the other is not such material fact as is necessary to be stated upon the issue raised.—THE ALICE (OWNERS) & THE ROSITA (OWNERS) (1868), 5 Moo. P. C. C. 83; 3 L. T. 219; 15 E. R. 237, C. A.

953. —. —. —.]—In a cause of collision pltf. alleged (1) deft. improperly starboarded; (2) if he did not starboard, at all events he neglected to port as he ought to have done:—Held: (1) the ct. might, on the evidence, find for pltf. without deciding whether deft. had starboarded or not, for the first charge, if proved, necessarily involved the second; and if not proved, the second was sufficient to sustain the judgment; (2) the objection of want of certainty in pleading was untenable.—THE AMALIA, THE MARIE DE BRABANT (1864), Brown. & Lush. 311; 10 L. 954. —. —. —.]—Semble: all words in the allegation in a petition need not necessarily be proved to the full extent.

An allegation in a petition that the vessel proceeded against in a collision cause was "considerably further over to the south side of the river than" the other vessel, which was kept under a starboard helm along the north shore, & that the former vessel instead of passing on the starboard side improperly ported & so brought about a collision, is sufficiently proved, to entitle the owners of the vessel making the allegation to recover, by showing that the vessel proceeded against was further over to the side of the river than the other, & improperly ported. The word "considerably" need not be proved to the full extent.—THE RANGER & THE COLOGNE (1872), 9 Moo. P. C. C. N. S. 352; L. R. 4 P. C. 519; 27 L. T. 769; 21 W. R. 273; 1 Asp. M. L. C. 484; 17 E. 955. Admissions in pleadings—Effect of.—Where in a salvage cause pltf.'s petition states expenses to have been incurred in rendering the services without stating their amount & deft.'s answer admits all the allegations of the petition, the Admlty. Ct. will not allow evidence to be called by pltf. to show the amount of the expenses. If specific amounts are claimed they must be pleaded so as to give to deft. the opportunity of admitting or denying them. Semble: the ct. will, if necessary, amend the pleadings, allowing pltf. to set forth the accounts, but giving deft. time to admit or deny such accounts.

Where in a salvage suit deft. admits all the allegations of fact in pltf.'s petition, but denies the inferences of fact made therefrom in the petition, pltf. may call evidence to establish those inferences.—THE EINTRACHT (1874), 2 Asp. M. L. C. 198; 29 L. T. 851.

956. —. —. —.]—Extent of.—Admission by pleading extends to matters of fact, not of law. 950 i. Material facts—Defence.—The rule that a party, proceeding to recover damage sustained in a collision, must correctly allege in his petition the facts on which he relies, & must establish in proof the case he sets up in pleading, is inapplicable to the defence of a vessel proceeded against. Deft. in his answer attributed the collision to pltf.'s vessel having attempted to cross the bows of his vessel, but the ct. was of opinion that the collision was attributable to a different cause:—Held: the defence was not thereby invalidated.—*THE BELLE v. 957. Plaintiff—Secundum allegata et probata—Particular default pleaded to be proved.—In cases of collision the ct. will confine its judgment to the issues raised upon the pleadings. Where the libel charges default in a particular manner, it must be proved in the manner in which it is laid; & it is not sufficient to prove that default was committed in another manner, although the results would be the same upon the merits.

Pltfs. in a cause of damage by collision against the A. put their case on the ground of the A. having suddenly & improperly starboarded her helm. Issue being taken on this fact, it was proved that the collision arose through the A. having not altered her course till the last moment, when a collision was inevitable, & that the A. had not starboarded her helm at all, but ported it too late:—Held: this being an entire variance of the cause of action, the suit was dismissed.—THE ANN (1860), Lush. 55; 13 Moo. 972. Cross-action—Usual practice.]—The Admty. 975. Counterclaim or set-off—Action for wages.]—

In a suit for wages & disbursements by a master who is also co-owner, the other co-owners may, under M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 191, set up a counterclaim or set-off in respect of outstanding co-ownership accounts, & claim that the balance (if any) be paid to them. To a petition claiming master's wages & disbursements, & praying a reference of any accounts arising in respect thereof to the registrar & merchants, an answer alleging the master to be also co-owner, & that accounts are outstanding between pltf. & defts., as co-owners, showing a balance on all accounts in favour of defts., & praying a reference to the registrar & merchants of all master's & co-ownership accounts, will be allowed by the Admty. Ct.—THE CITY OF MOBILE (1873), L. R. 4 A. & E. 191; 43 L. J. Adm. 41; 29 L. T. 406; 22 W. R. 191; 2 Asp. M. L. C. 123.

976. — Necessity for.]—Wages were claimed from the mtgees. in possession of a ship due from her former owners; they claimed to deduct advances made to the master, without going into an account to show they were entitled so to do by way of set-off or counterclaim:—Held: under M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 191, they were barred from so doing.

If a master sues for wages in this ct. against the ship, the owner may, if he thinks fit, pay him his wages. Any other demand, or any balance which the master is entitled to, is not a demand to be paid out of the ship. The master is left to his ancient remedy. But if the owner, in order to get rid of the demand for wages, thinks fit to make a set-off or counterclaim, then, according to the stat., the ct. may enter into & settle all accounts between the parties; & if it appear that, in addition to wages, there is a balance due to the master, this becomes a lien on the ship itself, & may be recovered by him. With respect to a mtgee., it is abundantly clear he can stand in no better position than the owner himself (DR. LUSHINGTON).—THE CALEDONIA (1855), Sw. 17; 26 L. T. O. S. 177; 2 Jur. N. S. 48; 4 W. SECT. 8.—PAYMENT INTO COURT AND TENDER.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

A. Since the Judicature Acts.

979. Tender—Practice as to.—A tender, according to the old Admty. practice, is nothing more than an offer, & it was not intended by R. S. C., O. 22, to alter this practice, or to assimilate it to the technical rules regulating tender at common law. In absence of any express rule regulating in other respects the practice of tender in an Admty. action, it may reasonably be concluded that, in accordance with R. S. C., O. 72, r. 2, the old procedure & practice of tender in Admty. actions should remain in force, except in so far as the rules affect the manner in which the money is to be lodged in ct.

In an action of damage by collision defts. admitted their liability, & agreed to pay a certain percentage of pltf's. proved or agreed damages & taxed costs. The parties being unable to agree as to the amount of damages, the question was, by consent, referred to the registrar & merchants. Before the hearing of the reference defts. tendered & paid into ct. £750 in satisfaction of the claim. Pltfs. did not accept the amount tendered, & the reference proceeded. The registrar, by his report, found that at the agreed percentage the sum due from defts. was £713 16s., with interest at 4 per cent. to the date of tender. Pltfs. applied under R. S. C., O. 22, r. 5, for payment out to them of the amount tendered, viz., £750.—Held: pltfs. only entitled to the amount found due, viz., £713 16s. with interest.—THE MONA, [1894] P. 265; 63 L. J. P. 137; 71 L. T. 24; 43 W. R. 173; 7 Asp. M. L. C. 478; 6 R. 707.

See, now, R. S. C., O. 22, r. 6.

981. ——— Costs not necessarily included.—In a salvage action it is not necessary a tender should be accompanied by an offer to pay pltf's costs up to the date of tender.—THE WILLIAM SYMINGTON, No. 998, post.

982. Plea of tender—Without payment into court—Bad.—In a salvage action the mere offer by defts. to pay a sum named in an agreement made before the rendering of the services without payment into ct. is a bad plea.—THE NASMYTH, No. 1325, post.

989. ——— How far recognised.—Where in a cause of salvage an offer out of ct. has been made by defts., & rejected by the salvors, & the salvors subsequently accept a smaller sum tendered by act of ct., they are entitled to their costs up to the date of the formal tender, unless the offer out of ct. was made in gold or bank notes. Qu: whether an express offer to pay costs due by law is necessary to a complete tender, either in or out of ct.

The ancient practice of the ct. was, that to constitute a tender, there must be offered a certain sum of money, together with the costs due by law; & any tender to which a condition was annexed of any description, sort, or kind, was considered as no tender at all. But if the salvors, with a perfect knowledge of all facts & circumstances, have refused a tender in money to the same amount as that which has since been accepted, the ct. will not allow them their costs.—THE SOVEREIGN (1860), Lush. 85; 29 L. 992. — Where costs not included.]—A tender in a salvage suit by act in ct. must either state that the sum tendered is tendered in satisfaction of the cause of action & contain an unconditional offer to pay costs, or state that defts. contend they are not liable to pay costs, stating at the same time the grounds upon which they contend & referring the question of costs to consideration of the ct.—THE HICKMAN (1869), L. 994. — Deduction for damages not allowed.]—The owners originally offered £534, but subsequent to completion of the salvage service, having suffered loss by long detention of the ship, which they attributed to the salvors, they deducted £260 for such loss, & tendered in ct. £275:—Held: whether the detention was attributable to the salvors or not, the owners could not compensate themselves for loss out of the sum tendered for the salvage service.—THE HOPEWELL (1855), 2 Ecc. & Ad. 249. S. C. No. 1014, post.

995. Payment out of court.]—In the Admty. Ct., where money has been paid into ct. the practice is not to pay it out to the party entitled until conclusion of the cause. Where, in a cause of foreign mariners' wages, money was paid into ct. before answer filed, in full satisfaction of pltf's. demand, & pltf's. continued to claim a larger sum as due, a motion to have the money paid out of ct. to pltf's. was refused.—THE ANNE CHILDS (1862), Lush. 509.

SUB-SECT. 2.—EFFECT OF TENDER ON COSTS.

A. Since the Judicature Acts.

997. Tender more than sufficient—Costs before & after tender—Costs of separate issues.]—Where, in a salvage action, a sum is tendered & paid into ct.

PART III. SECT. 8, SUB-SECT. 2.—A.

a. Tender conditional—Costs in discretion of judge.]—A sufficient tender had been made before trial & paid into ct., but with a denial of liability except for towage services. At the trial the services rendered were held salvage services. In these circumstances the C. A. allowed no costs in the C. A., being of opinion that the amount ought to have been accepted in the first instance, & refused to interfere with the order as to costs made in the ct. below, as the tender was not an unconditional tender, & the costs were in the discretion of the judge.—THE WANGANUI (1913), 32 N. Z. L. R. 842, C. A.—N.Z.

with a denial of liability, & a less amount is awarded, pltf's. are entitled to the whole costs of the action to the date of tender, & defts. to the costs subsequent: subject to this, that pltf's. may be given the costs of the issue as to the liability for salvage, & of any other issue on which they have succeeded, provided that such costs can be severed.—THE BLANCHE No. 984, ante.

998. Tender sufficient—Costs up to tender.]—Where in a salvage action defts. with their defence tender & pay into ct. a sum of money in satisfaction of pltf's. claim, & plead such payment into ct., & the sum paid in is held to be sufficient, the ct. will order defts. to pay pltf's. costs up to the date of delivery of the defence, unless the circumstances of the case render it just & expedient to order otherwise.—THE WILLIAM SYMINGTON (1884), 10 P. D. 1; 54 L. J. P. 4; 51 L. T. 401; 33 W. R. 371; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 293. S. C. No. 981, ante.

999. — Costs subsequent to tender.]—If defts. have made a tender, which tender is pronounced for & a salvage agreement set aside:—Semble: defts. will be entitled to their costs subsequent to the tender.—THE SILESIA, No. 1329, post.

Annotation:—Distd. The Mark Lane (1890), 39 W. R. 47. For full anns., see S. C. No. 1329, post.

1000. — — — — — No order as to costs—Tender not liberal.]—When a tender in a salvage suit is pronounced for, the usual practice is to condemn pltf's. in the costs incurred since the time of tender, but this practice is not invariable, & where the ct. is of opinion that the tender is not a liberal one it may, in its discretion, make no order with regard to such costs.—THE LOTUS (1882), 7 P. D. 199; 47 L. T. 447; 30 W. R. 892; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 595.

Annotation:—Refd. The Vendomora, [1891] A. C. 1.

1001. — — — — —.]—Where separate salvage actions against the same ship were consolidated, leave being given to various pltf's. to appear separately at the hearing as their interests were conflicting, & defts. with their defence tendered & paid into ct. a sum of money as being sufficient to satisfy all claims, but did not apportion it to separate pltf's.; the ct., having upheld the tender, ordered all parties to pay their own costs incurred subsequent to the tender, defts. paying the costs previous to it.—THE LEE (1889), 60 L. T. 939; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 395.

1002. Offer without tender—Smaller amount recovered.]—The owners of two vessels which had been in collision agreed that both vessels were to blame, & that pltf's. should recover 60 per cent. & defts. 40 per cent. of the damage they had sustained. Before the reference was held pltf's. solrs. wrote to defts. solrs. offering to agree defts. damage at £4,500, but defts. solrs. refused to recognise the offer unless a formal tender was made. At the reference defts. only succeeded in proving their claim at £4,352. The registrar allowed defts. the costs of proving their claim. Pltf's. appealed:—Held: as pltf's. offered to agree defts. damage at £4,500 for the purpose of saving the costs of inquiry as to the amount of them & defts. had failed to prove that the damage sustained was equal to that sum, pltf's. were entitled to the costs incurred by defts. persisting in proving their claim.—THE READING, [1908] P. 162; 77 L. J. P. 71; 98 L. T. 590; 11 Asp. M. L. C. 35.

998 i. Tender sufficient—Defendant entitled to costs.]—Where, in an action for towage services, defts. paid into ct. an amount sufficient to compensate pltf's. liberally for the services rendered, they were given their proper costs against pltf's.—HINE v. THE THOMAS J. SCULLY (1899), 6 Ex. C. R. 318; 20 C. L. T. 54.—CAN.

B. Before the Judicature Acts.

1003. Plaintiff entitled to costs—Tender insufficient.—Where by the articles wages were not payable till the cargo was discharged (within a limited time), & where, after an arrest at the suit of a mariner, the wages were paid within such time, the owners having refused to pay the mariner at the same time as the rest of the crew, but tendered him a less sum than was due "in full of his wages":—Held: the owners liable for costs of the arrest.—THE MINSTREL (1826), 2 Hag. Adm. 40.

1004. — Tender conditional.—The M. arrived at Port Philip, where some of her crew deserted. The master gave promissory notes for £40 each to the remaining part of the crew, in addition to the wages by the ship's articles, to navigate the ship to Bombay. He there engaged additional hands, & arrived at Liverpool. The owners offered the sailors who held the promissory notes the amount of their wages only on their signing a release in full & giving up the promissory notes. The seamen refused to do this, & brought a suit in the Admty. Ct. for the wages only, which they recovered, the question of costs being reserved. Subsequently, in Hartley v. Ponsonby (1857), 5 W. R. 659, it was determined the seamen were entitled to recover the £40 as extra wages:—Held: (1) the tender of wages as above was not binding on the seamen; (2) the owners were liable to the whole costs incurred in the Admty. Ct.—THE MOBILE (1857), Sw. 256; 29 L. T. O. S. 283; 3 Jur. N. S. 893; 5 W. R. 830.

1005. — Tender not legal.—Costs are always allowed to salvors when a tender made is not a legal one.—THE THOMAS & MARY (1848), 6 L. T. 194; Shipping Gazette, July 14.

1006. Defendant entitled to costs—Tender sufficient.—In the case of a tender made in a regular form, the ct. will consider its sufficiency; if it shall be pronounced sufficient, the ct. will make the party who refuses it liable not only to his own costs, but to those of the other party if it appear proceedings have been vexatiously pursued.—THE VROUW MARGARETHA, No. 985, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 985, ante.

1007. — — — — ——Pltfs., ship agents, were engaged by defts., owners of the cargo, to discharge a cargo of flour wrecked on the beach. Pltfs. in rendering the service incurred no personal risk, but disbursed for wages, etc., about £119. Defts. tendered to pltfs. £150, which was refused; they afterwards paid them, through the auctioneer who sold the cargo, £50, as part of the commission on the sale. Pltfs. sued for salvage services. Defts. paid £150 into ct., altogether £200—£30 in excess of pltfs.' disbursements:—Held: (1) the sum of £80 was sufficient, whether the services were salvage or agency; (2) as defts. had made a sufficient tender in time to prevent litigation they were entitled to costs.—THE HONOR, CARGO EX (1866), L. R. 1 A. & E. 87; 35 L. J. Adm. 113; 15 L. T. 677; 12 Jur. N. S. 773; 15 W. R. 10; 2 Mar. L. C. 445.

1008. — — — — ——Where a tender of £2 accepted by twenty-nine co-salvors for towing the A. (on fire about 8 miles from Hastings) into port was confirmed, the action having been entered at £300, the ct. condemned the salvor, who had instituted it, in £5 costs.—THE ALBION (1828), 2 Hag. Adm. 180 n.

1009. — — — — ——In salvage cases, when a tender is made, & money brought into ct., & held to be ample, costs are allowed to the party making the tender from the date when it was made.—THE I. O. (1849), 6 L. T. 194; Shipping Gazette, July 10.

1010. S. P. THE EMU (1838), 1 Wm. Rob. 16.

1011. — — — — — Modification of rule in special cases.—In ordinary cases, if a tender is made & rejected & is afterwards pronounced sufficient, it ought to be followed by condemnation of the salvors in the costs. Costs are given not with a view to punishment, but as a matter of justice to the other party. This doctrine is not applicable to cases of salvage, with all its rigidity. In the very nature of salvage services, there is something so loose & indefinite, so difficult to be determined by the best constituted minds, when looking at their own case, that the doctrine cannot be pressed to its full extent. To deprive salvors of all reward is not to the interest of the public; it is desirable to hold out a degree of extra encouragement for preservation of property.

Where the tender on the part of the owners was adequate, & the salvors had incurred no risk nor exerted any extraordinary labour or skill, & the time occupied in the service was very brief, the ct., nevertheless, refused to condemn the salvors in the costs.—THE WILLIAM (WILLIAMS) (1847), 2 Wm. Rob. 521; 5 Notes of Cases, 108; 11 Jur. 175.

Annotation:—Apld. The Lotus (1882), 7 P. D. 199.

1012. No costs—Where litigation unnecessary.—A party who does not accept a tender is not entitled to his expenses in case of litigation when he might have had same without it.—THE FREDERICK, No. 1267, post.

PART III. SECT. 8, SUB-SECT. 2.—B.

1003 i. Plaintiff entitled to costs—Tender insufficient.—Where the value of barque & cargo was estimated by the ct. at £3,740, & a cause of salvage having been instituted, a tender of £350 was made, the ct. overruled the tender & gave pltfs. £400 with costs.—THE QUEEN VICTORIA (1873), 7 L. L. T. 63.—IR.

1003 ii. — — — — ——In a suit where the tender is overruled & the ct. awards a sum within the jurisdiction of an inferior tribunal, it will certify for the salvor's costs, if there are important legal questions, or serious charges of neglect or misconduct to be considered, which magistrates might have some difficulty in dealing with, & on which their decision would hardly be deemed satisfactory.—THE AVENIR (1868), 1 R. 2 Eq. 111.—IR.

1006 ii. Defendant entitled to costs—Tender sufficient.—A tender for salvage services having been held sufficient, the promovents were ordered to pay the impugnants' costs from the date of the tender.—THE SANSFIELD (1850), 5 Ir. Jur. O. S. 213 (Adm.).—IR.

1011 i. — — — — — Modification of rule in special cases.—In a salvage suit, in which the shipowner had paid £40 into ct., which pltfs. had refused, there was much conflicting testimony upon the merit of the salvage services rendered:—Held: the tender was sufficient, but, in view of the conflict of evidence, the parties should pay their own costs.—THE STELLA MARIE (1866), Y. A. D. 16.—CAN.

1012 i. No costs—Discretion of court.—The ct., in deciding in favour of a tender made by the impugnant for salvage services, has a discretionary power as to costs, & will, in certain circumstances, let each party abide its own costs.—THE CONSTANCE (1851), 5 Ir. Jur. O. S. 9 (Adm.).—IR.

1012 ii. — — — — — Salvage agreement.—The ct., in the exercise of its discretion, will not, although decreeing in favour of the tender, give the impugnants their costs, if it appear that the owners of the vessel rendering the service were not informed that a specified amount was offered by the master of the salvaged vessel at the time the services were rendered & that the salvors by their acts led him to believe that they had accepted it.—THE GREYHOUND (1858), 4 Ir. Jur. N. S. 78 (Adm.).—IR.

1012 iii. — — — — — Merits of defence doubtful.—If there be doubt as to the merits of the defence, the ct., in decreeing in favour of a tender for salvage, will let each party pay its own costs.—THE BRITON (1848), 5 Ir. Jur. O. S. 170 (Adm.).—IR.

1012 iv. — — — — — Tender upheld—Proceedings induced by misrepresentation.—Costs should, according to the ordinary rule, follow the decree for the tender; but if the captain of the impugnant vessel misrepresent the true, or suppress important, facts, & thereby induce the promovents to institute proceedings for salvage, the ct. will, in its discretion, make a decree, without costs.—THE STEPHANO FLORI (1855), 3 Ir. Jur. N. S. 418 (Adm.).—IR.

Sect. 8.—Payment into court & tender: Sub-sect. 2, B. Sect. 9: Sub-sects. 1 & 2.]

1014. — Tender ample.]—Costs are never allowed when a tender made is considered by the ct. to be ample, & so the salvors might have had full compensation without litigation.—THE HOPEWELL, No. 994, ante.

1015. — Though expenses included.]—In a case of salvage, the ct. had decreed that £100 (which had been regularly tendered, together with the expenses of the salvors) was sufficient remuneration. It was contended, upon the ground that the tender included the costs up to the time of making it, that the ct. pronounced for the tender & the expenses it embraced, leaving the salvors to pay those they might subsequently have incurred:—Held: the salvors not entitled to any of their costs.—THE JOHN & THOMAS (1822), 1 Hag. Adm. 157 n.

Annotation:—Consd. The Sovereign (1860), 6 Jur. N. S. 832.

1016. — Tender refused on counsel's advice.]—Where the salvors had refused, on the advice of counsel, to accept a tender which the ct. found to be sufficient, their application for costs was rejected, but the ct. declined to condemn them in costs.—THE GENERAL PALMER, No. 996, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 996, ante.

1017. — Salvage cases.]—In salvage suits, when a tender is pronounced sufficient, costs do not, as a rule, follow the decision as in a ct. of common law.—THE FAVORITE (1862), 5 L. T. 773; 1 Mar. L. C. 191.

1018. — Misapprehension—No power to correct.]—The ct. having pronounced a tender sufficient dismissed defts. & their bail, but made no order as to costs. On an application for costs up to the time of tender it appeared the tender did not include costs:—Held: (1) if the ct. had known the tender did not include costs, it would not have pronounced in favour of the tender, but would have declared the sum tendered sufficient remuneration & have given plffs. their costs; (2) defts. & their bail being dismissed, the ct. was now unable to grant the application.—THE COUNTESS OF LEVEN & MELVILLE (1861), 5 L. T. 290.

Annotation:—Consd. The Joseph C. Griggs (1866), 15 L. T. 396.

1019. Defendant refused costs—Tender out of court.]—A tender must be made by act in ct. to entitle the party making it to costs, if it be considered sufficient. An extra-judicial tender does not entitle to costs.—THE PERSEVERANCE (1841), 8 L. T. 613.

SECT. 9.—SECURITY FOR COSTS AND SECURITY TO ANSWER COUNTERCLAIM.

SUB-SECT. 1.—SINCE THE JUDICATURE ACTS.

1020. Plaintiff insolvent.]—Where pltf. has recently executed a deed of assignment of all his property to an assignee, he will be required to give security for the costs of the suit, unless he satisfies the ct. that he is solvent.—THE LAKE MEGANTIC (1877), 36 L. T. 183; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 382.

1021. Foreigner—Intervening as defendant—Counterclaim.]—Foreigners resident out of the jurisdiction, who have intervened as defts. in an action of collision in rem instituted on behalf of foreign plffs. by whom security for costs has been given, must, if they seek relief by way of counterclaim, give security for the whole costs of the action.—THE JULIA FISHER (1877), 2 P. 1022. Security to answer counterclaim—When ordered—Against shipowner, not against cargo-owner.]—Where the owners of a ship which has sunk, & the owners of cargo laden on board her, join as plffs. in an action against another ship for damages sustained by collision, the ct. will order the claim by the owners of the ship to be dismissed, unless security for the counterclaim is given, but will allow the owner of cargo to proceed without giving security.—THE CARNARVON CASTLE (1878), 38 L. T. 736; 26 W. R. 876; 8 Asp. M. L. C. 607, C. A.

1023. — Foreign Government.]—The Admty. Ct. has power under Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 34, to stay proceedings in an action in rem until plffs. have given security to answer defts.' counterclaim, even though plffs.' ship, because it is owned by a foreign Govt., is by the comity of nations privileged from arrest.—THE NEWBATTLE (1885), 10 P. D. 33; 54 L. J. P. 16; 52 L. T. 15; 33 W. R. 318; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 356, C. A.

1024. — Not ordered—Against plaintiff in personam.]—A collision occurred in the English Channel between the Dutch tug H. & the English s.s. J., causing loss of the H. The foreign owners of the H. brought an action in personam against the owners of the J. to recover the damage caused by loss of the tug. The owners of the J. defended the action, & counterclaimed for the damage sustained by their vessel, & then applied that the action by the owners of the tug H. should be stayed unless they gave security to satisfy any damages found due on the counterclaim:—Held: the ct. had no jurisdiction either under Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 34, or under Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 24 (5), (7), to make an order requiring plffs. suing in personam to give security for damages which might be found due to defts. under a counterclaim.—THE JAMES WESTOLL, [1905] P. 47; 74 L. J. P. 9; 92 L. T. 150; 10 Asp. M. L. C. 29, C. A. S. C. No. 847, ante.

1025. — Where defendant not required to give bail.]—Where in a damage action the ship proceeded against is not arrested, & plffs. do not require bail to be given, defts. cannot compel plffs. to give security to answer a counterclaim in the action under Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 34, although they voluntarily give bail.—THE ALNE HOLME (1882), 47 L. T. 307; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 591.

b. Time for application—English practice—Exchequer Court of Canada.]—Under r. 228 of the General Rules & Orders regulating the practice & procedure in Admty. cases in the Exch. Ct. of Canada, applying the English practice to cases not provided for by such Rules, an order for security for costs may be granted in Admty. proceedings on motion of deft. after pltf. has filed particulars of his statement of claim.—MORTEN, DOWNS & Co. v. THE LAKE SIMCOE (1905), 25 C. L. T. 147; 9 Ex. C. R. 361.—CAN.

PART III. SECT. 9, SUB-SECT. 1.

a. Security to answer cross-action—Not ordered—Crown.]—A collision occurred between defts.' ship & a King's ship. The former vessel was arrested & bailed, but the latter could not be arrested, & as the Crown could not be sued for damages, an action in personam was brought against the officer in charge. Defts. moved for a suspension of proceedings by the Crown until they had given security to answer the judgment which defts. hoped to recover in their action in personam:—Held: there was no cross cause to justify such order. The Comus (1816), 2 Dods. 464; The Athol (1842), 1 Wm. 1026. — Where action discontinued.]—The power of the Admty. Div. under Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 34, to order an action to be stayed until bail has been given to answer a cross-action or counterclaim, does not extend to making an absolute order to give bail, & in a damage action which plffs. had discontinued after defts. had counterclaimed, the ct. refused to enforce an order, made by the registrar, to give bail to answer such counterclaim.—THE ALEXANDER (1883), 48 L. T. 797; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 89.

1027. — Effect of—Plaintiff not entitled to security to answer claim.]—Where, owing to the fact that deft.'s ship has been sunk, plff. has commenced a damage action in personam, & deft. has obtained bail from plff. to answer his counterclaim, the ct. has no power under Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 34, to stay proceedings on the counterclaim until security has been given by deft. to answer the claim of plff.—THE ROUGE MONT, [1893] P. 275; 62 L. J. P. 121; 70 L. SUB-SECT. 2.—BEFORE THE JUDICATURE ACTS.

1028. Owner out of jurisdiction.]—In proceedings in the Admty. Ct. the ct. will require security for costs to be given in cases in which the owners are resident out of the ct.'s jurisdiction.

The fact of a vessel's being under arrest of the ct. in a former suit will not enable the ct. to apply its process for enforcement of payment of costs of a second suit if it should be necessary.—THE SOPHIE (1842), 1 Wm. Rob. 326.

1030. — Though foreign Government.]—A foreign Govt., plff. in the Admty. Ct., must give security for costs of the suit.—THE BEATRICE (OTHERWISE THE RAPPAHANNOCK), No. 1040, post.

1031. — Time for application.]—Where it is sought to require a foreign owner to give security for costs, that should be asked at the outset of the cause.—THE CONON (1842), 6 Jur. 351.

1032. —]—Application for security for costs should be made in the earliest stage of the proceedings; & in ordinary cases the ct. will enforce this rule.

In the circumstances of the case security for costs was decreed after the act on petition had been concluded, & both proctors assigned to bring in their proofs.—THE VOLANT, Nos. 472, 809, 816, ante; No. 1503, post.

PART III. SECT. 9, SUB-SECT. 2.

1028 i. Owner out of jurisdiction.]—In a cause of collision, owners resident in England out of the jurisdiction of the ct., & not having even a casual residence in Ireland, were ordered to give security for costs.—THE HIBERNIA (1859), 1 L. T. 200.—IR.

c. Plaintiff out of jurisdiction.]—Where plff., in an action on a bottomry bond, was resident out of the jurisdiction of the ct., although presumably a British subject:—Held: he should be required to give security for costs on deft. making an affidavit of merits, & of the defence being bond fide.—THE ABBY ALICE (1872), Y. A. D. 112.—CAN.

1041 i. Security to answer cross-action.]—Three causes of damage by collision were brought respectively by the owners of cargo of a sunken vessel, the owners of the vessel & the master & crew of the vessel, against the owners of the colliding ship; in one of the causes the ship was arrested & liberated on bail; & the causes were consolidated. Pending the hearing, a motion was made that plffs. in the consolidated causes be compelled to answer the complaint of plffs. in a cross cause & give security to 1033. — Security for damages not ordered.]—A foreign plff. suing in rem will be required to give security for costs, but not security for damages as for wrongful arrest of deft.'s vessel, although an affidavit be filed by deft. that plff. arrested his vessel in mistake for another vessel, & has since had notice of same.—THE D. H. PERI, No. 756, ante.

1036. — Crew.]—Where a cause of wages was instituted against a foreign ship by her master & crew, also foreigners, & it appeared that, although they were at the time in England, their only place of residence was on board the ship, & the master had stated he had no means & intended to leave England, the Admty. Ct. ordered plffs. to give a security for costs in the sum of £130.—THE ZUFFALL (1875), 44 L. J. Adm. 16; 32 L. T. 571; 23 W. R. 328; 2 Asp. M. L. C. 587.

1037. — Mate—Discretion of court.]—It is in the discretion of the ct. to allow the mate of a foreign vessel, though not domiciled in England, to prosecute an action for wages without giving security for costs.—THE DON RICARDO, No. 786, ante.

1038. — Limitation of liability.]—THE WILD RANGER (1862), Lush. 553; 1 New Rep. 132; 32 L. J. P. M. & A. 49; 7 L. T. 725; 9 Jur. N. S. 184; 1 Mar. L. C. 275.

1039. Defendant out of jurisdiction—No security ordered.]—The Admty. Ct. declined to order security for costs in a collision suit to be given by deft., though a foreigner.—THE ARGO (1855), 5 L. T. 557.

1040. —]—A foreign deft. is not bound to give security for costs, even though, from the circumstances of the case, it may happen that the burden of proof of the issues in the cause lies upon him.—THE BEATRICE (OTHERWISE THE RAPPAHANNOCK) (1866), 36 L. J. Adm. 10. S. C. No. 1030, ante.

1041. Security to answer cross-action—British subject.]—Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 34, relating to the giving of security in certain cases to answer a cross cause, etc., applies to the case where pay such damage as might be due in the cross cause:—Held: (1) Admty. Ct. (Ireland) Act, 1867 (c. 114), s. 72 (second clause), under which the motion was made, applied only to cases in which the owner of one of the colliding ships was plff. in the principal cause; (2) though that sect. was applicable in terms to the cause in which the owners of the sunken vessel were plffs., the ct. ought not to exercise its discretion, since it could not suspend one of the causes without suspending the others, which it had no power to do, & the motion should be refused with costs.—THE ANNA LASSEN v. THE LAKE ST. CLAIR (1873), 7 I. L. T. 65.—IR.

Sect. 9.—Security for costs & security to answer counterclaim: Sub-sect. 2. Sect. 10: Sub-sect.

pltf. suing in rem is a British subject, resident in the jurisdiction.

A collision took place off the coast of Norfolk, between two British ships, the C. & the R., whereby the R. was sunk & lost. On the next day an action was instituted against the C. by the owner of the R.; the C. was arrested, but released on bail for £2,000. A cross-action was afterwards instituted by the owners of the C. in personam against the owner of the R. On a motion that proceedings against the C. & her owners be stayed, until security should be given by pltf. to answer the cross cause, & that the two causes should be heard together:—Held: (1) the two parties stood in different & very unequal positions: the one had proved substantial security, the other had only the personal responsibility of his opponent, which might be worthless; (2) the application was within the very purpose of the above sect., the intention of the Act being to put the two contending parties on a fair footing; (3) it made no difference that pltf. was within the jurisdiction of the ct., whatever powers of execution the ct. might possess, for such security could not be considered as at all equivalent to the security of bail; (4) the motion must be granted.—THE CAMEO (1862), Lush. 408; 5 L. T. 773; 1 Mar. L. C. 191.

1042. — Foreigner.—Where a cause of damage is instituted in the Admty. Ct. against a ship in respect of a collision in which pltf.'s ship is totally lost, & defts. institute a cross cause in personam against pltf. in respect of same collision, both parties being foreigners resident abroad, & pltf. decline to give security to answer judgment in the cross cause, or to enter an appearance, the ct. will apply Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 34, & order proceedings to be stayed in the principal cause until security is given in the cross cause.—THE CHARLIEH (1873), L. R. 4 A. & E. 120; 42 L. J. Adm. 70; 29 L. T. 404; 22 W. R. 63; 2 Asp. M. L. C. 121.

1043. — Amount of security.—When cross causes are instituted in respect of a collision, security cannot be required, under Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 34, for a greater amount than the value of the vessel of deft. from whom security is demanded, though that may have been sunk & the action against the owners be a personal one.—THE CALCUTTA (1869), 17 W. R. 744.

SECT. 10.—OTHER INTERLOCUTORY PROCEEDINGS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—DISCOVERY.

See, generally, DISCOVERY, INSPECTION & INTERROGATORIES.

Interrogatories.

(a) Since the Judicature Acts.

1044. Time for delivering interrogatories—Not before pleadings closed.—Information in preliminary act.]—There is no absolute right to deliver interrogatories as a party chooses.

In an action in the Admty. Div. for damages in respect of a collision pltf. will not be allowed before close of pleadings to deliver to defts. interrogatories seeking information which would be disclosed by defts.' preliminary act.—THE BIOLA (1876), 34 L. T. 185; 24 W. R. 524; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 125; 3 Char. Pr. Cas. 178.

Annotation:—Reid. The Radnorshire (1880), 49 L. J. P. 48.

1045. When allowed—Collision—Plaintiffs' crew lost.—In an action of damage arising out of a collision in which pltf.'s vessel was lost, with all of the crew who could give evidence as to the collision, pltf. were allowed to administer interrogatories to the owners of defts.' vessel as to the circumstances of the collision.—THE ISLE OF CYPRUS (1890), 15 P. D. 134; 59 L. J. P. 90; 63 L. T. 352; 38 W. R. 719; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 534.

1046. — Though information in preliminary act.—Interrogatories administered in a collision action, & relating to the circumstances of the collision, will not be struck out under R. S. C., Nov., 1878, r. 3, as scandalous, or unreasonably or vexatiously exhibited, because information sought to be obtained through them would for the most part be afforded by the preliminary acts.—THE RADNORSHIRE (1880), 5 P. D. 172; 49 L. J. P. 43; 43 L. T. 319; 29 W. R. 476; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 338.

1047. — —.—The barge B., belonging to defts., carrying a cargo of maize belonging to pltf., & in tow of the tug R., belonging to defts., came into collision in the Mersey with the s.s. M. Pltf., as owners of the cargo of maize, commenced an Admty. action in the Liverpool District Registry against defts. as owners of the B. & the R., & in the statement of claim alleged negligence in navigation of the barge. Defts. delivered a defence & counterclaim denying negligence & in the alternative, alleging that pltf.'s goods were being carried by defts. under a contract between pltf. & the Mersey Docks & Harbour Board, providing that the Board should not undertake any risks in connection with lighterage of the goods whether arising from their negligence or otherwise, & that the owners of the goods should protect themselves by insurance. By their counterclaim defts. claimed in respect of pltf.'s goods the due proportion in general average for losses, damages, & expenses incurred in & about the preservation of the B., her cargo & freight, from damage & loss during carriage of the goods. Pltf. applied for leave to deliver interrogatories to be answered by defts., relating to the circumstances of the collision such as were usually contained in the preliminary act required by C. C. R., 1903, O. 39, r. 32, in the case of an action for damage by collision between vessels, & including the following: 12. State if any & what vessel other than the M. caused or contributed to the collision or damage, & if any & what vessel hampered the navigation of the R. & the B. in any way & what way. 13. Do you allege any & what negligence or breach of any & what rule or rules against the M.? :—Held: from the nature of the case, the interrogatories required to be answered.—THE BERNARD, [1905] W. N. 73.

1048. Deposit—Numerous defendants.—Where in a co-ownership action, brought by a managing owner against his co-owners for an account to recover a balance, pltf. sought to interrogate defts., who were numerous, & to be dispensed from making the usual deposit, defts. contending a deposit ought to be made in respect of each deft. interrogated, the ct. ordered a deposit of £5 & 10s. for each additional folio over five & no more.—THE WHICKHAM (1885), 53 L. T. 236; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 479.

See, now, R. S. C., O. 31, r. 26.

(b) Before the Judicature Acts.

1049. When allowed—Before petition—Collision—Appearance denying ownership.—The Admty. Ct. has power to order interrogatories to be administered to deft. before pltf. has filed the petition. When a cause of collision was instituted in personam against deft. as owner of a ship, & deft. entered an appearance, alleging himself to be "improperly sued as one of the owners" of the ship, the Admty. Ct. allowed interrogatories to be administered by pltf. to deft. for the purpose of ascertaining the ownership before pltf.'s petition was filed.—THE MURILLO (1873), 28 L. T. 374; 1 Asp. M. L. C. 579. S. C. No. 1052, post.

1050. — To support plaintiffs' case—Equity practice followed.]—The practice of the Admty. Ct. as to interrogatories follows that of the cts. of equity rather than that of the common law cts.

In a cause of possession deft. may be compelled to answer interrogatories if they tend to support pltf's. case & a complete inquiry into the truth of the issues in the cause.—THE MARY (or ALEXANDRA) (1868), L. R. 2 A. & E. 319; 38 L. J. Adm. 29; 18 L. T. 891; 17 W. R. 551. S. C. No. 1055, post.

1051. — To discover owner.]—Where cargo has been destroyed by negligence of the master, discovery lies to ascertain who are the part-owners of the ship.—MORSE v. BUCKWORTH (1703), 2 Vern. 443; 23 E. R. 883.

Annotation:—Reid. Bowman v. Lygon (1792), 1 Anst. 1.

1052. — —.]—THE MURILLO, No. 1049, ante.

1053. — Though inquiring as to documents.]—Pltfs. in a cause applied to the ct. for leave to deliver certain interrogatories to deft. The application was made upon an affidavit of pltf's. & their solr. stating that the deponents believed pltf's. would derive material benefit from the discovery they sought, & that there was good cause of action upon the merits. The interrogatories asked, among other things, whether any & what documents relating to the cause were in possession of deft. Dft. opposed the application upon the ground that the ct. ought not to grant leave to pltf's. to deliver interrogatories for the discovery of documents without an affidavit by pltf's. of their belief that some document, to the production of which pltf's. were entitled, was in possession or power of deft. The ct. overruled the objection & granted the application.—THE MINNEHAHA (1870), L. R. 3 A. & E. 148; 23 L. T. 747; 19 W. R. 304; 3 Mar. L. C. 518. S. C. No. 1054, post.

1054. Answers—Sufficiency of—Information & belief.]—In answer to interrogatories delivered by pltf's., deft. stated upon affidavit: "I am personally wholly unacquainted with the facts & unable to answer any of them from my own knowledge, save as hereinafter appears." Upon an application for further & fuller answers:—Held: (1) the affidavit in answer was insufficient; (2) deft. was bound to answer according to his information & belief.—THE MINNEHAHA, No. 1053, ante.

1055. — Exposure to penalties.]—A deft. will not be compelled to answer an interrogatory if he swears his answer would subject him to the penalties of Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870 (c. 90).—THE MARY (or ALEXANDRA), No. 1050, ante.

B. Discovery of Documents.

(a) Since the Judicature Acts.

1056. Time for discovery—Before defence—Salvage—To obtain material for defence.]—THE LOCH MAREE (1895), cited in Roscoe, Admty. Practice, 3rd ed., p. 340.

1057. — Foreign ship.]—In an action in rem against a foreign ship whose owners are resident abroad, the ct. will make an order for discovery of documents against such owners, but will always allow a reasonable time for making the affidavit of documents.—THE EMMA (1876), 34 L. T. 742; 24 W. R. 587; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 218; 3 Char. Pr. Cas. 226.

1058. Salvage—Admissions by defendant—Tender—Costs.]—Pltf. in a salvage action in the Admty. Div., in which defts. admit the allegations in the statement of claim, & tender a sum in satisfaction, is nevertheless entitled to discovery & inspection of documents, but at his own risk & cost if such discovery & inspection should be held at the hearing to have been unnecessary.—THE MARIA (1879), 40 L. T. 295; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 94. S. C. No. 913, ante.

1059. Documents to be produced—Collision—Agreement compromising another action.]—In an action by the owners of goods against the owners of a ship, in which the goods had been carried, for damage done to the goods in a collision with another ship, defts. were ordered to produce (1) an agreement whereby they & the owners of the other ship had compromised cross-suits of damage instituted in the Admty. Ct., & (2) an average statement made on the basis of the agreement.—HUTCHINSON v. GLOVER (1875), 1 Q. B. D. 138; 45 L. J. Q. B. 120; 33 L. T. 605, 834; 24 W. R. 185; 3 Asp. M. L. 1060. — — Materials on which value based.]—Pltf's. lightship, while at her station in the Mersey, was run into & sunk by defts.' steamship. Defts. admitted liability, agreed to a reference, & applied for an order to inspect pltf's. books with a view to ascertaining the figures upon which pltf's. based the value they set upon their vessel:—Held: defts. were entitled to an order for production of the books forthwith, as the only material question was the value of the lightship at the date of the casualty, & it would assist defts. if, before going to the reference, they were in possession of figures relating to the original cost, & subsequent depreciation in value, of the lightship.—THE PACUARE, [1912] P. 179; 81 L. J. P. 143; 107 L. T. 252; 12 Asp. M. L. C. 222, C. A.

1061. Privilege—Depositions before receiver of wreck—Copies in hands of opposite party.]—In a damage action, arising out of a collision between a British & a foreign ship, copies of depositions made before the receiver of wreck by the crew of the British ship, & obtained from the Board of Trade by the owners of the British ship for purposes of the action, are privileged, & inspection of them cannot be obtained by the owners of the foreign ship, even although the Board of Trade, on the ground that no such depositions have been made by any member of the foreign crew, has refused to allow the foreign owners to see them.—THE PALERMO (1883), 9 P. D. 6; 53 L. J. P. 6; 49 L. T. 551; 32 W. R. 403; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 165, C. A.

1065. —.]—The Admty. Ct. will not interfere to compel production of a ship's papers, retained by an agent, upon the ex p. affidavit of the owners, the case not being an original cause of possession in which the ct. would have power to make an order for production of the ship's papers as incidental to the cause.—THE LUSITANO (1841), 1 Wm. Rob. 166.

1066. Power of court to inspect.—Where it appeared doubtful whether certain documents of which discovery was sought were material to the issue:—Held: they should be produced to the ct., & if, in the opinion of the ct., on consideration of the arguments & examination of the documents, it was considered fit & proper, inspection would be granted.—THE MCGREGOR LAIRD (1866), L. 1067. Privilege—H.M. ship in collision—Report to Admiralty privileged—Log book not privileged.—The owners of an English steamer sunk in a collision with H.M.S. B. instituted a cause of damage in the Admty. Ct. against the captain of the B. & the vice-admiral whose flag she was carrying at the time of the accident. By authority of the Admty. Lords Comrs., the Admty. proctor entered an appearance in the suit on behalf of defts., & plffs. made an application to the ct., on motion, to inspect (1) the log books of the B.; (2) certain reports relating to the collision which had been received at the Admty. from defts. prior to institution of the suit. The ct., on an affidavit of the secretary of the Admty. being filed stating that inspection of such reports would be prejudicial to the public service, refused to grant any part of the motion except so much of it as asked for inspection of the log books of the B.—*H.M.S. See, generally, PLEADING; PRACTICE & PROCEDURE.

A. Since the Judicature Acts.

1069. Rule as to.—The rule as to giving the opposite party particulars of any general allegation in pleadings ought to be the same in the Admty. as in the Queen's Bench Div.

Where, in an action in the Admty. Div. by cargo-owners against shipowners for delivery of cargo in a damaged condition, the statement of claim alleged that the damage was not occasioned by any of the excepted perils mentioned in the bill of lading under which the cargo had been shipped, but by the defective condition of the vessel, or negligence, or breach of duty of defts., or their servants:—Held: defts. were entitled to particulars of the defects rendering the vessel not fit to carry the cargo.—THE RORY (1882), 7 P. D. 117; 51 L. J. P. 73; 46 L. T. 757; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 534, C. A.

Annotation:—Consd. Kent Coal Concessions v. Duguid, [1910] 1 K. B. 904, C. A.

1070. —.]—In a cause of damage to cargo, the ct., contrary to the practice of the Admty. Ct., made an order for particulars of pltf.'s claim, so as to enable deft. to pay into ct. in respect of those items of the claim for which he was prepared to admit liability.—THE WETTERHORN (1876), 34 L. T. 587; 24 W. R. 323; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 168.

1071. Particulars ordered.—In a cause of damage where plffs.' vessel had become a total loss, the ct. ordered plffs. to deliver to defts. particulars of their claim notwithstanding defts. had not admitted liability for the damage proceeded for.—THE N. P. NIELSEN (1876), 34 L. T. 588; 24 W. R. 324; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 169.

1072. Inability to give—Effect of.—A vessel at anchor was run into & damaged by a vessel in motion. In an action for damages, the owners of the vessel at anchor delivered a statement of claim in which they alleged that those on the vessel colliding with them did not take proper & seamanlike measures to keep clear. A summons for particulars of the measures which should have been taken having been dismissed by the registrar:—Held: as plffs. could give no particulars, the allegation should be struck out, the judge at the trial having power to deal with negligence proved but not pleaded.—THE KANAWHA (1913), 108 L. T. 433; 12 Asp. M. L. C. 317. S. C. No. 907, post.

B. Before the Judicature Acts.

1073. Particulars not ordered—Negligence—Damage to cargo.—In a cause of damage to cargo the petition alleged that certain parcels of oil-cake were not delivered in good order & condition according to the terms of the bills of lading, & that the damages were the consequence of breaches of the contracts in the bills of lading, or that they were occasioned by negligence or breach of duty on the part of the master or crew. On motion by defts. to order plffs. to give particulars of the allegations:—Held: they were not bound to set out the particular acts or the character of the negligence which caused the damage.—THE FREEDOM (1869), L. R. 2 A. & E. 346; 38 L. J. Adm. 25; 20 L. T. 229, 1018; 18 W. R. 48; 3 Mar. L. C. 219, 261.

1075. Effect of—Position of defendant—Decision in action not binding.—When in a collision cause

PART III. SECT. 10, SUB-SECT. 3.
b. Order for third party notice—Alleged indemnity—Persons out of jurisdiction.
—There is no provision in the Rules of the Admty. Div. of the Exch. Ct. for an order for issue of third party notice under an alleged indemnity, especially if parties sought to be brought into ct. in that way reside out of jurisdiction.—MACKAY v. THE POLLUX (1908), 11 Ex. C. R. 210; 12 O. W. R. 751.—CAN.

deft. claims indemnity from a third party, & such third party appears & defends, the ct. may find original deft. solely to blame, notwithstanding he does not plead or appear at the trial, but unless proper issues are directed between deft. & the third party the ct. cannot make a decree deciding questions of liability between them. Semble: it is competent to the ct. to order such issues between deft. & a third party to be tried either at the same time as those between pltf. & deft. or after these have been decided. The position of deft. in the original action is the same whether a third party is cited or not.

A collision took place between the S. & the C., which was being towed by a tug. The owners of the S. brought an action against the owners of the C. alleging the collision to have been occasioned by negligence of the C. & her tug, or one of them. The owners of the C. obtained leave to serve notice on the owner of the tug that they claimed to be entitled to indemnity, & the ct. made an order that the owner of the tug should be at liberty to appear & defend, "being bound as between him & defts. by any decision the ct. may come to in this action as to the cause of collision." At the hearing the owner of the tug appeared, but defts. did not, & the judge of the Admty. Ct. pronounced that the collision was occasioned by default of the master & crew of the C., & condemned the owners in damages & costs, & declared they were not entitled to indemnity from the owner of the tug. On appeal:—Held: (1) the order giving the owner of the tug liberty to appear & defend did not put matters in train for trying any issue between him & defts.; (2) so much of the judgment as negated the right to indemnity by the owner of the tug must be struck out.—THE CARTSBUEN (1880), 5 P. D. 59; 41 L. T. 710; 28 W. R. 378; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 202, C. A.

For full anns., see PRACTICE & PROCEDURE.

1076. Notice set aside—Different questions involved.—Defts. in an action of damage in rem brought by owners of a vessel at anchor against a vessel which, at the time of collision, was in tow of a steam tug, obtained leave to serve a notice under R. S. C., O. 16, r. 18, upon the owners of the steam tug, claiming indemnity in respect of damage caused by the collision. On the statement of defence being delivered it appeared it was extremely probable questions would arise between defts. & the owners of the steam tug totally different & distinct from the questions raised in the action between pltf. & defts.:—Held: (1) assuming the ct. had jurisdiction to give directions as to the mode of having the questions in the action determined under R. S. C., O. 16, r. 21, the circumstances were such that the ct. must, in its discretion, decline to give any such directions; (2) the owners of the steam tug must be dismissed from the proceedings & defts. be condemned in costs occasioned by the owners having been brought in as third parties.—THE BIANCA (1883), 8 P. D. 91; 52 L. J. P. 56; 48 L. T. 440; 31 W. R. 954; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 60.

1077. — No contract of indemnity.—Pltf. commenced an action in rem for damages sustained by their steamer by collision with defts.' steamer. Defts. served a third party notice on the ship-repairers under whose control, it was alleged, defts.' steamer was at the time, & claimed to be indemnified by them against liability. The third parties appeared under protest, & defts. applied for directions as to mode of procedure:—Held: the application must be refused, & the third party notice set aside, as (without deciding whether defts. would have a right of action against the third parties in the event of defts.' vessel being found to blame) there was no contract, express or implied, with the third parties involving an indemnity within R. S. C., O. 16, r. 48.—THE JACOB CHRISTENSEN, [1895] P. 281; 64 L. J. P. 92; 72 L. T. 902; 8 Asp. M. L. C. 21; 11 R. 795.

SUB-SECT. 4.—EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES BEFORE EXAMINER.

See, generally, EVIDENCE; PRACTICE & PROCEDURE.

A. Since the Judicature Acts.

1078. Evidence before examiner—Correction of shorthand note.—In an Admty. action the transcript of the shorthand notes of the evidence of witnesses directed to be examined before an examiner becomes, on being filed in the registry, evidence in the cause, & such transcript cannot be taken off the file without an order of the ct. In a case where the transcript of the shorthand notes of the evidence of a witness examined before an examiner was shown to be incorrect, the judge in ct. ordered the transcript to be taken off the file & returned to the examiner for amendment. The costs of the amendment, not being due to the fault of either party, to be costs in the cause.—THE KNUTSFORD, [1891] P. 219; 64 L. T. 352; 39 W. R. 559; 7 Asp. M. L. C. 33.

B. Before the Judicature Acts.

1079. Examination of witness—Power of court to order.—In a cause of salvage the pilot on board the ship to which the service was rendered refused to make an affidavit for the salvors, & in the affidavit which he made on behalf of the owners he left out important facts:—Held: where a witness refused to make an affidavit or withheld facts to which he could depose, the ct. would summon & compel him to be examined by word of mouth, under Admty. Ct. Act, 1840 (c. 65), s. 7.—THE PRINCE OF WALES (1848), 6 Notes of Cases, 39; 12 Jur. 165.

Annotation:—Reid. The Genesee (1848), 12 Jur. 401.

1081. — No opportunity for cross-examination.—The surrogate had admitted A.'s libel in a cause of collision, & allowed witnesses to be examined thereon de bene esse, on affidavit that the ship was about to sail for Syria. She sailed in fact, & no opportunity was given to cross-examine. The ct. allowed B.'s allegation in reply to such libel to be brought in & witnesses to be examined & cross-examined thereon, but ordered that the cause should not be heard till A. should have submitted the witnesses on his libel for cross-examination.—THE CHANCE (1857), Sw. 294; 30 L. An application to have a witness reproduce 1 who had left London for Liverpool immediately upon completion of his examination was refused.—THE GIPSEY (1842), 1 Wm. Rob. 370.

1083. Commissioner's refusal to proceed—New commission.]—An application was made to the ct. to issue a new commission for examination of witnesses, on a suggestion that the former comrs. had not executed their office; that one comr. had absented himself, & the other had declined to act alone:—Held: a new commission would be granted, but solely upon the ground of the comrs.' refusal to proceed. Semble: the usual practice if one of the comrs. does not attend is that notice is given to both comrs., & if one absents himself after that notice, the other is at liberty to proceed alone, the powers under the commission being given jointly & severally.—THE CERES (1800), 3 Ch. Rob. 128.

SUB-SECT. 5.—DISCONTINUANCE.

A. Since the Judicature Acts.

1084. Notice of discontinuance—What is.]—An informal letter substantially discontinuing an action in rem is sufficient notice within O. 22, r. 1, of Jud. Act, 1875 (c. 77).—THE POMMERANIA, No. 844, ante.

Annotation:—Apld. Spencer v. Watts (1889), 5 T. L. R. 570.

1085. Effect of discontinuance.]—Where pltf. in an action, after succeeding in an interlocutory application, the costs of which are made costs in the cause, gives notice of discontinuance of the action, under R. S. C., O. 23, deft. is entitled to his costs, including costs of such application.

Pltfs. commenced an action of possession to obtain the certificate of registry of a ship. Before pleadings were filed the ct., upon motion, ordered the certificate to be delivered to pltfs. who discontinued the action:—Held: pltfs. must pay the costs.—THE ST. OLAF (1877), 2 P. 1087. —.]—An action for collision commenced by resps., owners of the K., against the owners of the A., was discontinued by consent. In the order, & in the agreement signed by the solrs. on which it was founded, the action was expressed to be discontinued "on the ground of inevitable accident." In a subsequent action for the same collision by appls., owners of the cargo of the K., against the owners of the A., both ships were found to blame, & defts. having obtained a decree limiting their liability, paid the sum for which they were liable into ct. Resps., with consent of the owners of the A., obtained an order setting aside the order for discontinuance, & made a claim against the sum in ct.:—Held: (1) the agreement & order for discontinuance did not release or extinguish resps.' claims or bar them from further proceedings; (2) they were entitled to prove against the fund.—THE ARDANDHU (THE KRONPRINZ) (1887), 12 App. Cas. 256; 56 L. B. Before the Judicature Acts.

1089. Abandonment of suit—Effect on second suit.]—Parties who have abandoned a former suit instituted by them to compel payment of certain alleged bottomry bonds will not be permitted, unless on strong grounds shown, to carry on proceedings a second time to enforce a demand founded on the same bonds.—THE FORITUDO (1815), 2 Dods. 58.

SECT. 11.—DEFAULT ACTIONS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—DEFAULT OF APPEARANCE.

1090. Practice followed—Former practice.]—Proceedings by default in Admty. actions in rem are regulated by the practice which prevailed in the Admty. Ct. immediately before the passing of Jud. Act, 1875 (c. 77).—THE POLYMEDE (1876), 1 P. D. 121; 34 L. T. 367; 24 W. R. 256; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 124.

See R. S. C., O. 13, rr. 12a, 13.

1091. Affidavit of service.]—Pltf. in an undefended bottomry action must, before he can obtain judgment by default, in addition to filing an affidavit of service in the registry, as provided by R. S. C., O. 13, r. 2, annex thereto the original writ.—THE EPPUS (1883), 49 L. T. 604; 32 W. R. 154; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 180.

1092. — Dispensed with.]—On July 6, 1904, pltf., on the order of the master of the French ship B., then lying at North Shields, supplied necessities. The ship was sold in another action, & on Dec. 6, pltf. issued a specially indorsed writ in rem against the B., or the proceeds of sale of the vessel then in ct., claiming £28 for the necessities supplied, giving particulars & naming £3 3s., or such sum as might be allowed on taxation, for costs. The writ was served on the registrar, who indorsed it with an acceptance of service. On Dec. 30, pltf. filed a notice of trial for Jan. 16, 1905, & also an affidavit verifying the claim with a copy of the account annexed. The action came on by way of motion for judgment by default against the proceeds of the vessel, & a clerk to pltf.'s solr. was called as a witness to give the date when the writ was served on the registrar:—Held: an affidavit of service of the writ might be dispensed with.—THE BERENGERE, No. 681, ante.

1093. Statement of claim dispensed with—Full particulars on writ.]—Where pltf. in a default action in rem for necessities had complied with all formalities entitling him to judgment save service of a statement of claim, but it appeared the writ, though not specially indorsed, contained particulars of the claim, the ct. gave judgment for pltf.—THE HULDA (1887), 58 L. 1095. — Notice of trial.—In order to obtain judgment by default of appearance in an action in rem under R. S. C., O. 13, r. 12, the 10 days stated in O. 21, r. 6, must elapse, & notice of trial under O. 36, r. 11, must be filed in the registry, unless on a previous application under O. 64, r. 9, notice of trial has been dispensed with, or the time for giving such notice abridged.—THE Avenir (1884), 9 P. See, now, R. S. C., O. 13, r. 13.

SUB-SECT. 2.—DEFAULT OF DEFENCE.

1097. Mode of trial.—R. S. C., O. 29, r. 2, as to signing judgment in default of pleading, does not apply to proceedings in rem. Where in an action in rem for a liquidated sum for necessities supplied deft. makes default in delivering his statement of defence, pltf. cannot at once sign final judgment, but must bring the case on for hearing before the judge upon affidavit.—THE SFACTORIA (1876), 2 P. 1098. — Motion for judgment.—As under R. S. C., O. 13, r. 12, default actions in rem are to proceed as if deft. had appeared, O. 27, r. 11, as to setting down an action on motion for judgment where deft. makes default in pleading, applies to such actions & judgment therein is to be obtained under that rule. Where in an action in rem for collision deft. makes default, pltf. should, on moving for judgment, support his claim by affidavit.—THE SPERO EXPECTO (1883), 49 L. T. 749; 32 W. R. 524; 5 Asp. M. 1099. — Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93)—Interlocutory judgment—Assessment of damages.—An action for damages under the above Act was commenced in the Admty. Div., & no application was made to transfer the cause to any other Div.:—Held: upon default in pleading by defts., pltf's. were entitled, under R. S. C., O. 27, r. 4, to enter interlocutory judgment & to have damages assessed & apportioned by a jury.—THE ORWELL (1888), 13 P. D. 80; 57 L. J. P. 61; 59 L. T. 312; 36 W. R. 703; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 309.

1100. ——An action in rem having been brought against a ship to recover damages for loss of life caused by a collision at sea, the owners filed an admission of liability, praying a reference to the registrar & merchants to assess the damages. Pltf's. took out a summons for an order giving them leave to enter interlocutory judgment & to have the damages assessed by a sheriff's jury. The judge made an order that the action should be tried by a judge with a jury in the Admty. Div.:—Held: (1) the action was an action under the above Act; (2) the order was within the discretion of the judge, & was one with which the C. A. ought not to interfere.—THE KWASIND (1915), 84 L. J. P. 102, C. A.

SECT. 12.—MODE AND PLACE OF TRIAL.

SUB-SECT. 1.—SINCE THE JUDICATURE ACTS.

1101. Mode of trial—Jury.—Semble: an action may be tried, & the issues of fact therein decided, by a jury in the Admty. Div. as well as in the common law divs. of the High Ct.—THE SEAHAM, No. 874, ante.

1102. — Discretion.—Pltf. in an action in rem for disbursements in the Admty. Div. applied for an order that the action should be tried by a judge with a jury:—Held: (1) R. S. C., O. 36, r. 6, gave no absolute right to a jury in actions which before the passing of Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), would have been tried without a jury; (2) the case fell within O. 36, rr. 4, 7a; (3) the judge had a discretionary power only to allow trial by a jury.—THE TEMPLE BAR (1885), 11 P. D. 6; 55 L. J. P. 1; 53 L. T. 904; 34 W. R. 68; 2 T. L. R. 73; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 509, C. A.

1103. Place of trial—Change of.—In an action against the owners of the A. by the consignees of a cargo of corn shipped at Baltimore for Liverpool on board the A., which, as they alleged, arrived in a damaged condition, pltf's. fixed the place of trial at Liverpool but the owners of the A. obtained an order removing the action to London on the ground of convenience. On appeal:—Held: the appeal must be dismissed.—THE ASSYRIAN (1888), 4 T. L. R. 694, C. A.

SUB-SECT. 2.—BEFORE THE JUDICATURE ACTS.

1104. Mode of trial—Case sent to court of common law for jury.—The Admty. Ct. has power to send a case to be tried by a jury before a ct. of common law, but should exercise this power only in important cases.—THE FLECHA, No. 320, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 320, ante.

PART III. SECT. 11, SUB-SECT. 2.

1098 l. Mode of trial—Motion for judgment—Order for sale of res.—In Admty. actions in rem where deft. appears, but delivers no statement of defence, pltf. must take out a summons to fix time & mode of trial, & on proof of his claim at the trial may get an order for sale of the res under arrest.—McCARRIGH v. SCHOONER BELLE (OWNERS) (1894), 28 L. L. T. 50.—IR.

b. Power to dispute plaintiff's claim.—Deft. in a suit for seaman's wages, who has appeared, but not pleaded, will not be permitted to dispute pltf.'s claim.—THE HELEN (1871), 5 L. L. T. 23. IR.

PART III. SECT. 12, SUB-SECT. 1.

1101 l. Mode of trial—Jury.—Deft. in an Admty. action who wishes to have the case tried by a jury must obtain an order to have it so tried on the hearing of the summons to fix the time & mode of trial. It is too late to make any objection or application on this ground at the hearing of the action.—ANGLO-

AMERICAN TELEGRAPH CO. v. DODD & POWER, p. 142, b, ante.—IR.

PART III. SECT. 12, SUB-SECT. 2.

1104 l. Mode of trial—Jury.—Although Admty. Ct. (Ireland) Act, 1867 (c. 114), empowers the judge of the Admty. Ct. to have questions of fact tried by a jury before himself, yet, by an omission in the Act, the judge has no power given to him to summon a jury, & therefore no such trial can be had.—THE ANDERIDA (1869), 20 L. T. 180.—IR.

SECT. 13.—NOTICE OF TRIAL.

See R. S. C., O. 36; PRACTICE & PROCEDURE.

SECT. 14.—THE HEARING.

SUB-SECT. 1.—CONDUCT OF ACTION.

A. Since the Judicature Acts.

1105. Right to begin—Admission that defendant's ship partly to blame—Plaintiff to begin.]—In a collision case pltf. delivered a statement of claim alleging that the collision was solely caused by negligent navigation of defts.' vessel. Defts. delivered a defence in which they denied this & alleged it was caused solely by negligence of those on pltf.' vessel. Subsequently the solrs. for defts. wrote to the solrs. for pltf. that, though they relied on the allegations of fault made against pltf.' vessel, they admitted the collision was contributed to by fault on the part of defts.' vessel. At the trial counsel for pltf. submitted that, as defts. had admitted they were negligent, the burden was on defts. to prove negligence on the pltf.' part, & that defts. should begin:—Held: as pltf. alleged defts. were solely to blame, & defts. only admitted they were in part to blame, the burden was on pltf. to begin, if they still sought to prove defts. were alone to blame.—THE CADEBY, [1909] P. 257; 78 L. J. P. 85; 101 L. T. 48; 25 T. L. R. 630; 11 Asp. M. L. C. 285.

1106. Pilot—Charged with negligence—Option to give evidence.]—At the trial of an action of damage by collision, where the defence admitted that the cause of collision was negligent navigation of defts.' ship, but pleaded compulsory pilotage & alleged that the only negligence was that of the pilot, both sides closed their cases without calling the pilot as a witness:—Held: in such circumstances the pilot should be called by the ct. & offered the option of giving evidence on his own behalf, subject to cross-examination.—THE CARDIFF, [1909] P. 183; 78 L. J. P. 110; 25 T. L. R. 387.

B. Before the Judicature Acts.

Annotation:—Consd. Thomson v. S. E. Ry. Co. (1882), 30 W. R. 537, C. A.

1108. ——— Right to cross-examine.]—On suits by rival salvors being heard together the witnesses called on behalf of one set of salvors will be liable to cross-examination, first on behalf of rival pltf., & then on behalf of defts.—THE PHILADELPHIA (1863), Brown & Lush, 28.

1109. ———.]—Rival salvors have a right to cross-examine each other's witnesses, but only on a point on which they are at issue.—THE MOROCCO, Nos. 862, 1107, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 1107, ante.

1110. ——— Consolidation—Separate counsel.]—When the interests of one pltf. in a consolidated salvage suit are adverse to the interests of other pltf., separate counsel on his behalf may be heard at the hearing of the consolidated cause.—THE SCOUT (1872), L. R. 3 A. & E. 512; 41 L. J. Adm. 42; 26 L. T. 371; 20 W. R. 617; 1 Asp. M. L. C. 258. S. C. No. 865, ante.

C. Refd. The Duke of Manchester (1846), 4 Notes of Cases, 375; The Christiana (1849), 7 Notes of Cases, 2.

1112. Collision action—Plaintiff's crew all lost—Plaintiff not bound to call witnesses from defendant's vessel.]—In a collision case, where all the crew of pltf.'s vessel are drowned, the defence being that pltf.'s vessel showed no lights, pltf. is not bound to call witnesses from deft.'s vessel.—THE ALEPPO (1865), 35 L. J. Adm. 9; 14 L. T. 228; 2 Mar. L. C. 131. S. C. No. 1181, post.

SUB-SECT. 2.—BURDEN OF PROOF.

A. Since the Judicature Acts.

1113. Collision action—Negligence.]—When a collision occurs between a dumb barge without lights & a steamer on a dark night in the Thames there is no presumption of law that the steamer is to blame. It is in all cases necessary for those who allege negligence, causing a collision on the part of another vessel, to prove it.—THE SWALLOW (1877), 36 L. T. 231; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 371, C. A. S. C. Nos. 1623, 1686, post.

1114. — Compulsory pilotage—Shifting of burden.]—In an action for damage by collision, as soon as defts. have shown that a pilot whose employment was compulsory was on board the wrongdoing vessel, & his orders were obeyed, the burden of proving that negligence arising from the act of some other person is a cause which contributed to the collision rests on pltf., even though defts. have only given testimony of the pilot as evidence.—THE MARATHON (1878), 48 L. J. P. 17.

Burden of proof, generally, in collision actions where the defence of compulsory pilotage is relied upon, see, further, SHIPPING & NAVIGATION.

B. Before the Judicature Acts.

1115. Salvage action—Plaintiff's right to begin.]—In a salvage suit, the right to begin does not shift with the burden of proof, but is almost universally with claimant.—THE MAGDALEN (1861), 31 L. J. P. M. & A. 22.

1116. — Proof of salvage agreement.]—Where, in salvage, an agreement is set up, the burden of proving such agreement is on those relying on it; & without pronouncing the written agreement a forgery, the ct. will decide against it, as on failure of proof unless clearly established by evidence.—THE RESULTATET (1853), 17 Jur. 353.

PART III. SECT. 14, SUB-SECT. 1.—B.

a. Duty of court to decline jurisdiction.]—In an action by a seaman, on a special contract for wages:—Held: although resp. were bound to have objected to the jurisdiction in limine, by appearing under protest, still, where the ct. was of opinion that it had no jurisdiction, it would not only entertain the objection at the hearing, but was bound itself to raise it.—THE CITY OF PETERSBURG, No. 402, ill, ante.—CAN.

PART III. SECT. 14, SUB-SECT. 2.—A.

1113 i. Collision action—Conduct of defendant—Running down ship at anchor.]

—It appeared from the preliminary acts that deft. ship was under way & pltf. ship at anchor at the time of collision:—Held: the onus was on deft. ship to show that the collision was not caused by her negligence. The Annot Lyle (1886), 11 P. D. 114, refd. WARD & PEMBERTON v. THE YOSEMITE (1894), 3 B. C. R. 311; 4 Ex. C. R. 341.—CAN.

1120. — Loss of salvingship—Presumption.—Where the salvor's vessel is injured or lost whilst engaged in the salvage service the presumption is that the injury or loss was caused by the necessities of the service, & the burden of proof is on defts. alleging that the loss was caused by the default of the salvors.—THE THOMAS BLYTH (1860), Lush. 16.

Annotation:—Apld. The Baku Standard v. The Angele, [1901] A. C. 549, P. C.

1121. Collision action—General rule.—In collision cases, as an ordinary rule, the burden of proof lies on pltf.—THE HARRIETT (1841), 7 L. T. 441. S. C. No. 1150, post.

For full anns., see SHIPPING & NAVIGATION.

1127. — Inevitable accident—Sole defence.—In a cause of damage defts., by their pleadings, made no charge against pltf., but only denied generally the averments in the petition, & pleaded inevitable accident:—Held: defts. ought to begin.—THE THOMAS LEA (1868), 38 L. J. Adm. 37; 20 L. T. 1017; 3 Mar. L. C. 261.

Annotation:—Fold. The Otter (1874), L. R. 4 A. & E. 203.

1129. — — — — ——In all causes of damage, the burden being upon pltf. to establish negligence against defts., pltf. must begin; & this rule applies to cases where the only defence is inevitable accident & pltf.'s vessel is at anchor, contrary to the former practice of the Admty. Ct.—THE OTTER (1874), L. R. 4 A. & E. 203; 30 L. T. 43; 22 W. R. 557; 2 Asp. M. L. C. 208.

For full anns., see SHIPPING & NAVIGATION.

1130. — — — — — Shifting of burden.—Where in a cause of collision the defence of inevitable accident is raised, the burden of proof lies in the first instance upon pltf., who must establish that blame attaches to the vessel proceeded against. The burden attaches to defts. only after a prima facie case of negligence & want of due seamanship has been shown against them.—THE MAREPSIA (1872), L. R. 4 P. C. 212; 8 Moo. P. C. C. N. S. 468; 26 L. T. 333; 1 Asp. M. L. C. 261; 17 E. R. 387, P. C. S. C. No. 927, ante; No. 1305, post.

1131. — Plaintiff's negligence.—A vessel proceeding in a cause of collision, & alleging herself to have been in stays at the time of collision, & therefore helpless, is bound to prove in the first instance such was the fact. The burden of proof then shifts, & the other side must show that the collision was occasioned by the vessel proceeding being improperly put in stays, or was an inevitable accident.—THE SEA NYMPH (1860), Lush. 23.

1132. — Compulsory pilotage.—In a cause of collision, deft., relying upon the statutory exemption given to the owner of the ship to blame, where the collision is "occasioned by default of the pilot" employed by compulsion of law, is bound to prove his case in the strictest way.

Defts.' vessel was charged with improperly starboarding. Defts. denied starboarding, & gave evidence that the helm was ported only, & by order of the pilot; they also pleaded the statutory exemption. The ct. found the helm was improperly starboarded, & the collision thereby occasioned:—Held: defts. not having proved any order by the pilot to starboard had failed to establish their exemption under the Act.—THE SCHWALBE (1861), Lush. 239; 14 Moo. 1133. — — — — ——If a licensed pilot is on board a vessel, in order to exempt the owner from liability for damage occasioned by collision, the onus probandi lies upon such owner to establish that the collision was occasioned solely by negligence of the pilot; & it is the duty of the owner relying upon such defence to call the pilot as a witness.—THE CARRIER DOVE (1863), Brown. & Lush. 113; 2 Moo. 1121 i. Collision action—Violation of sailing rules.—Where a charge of violating M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 296, is made the onus probandi is on the vessel making the charge.—THE CORNELIA & OSPREY (1861), 1 Old. 772.—CAN.

1131 i. — Plaintiff's negligence.—It is well settled that the promovent in a suit of collision should, before he has completed his case, show that he did not himself cause or contribute to the mischief of which he complains, & that he did everything in his power to escape or alleviate it; if he should fail in either requirement, his petition will be dismissed, with costs.—THE JACOB (1860), 5 Ir. b. Damage to cargo—Excepted perils in bill of lading.—In a cause of damage to cargo, the fact of damage being admitted as well as proved & pltf. having given evidence, which, if un rebutted, would establish that due care of the cargo was not taken by deft.'s servants, it lies upon deft. to sustain affirmatively a statement in his answer that such damage was the consequence of the excepted perils in his bill of lading.—THE FORTUNA (1872), 6 L. 1135. — Conduct of defendant—Shifting of burden.]—When a collision takes place which might endanger life on one ship, it is the duty of the other vessel to stay by until the extent of the danger is ascertained, & if she does not stay by the burden of proof that the collision did not take place by her default is thrown upon the owners.—THE QUEEN OF THE ORWELL (1863), 7 L. 1148. — — — — —.]—Where it appeared on the pleadings in a cause of damage by collision that at the time of collision pltf.'s vessel, a fishing smack, was riding attached to her nets, & stationary with a single white light exhibited, but one of the charges made against her by defts. in their answer was that she improperly neglected to exhibit the lights required by Sea Fisheries Act, 1868 (c. 45), two lights, one over the other:—Held: as it must be implied the neglect to exhibit such lights contributed to the collision, pltf. ought to begin.—THE BOTTLE IMP (1873), 42 L. J. Adm. 48; 28 L. T. 286; 21 W. R. 600; 1 Asp. M. L. C. 571.

1149. — — — — — Denial of identity.]—In a cause of collision, where deft. admits in the pleadings that his ship when under way ran into a vessel at anchor, but denies the vessel at anchor was pltf.'s vessel, pltf. must begin & prove his case.—THE EARL OF LEICESTER (1863), Brown. & Lush. 188.

1150. Custom—Burden of proof.]—The burden of proof lies on those who allege a particular custom in derogation of ordinary maritime law. They must prove the legality & existence of the custom.—THE HARRIETT, No. 1121, ante.

SUB-SECT. 3.—EVIDENCE.

See, generally, EVIDENCE.

A. Since the Judicature Acts.

1151. Entry by deceased mate—Not admissible.]—Two vessels, the H. & the G., came into collision on Saturday; on Monday morning the mate of the H. made an entry in the ship's log of the circumstances of collision. The master of the H. afterwards made a deposition relating to the collision before a receiver of wreck, under M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 448. On the hearing of an action of damage brought against the H. by the owners of the G. it was proved the master & mate of the H. had died, & it was sought to render the entry in the log & the deposition evidence on behalf of the H.:—Held: the documents were not admissible.—THE HENRY (HARRY) COXON (1878), 3 P. D. 156; 47 L. J. P. 83; 38 L. T. 819; 27 W. R. 263; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 18. S. C. No. 1162, post.

Annotation:—Consd. Ward v. Pitt, Lloyd v. Powell Duffryn Steam Coal Co., [1913] 2 K. B. 130, C. A.

1152. Engineer's log—Admissible.]—The engineer's log-book kept on board a steamer is admissible as evidence against the shipowner.—THE EARL OF DUMFRIES (1885), 10 P. D. 31; 54 L. J. P. 7; 51 L. T. 906; 33 W. R. 568; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 342.

B. Before the Judicature Acts.

(a) Log Books.

1153. Convoy's log—Admissible.]—To prove the time of the sailing of a ship under convoy, the log-book of the man-of-war which convoyed the fleet is evidence.—D'IRSAELI v. JOWETT (1795), 1 Esp. 427. Annotation:—Distd. Rundle v. Beaumont (1828), 4 Bing. 537.

1154. Lightship log—Admissible.]—The Admty. Ct. will admit in evidence a lightship log, on production by the officer of the Trinity House in whose custody such logs are kept, without requiring the evidence of the person who made the entries.—THE MARIA DAS DORES (1863), Brown. & Lush. 27; 32 L. J. P. M. & A. 163; 7 L. T. 838; 11 W. R. 500; 1 Mar. L. C. 309.

1155. — — — — —.]—It has always been the rule in the Admty. Ct., & the rule has been approved by the P. C., that properly kept logs containing entries as to the form & direction of the wind at places not too distant from the place of collision should be admitted in evidence.—THE WITHAM v. THE JOHN & ELIZA (1864), Holt, Adm. 92.

1157. Ship's log—Admissible against person making entries.]—In a suit for wages, a log book, not pleaded but asserted to be in the mariner's handwriting, was allowed to be brought in by the owners.—THE MALTA (1828), 2 Hag. Adm. 158.

Annotation:—Expld. & N.F. The City of Manchester (1879), 5 P. D. 3.

—]—In a cause of collision, the log should be brought in as a document common to the ct.—THE EUROPA, No. 744, ante.

1159. —Effect of erasure.]—In a cause of collision in the Admty. Ct., the log book of one of the ships, produced in evidence, contained an erasure as to the wind at the time of the collision, but the alteration was rather adverse to the case on behalf of the ship:—Held: the erasure was immaterial, it being adverse to the case on behalf of the ship.—THE CONSTITUTION, No. 1652, post.

(b) Depositions before Receiver of Wreck, etc.

1160. Not admissible.]—In an action for collision between two ships deft.'s counsel, in order to show that pltf.'s ship was in fault, proposed to put in evidence the statement of pltf.'s captain made on oath under M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 448, before a receiver of wreck:—Held: such evidence was inadmissible, notwithstanding s. 449 of the above Act, as the question as to which ship caused damage to the other was not a matter which the receiver had power to examine into under s. 448 of the Act.—NOTHARD (NORTHARD) v. PEPPER (1864), 17 C. B. N. S. 39; 4 New Rep. 331; 10 L. T. 782; 10 Jur. N. S. 1077; 2 Mar. L. C. 52; 144 E. R. 16.

Annotation:—Consd. Ward v. Pitt, Lloyd v. Powell Duffryn Steam Coal Co., [1913] 2 K. B. 130, C. A.

1163. Use for cross-examination—Proof—Certified copy not admissible.]—A certified copy of the examination taken before a receiver of wreck under M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), ss. 448, 449, cannot be used to discredit the master in the witness-box—the original only can be admitted.

A statement of the appearer as to how the collision happened, or who was to blame for it, is not evidence against the owners, although if the appearer makes subsequently an inconsistent statement, it may be used to impeach his general credibility.—THE EMPEROR, THE ZEPHYR (1864), Holt, Adm. 24; 12 W. R. 890.

Certified copy admissible.]—In a cause of damage, though it may be intended to contradict a witness as to statements made by him before a receiver of wreck, it is not necessary to subpoena him to produce the original deposition as a certified copy will be sufficient for the purpose.—

THE OSCAR (1864), 10 L. T. 789; 12 W. R. 872; 2 Mar. L. C. 42. S. C. No. 1530, post.

Annotation:—Refd. The Emperor, The Zephyr (1864), 12 W. R. 890.

1165. Extract from police record—Not admissible.]—In an action for wages an extract from the police record at St. Helena (beginning with entries in the ship's log), which gave a minute of proceedings before the magistrates under which pltf. had been detained to be sent home in a ship of war, is not admissible as evidence of the misconduct of pltf.—THE SUSAN (1829), 2 Hag. Adm. 229 n.

1166. Report of inquiry—Coroner's jury—Not admissible.]—A copy of the report of the stipendiary magistrate & assessor printed by order of the House of Commons is not evidence in the Admty. Ct., nor are the sayings or doings of a coroner's jury.—THE MANGERTON (1856), Sw. 120; 27 L. T. O. S. 207.

(c) Admissions and Protests.

1167. General rule—Declarations of master—Declarations of mate.]—The master's declarations are admissible evidence against the owners of a vessel, because he is their agent, but those of the mate & seamen are not. The master's declaration cannot be rejected on the ground that his knowledge of the fact of which he spoke was derived from hearsay, though it may have but little weight. The principle of "declarations by agents" cannot be extended to the mate of a vessel, even when in charge of it.—THE ACTÆON, No. 685, ante; No. 1205, post.

Annotation:—Refd. The Europa (1849), 13 Jur. 856.

1169. Declarations of helmsman—Not admissible.]—In a cause of collision, the libel pleaded declarations of the helmsman of the ship proceeded against:—Held: the declarations could not be pleaded, the helmsman not being the owners' agent.—THE EUROPA (1849), 14 L. T. O. S. 66; 13 Jur. 856.

1170. Protest—Production—Desirability of.]—The rule of the Admty. Ct. is that in cases of both salvage & collision the protest should always be produced for the following reasons: (1) because every protest ought to be made recenti facto, & contain an account of the transaction when the facts are fresh in the memories of the witnesses; (2) the protest is made alio intuitu, the first & primary object of the protest being ordinarily to found a claim against the underwriters for damage done, the object of the parties being to state all the facts, & everything which has happened to the ship, so as to lay the foundation of the most extensive claim.—THE EMMA (1844), 2 Wm. Rob. 315; 3 Notes of Cases, 114; 4 L. T. O. S. 17; 8 Jur. 651.

1171. —Collision action—How far admissible.]—In a cause of collision the protest of the master of a foreign vessel, which being in distress was in tow by the vessel run foul of, is res inter alios acta, & not admissible evidence where no necessity exists.—THE BETSEY CAINES (1826), 2 Hag. Adm. 28.

1173. — Salvage action.]—In salvage cases the captain's protest is preferable to affidavit for ascertaining the facts of a case, & ought always to be produced. It is often so made, with a view to found a claim against underwriters, that it supports the case of the salvors.—THE ALEXANDER BRANELL (1841), 7 L. T. 866.

1177. — Importance of—Report before receiver of droits.]—The protest is always an important document. It is the duty of the notary public who draws it to make it a perfect one.

Report of the facts taken before the receiver of droits, also another important document, should also be carefully drawn, & the copies be correct.—THE HEDWIG (1853), 1 Ecc. & Ad. 19.

Annotation:—Apld. THE RACER (1874), 30 L. T. 904.

1178. — — — — —]—Where salvage services are rendered to a ship, a protest ought to be speedily noted & extended after the ship is in safety, & it will be received by the ct. with great attention.—THE JAMES MCQUEEN (1855), 7 L. T. 866; 4 W. R. 91.

(d) Evidence as to Lights.

1179. Affirmative evidence preferred.]—Affirmative evidence is preferred to negative evidence as to lights being hoisted.—THE HOPE v. THE RELIANCE (1857), 5 L. T. 147.

1180. S. P. THE CHARLES v. THE PROGRESS (1858), 5 L. T. 147.

1181. Previous order as to lights—Admissible—Not conversations as to lights.]—Evidence of an order as to the lights given 12 hours before collision is admissible, but not of conversations with respect to them.—THE ALEPPO, No. 1112, ante.

(e) Miscellaneous Points.

1182. Collision action—Presumption that master acted correctly.]—In cases of collision, where evidence on both sides is conflicting & nicely balanced, the ct. will be guided by the probabilities of the respective cases which are set up; a priori the presumption is the master of a vessel would do what was right & follow the regular & correct course of navigation.—THE MARY STEWART (1844), 2 Wm. Rob. 244; 2 L. T. O. S. 375.

1183. — Opinion as to time.]—A mere difference of opinion as to time would not throw discredit on the evidence of a witness in a case of collision.—THE IDE v. THE KRON PRINS ERNST AUGUSTE (1856), 6 L. T. 581.

1184. — Opinion as to distance.]—It being impossible to measure distances with precision at night, the ct. does not bind the witnesses to precise words in regard to such particulars.—THE SHANNON (1842), 1 Wm. Rob. 463; 6 L. T. 581; 7 Jur. 380. S. C. No. 1302, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 1423, post.

1186. Proof of ownership—So described in solicitor's undertaking to appear.]—In an action against the owners of a ship, it is sufficient prima facie evidence of ownership to put in an undertaking to appear for them given before commencement of the action by the person who subsequently acted as their attorney in defending it, in which he describes them as owners, without further proof of agency.—MARSHALL v. CLIFF (1815), 4 Camp. 133.

Annotation:—Refd. Wagstaff v. Wilson (1832), 4 B. & Ad. 339.

1187. Evidence of nautical opinion—Admissible.]—Nautical witnesses may be asked their opinion as to the collision being avoidable by care, truth of the facts being admitted.—DURNFORD v. TRATTLES (1843), 5 L. T. 61.

For full anns. see PLEADING.

1188. — Not admissible.]—The ct. will not receive as evidence the affidavits of persons, professing to be skilled in nautical affairs, as to their opinion upon any case.—THE NO (1853), 1 Ecc. & Ad. 184.

1189. General information made use of.]—It is the custom of the Admty. Ct., where general information has been acquired in one case, to use it in others.—THE RAPID (1854), 3 L. T. 123.

1190. Private inquiries by court.]—Where a question arose in a salvage case as to the nature of the ship's anchorage, the ct. in order to aid its judgment, made private inquiry of persons intimately acquainted with the spot & having nautical experience.—THE HARRINGER (1852), 8 L. T. 612; 16 Jur. 729.

For full anns., see SHIPPING & NAVIGATION.

1191. Further evidence required — Transaction suspicious—Bottomry.]—In a bottomry case, where the pleadings & evidence are so far defective that the ct. cannot pronounce upon the validity or invalidity of the bond, & the transaction is in some respects suspicious, it will direct further evidence to be produced for its own satisfaction.—THE BONAPARTE (1849), 13 Jur. 1059.

For full anns., see SHIPPING & NAVIGATION.

1192. Witness not to attend consultation—Collision.]—It is a rule of the Admty. Ct. that a witness should not attend a previous consultation with proctor & counsel in a collision cause.—THE JANE BURROW v. THE SOUTHAMPTON (1852), 11 L. T. 159.

1193. Statements signed by persons on board — Collision.]—The obtaining of signatures to statements from persons who were on a ship which has been lost in a collision while they are on board the other ship, the statements being written by other persons, is to be deprecated. In the circumstances of the case:—Held: such statement, though signed by the captain, was not to be taken into consideration.—THE JANE v. THE GREAT EASTERN (1864), Holt, Adm. 167.

For full anns., see SHIPPING & NAVIGATION.

1194. Proof of nationality.]—To prove that a ship is a British ship, it is not necessary to produce the register or a copy thereof; it is sufficient to show orally that she belongs to British owners & carries the British flag.—R. v. ALLEN (1866), 10 Cox, C. C. 405.

1195. — Registration rebuttable.]—A ship's register containing a statement of British ownership, even if by M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 107, made prima facie proof of such ownership, may be outweighed by circumstantial evidence to the con-

A. Since the Judicature Acts.

1196. Relation of Judge & Trinity Masters—Duty of Judge to follow own opinion.—If the judge of the ct. below differs from his assessors, he is bound to decide in accordance with his own opinion (BRETT, M.R.).—THE BERYL (1884), 9 P. D. 137; 53 L. J. P. 75; 51 L. T. 554; 33 W. R. 191; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 321, C. A.

1197. — Trinity Masters present in advisory capacity only.—The assessors in the Admty. Ct. & the C. A. when trying Admty. appeals do not constitute the ct., & whatever the advice or opinion of the assessors may be, the decision of the ct. both in fact & law is the decision of the judge alone, the assessors being only present to assist the ct. with advice on questions of nautical skill, & the ct. cannot be protected by the opinion of the Elder Brethren against responsibility.—THE CITY OF BERLIN, [1903] P. 110; 77 L. J. P. 76; 98 L. T. 298; 11 Asp. M. L. C. 4, C. A.

For full anns., see SHIPPING & NAVIGATION.

1198. — Effect of disagreement—Calling in third assessor.—Semble: where two assessors disagree, the ct. can call in a third, & after submitting the evidence already given, have the case re-argued before the three assessors. The judgment is that of the judge, & he may decide in accordance with the advice of one or more of the assessors or not as he thinks fit.—THE PHILOTAXE (1877), 37 L. T. 540; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 512.

1199. Duties of—Inspection & report.—Where Trinity Masters are desired to inspect & report to the ct., their report is not necessarily confined to those matters on which evidence has been given, but may include any circumstance in their opinion affecting the merits of the case.—THE MARATHON, Nos. 511, 552, ante.

1200. — When not ordered.—Upon an application, before trial, by plffs. in a damage action for an order for inspection by the Trinity Masters of the lights & screens of defts.' ship, there being no suggestion that plffs. could not obtain evidence as to the lights in the ordinary way, the ct.

refused the application.—THE VICTOR COVACEVICH (1885), 10 P. D. 40; 54 L. J. P. 48; 52 L. T. 632; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 417.

1201. Expert evidence rejected.—Where the ct. is assisted by nautical assessors, evidence of experts on questions of nautical science & skill may properly be rejected.—THE SIR ROBERT PEEL (1880), 43 L. T. 364; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 321, C. A. S. C. Nos. 1222, 1648, post.

1202. ——Where the Admty. Ct. is assisted by Trinity Masters, evidence as to a particular course & mode of navigation at a particular place in a dense fog and in a given state of the tide is not admissible.—THE KIRBY HALL, (1883), 8 P. D. 71; 48 L. T. 797; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 90.

B. Before the Judicature Acts.

1203. Relation of Judge & Trinity Masters.—The Trinity Masters are merely assessors of the judge of the Admty. Ct. & assist him with their advice; the sentence is entirely his.—WILLIAMS v. CHAPMAN, No. 1643, post.

1204. — Advice not binding on judge.—In asking the opinion of Trinity Masters it is the custom of the ct. to request them to state their reasons & explanations. If their explanations are not satisfactory, the ct. does not take them.—THE ALFRED, No. 1185, ante; Nos. 1397, 1416, 1423, post.

Annotations:—Refd. The Fred (1895), 72 L. T. 153; The City of Berlin, [1908] P. 110, C. A.

1205. — Advice rejected—If formed on inadmissible evidence.—If the Trinity Masters seem to have formed their opinion on parts of the evidence which are inadmissible, the ct. will not adopt their advice.—THE ACTÆON, Nos. 685, 1167, ante.

1206. — Difference of opinion—Function of judge.—The duty of Trinity Masters, sitting as assessors in the Admty. Ct., is to assist the judge in questions of nautical skill. In case of a difference of opinion between the judge & the assessors, the judge is not at liberty to act upon any inferences which they may draw from the evidence, except they accord with his own. It is the duty of the judge to decide the case on his own responsibility.—THE MAGNA CHARTA (1871), 25 L. T. 512; 1 Asp. M. L. C. 153, P. C.

1201 i. Expert evidence rejected.—In an action on a collision certain questions were put to a witness, a master, to elicit his opinion as to the management of the ships, & this evidence was objected to on the ground that the case was one in Admty. & that the judge should be assisted by a nautical assessor:—Held: the presence of a nautical assessor was to dispense with nautical evidence as to the management of ships, & the evidence given on this point was inadmissible. The Kirby Hall (1883), 8 P. When called in—Salvage cases.]—As a general rule the ct. will not call in the assistance of Trinity Masters on counsel's suggestion in salvage cases, unless both parties accede to this, or the ct. sees very great nautical difficulties. Application should be made to the ct. for the assistance of the Trinity Masters where there are questions requiring as much nautical knowledge & as difficult as many which arise in collision cases.—THE JAMES DIXON (1860), 2 L. SECT. 15.—DECREE.

SUB-SECT. 1.—SINCE THE JUDICATURE ACTS.

1223. Agreement—When filed, equivalent to decree.]—Defts.' vessel came into collision with & sank another vessel carrying cargo belonging to plfts. Actions were commenced by plfts. & by the owners of the carrying vessel, but in the action between the latter & defts.' vessel the parties filed in the registry an agreement to a decree that both vessels were to blame, & for the usual reference as to damages. Defts. then brought an action for limitation of their liability, & paid into ct. the amount of their liability under M. S. Acts. The usual decree was made for limitation of liability & the staying of plfts.' action:—Held: (1) the agreement between the owners of the two vessels having been filed in the registry was, under R. S. C., O. 52, r. 23, equivalent to a decree of the ct.; (2) the owners of the carrying vessel were not entitled to have such agreement rescinded for the purpose of proving against the fund in ct. for more than half the damage sustained by them.—THE KARO (1887), 13 P. D. 24; 57 L. J. P. 8; 58 L. T. 188; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 245. S. C. No. 911, ante; No. 1494, post.

Annotation:—Apld. The Drumlanrig (1910), 79 L. J. P. 100, C. A.

1224. Judgment by consent—No rescission by consent.]—In an action for damages by collision between the owners of the A. & the B., the ct., by consent of the parties, made a decree dismissing the action. Subsequently another action was brought by the owners of the cargo on the A. against the B. in respect of same collision, & the ct. found both vessels to blame. The owners of the B. commenced an action against the owners of cargo on the A. for the purpose of limiting their liability in respect of all claims arising out of this collision, & paid the amount of their statutory liability into ct. Subsequently, again by consent of the owners of the A. & the B., the assistant registrar rescinded the decree by consent in the first action, & the owners of the A. brought in a claim in the limitation action against the fund in ct. The registrar held such claim to be inadmissible. On motion to confirm the report:—Held: (1) the report should be confirmed, as the owners of the A. & the B. could not by consent rescind the decree of the ct.; (2) the decree by consent was a bar to a claim against the fund in ct., as it estopped the owners of the A. from bringing any further action against the B.—THE BELLCARRN (1885), 10 P. D. 161; 55 L. J. P. 3; 53 L. T. 686; 34 W. R. 55; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 503, C. A.

1225. Variation of decree—Power of court—Conditions of exercise.]—The ct. has power to rehear causes & in its discretion to vary its decrees in cases where it has proceeded on a mistake; but this power ought to be exercised rarely & with great caution, for otherwise much inconvenience & uncertainty would ensue (BRUCE, J.).—THE GEORG, No. 779, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 779, ante.

1226. — Not where failure to apply for special costs.]—Where an order has been made for judgment with costs, & that order has been drawn up, the ct. has no power to alter its decree by subsequently allowing special costs.—THE TURRET COURT (1901), 84 L. T. 331; 17 T. L. R. 339; 9 Asp. M. L. C. 162. S. C. No. 1523, post.

SUB-SECT. 2.—BEFORE THE JUDICATURE ACTS.

1227. Decree—Final, though reference to registrar.]—Where, in an action of damage to cargo, the ct. condemns the ship, pronounces for the damage, & directs a reference to the registrar & merchants to ascertain the amount of damage, the decree of the ct. is final.—THE SARACEN, Nos. 61, 650, ante; No. 1491, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 650, ante.

1228. Variation of decree—Error due to defective information.]—The Admlty. Ct. possesses the same discretionary power of varying its decrees as is possessed by other cts. of England. Such variation should be confined to an alteration of an error arising from defect of knowledge or information upon a particular point in the case, & the error must be brought to the ct.'s attention with the utmost possible diligence. THE MONARCH (1839), 1 Wm. Rob. 21.

*Annotations:—*Apld. Dysart v. Dysart (1847), 1 Rob. Eccl. 107, 470, 543; The Markland (1871), L. R. 3 A. & E. 340. Consd. The Georg, [1894] P. 330. Refd. The Orient (1869), 39 L. J. Adm. 10.

PART III. SECT. 15, SUB-SECT. 1.

1225 i. Variation of decree—Error due to defective information.]—A ship having been picked up derelict & brought into port, the values of ship & cargo were appraised by competent persons, in whose estimate the proctors for both salvors & owners acquiesced, at $9,000, & an award was made. Subsequently the proctors for the owners of the vessel obtained a rule to set aside the judgment & award of salvage on the ground that their acquiescence in the appraisal had been given under a misapprehension. The appraisal had not been made at the instance of the ct. The owners refused to pay the amount awarded, thereby rendering a sale necessary, & it appearing that a sum far less than the appraisal would be realised at such sale, & that the award would be excessive & unjust, the ct. set aside its judgment & ordered a sale to be had. At the sale the vessel & cargo realised only $4,128, instead of $9,000, as had been appraised:—Held: the decree should be re-opened, & the ct. should take the $4,128 & not the $9,000 as the basis of its award of salvage. Rate of allowances for charges determined. Where an appraisal is ordered by the ct. at the instance of the salvors, with a view to a decree, & has been duly made by reliable parties, the ct. will not allow it to be questioned.—THE S. B. HUME (1881), Y. A. D. 228.—CAN.

1225 ii. — Mistake.]—A ship abandoned & towed into port was valued at $8,300, but afterwards it was discovered that the appraisal should have been construed to make the total value only $7,500:—Held: although counsel had acquiesced in the appraisal & decree until the error was discovered, yet relief might be applied for & the decree re-opened & award made upon the basis of $7,500.

The exercise of authority to re-open a decree should be used with the greatest caution. The limit is to make such alteration of an error arising from defect of knowledge or information upon a particular point, as the justice of the case requires. It must be an error instantly noticed & brought to the attention of the ct. with the utmost diligence.—THE ROYAL ARCH (1881), Y. A. D. 260.—CAN.

1225 iii. — Application by parties not represented in conjoined actions in which decree obtained.]—In conjoined actions for damages for collision in which both ships were found to blame, the owners of the A. obtained against the owners of the O. a decree for a sum which exceeded their total liability as limited by M. S. Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 503. The owners of the O. having presented under that Act a petition for limitation of liability & for distribution, the owners of the A. claimed to rank for the sum in their decree; the owners of the A.'s cargo, however, having appeared & put in a claim, sought to have such decree opened up, maintaining that the value of the A. had been 1229. — Mistake.]—Salvage services having been rendered to a ship laden with cargo, a salvage suit was instituted against ship, freight, & cargo. Separate appearances were entered on behalf of the owner of the ship & the owner of the cargo. The owner of the cargo filed an affidavit of value stating the value of the cargo, & the owner of the ship filed an affidavit of value stating the value of the ship & freight. At the hearing the ct., taking these values as accurate, by its decree awarded to the salvors a certain sum as salvage. Some time afterwards the owner of the cargo discovered that he had by mistake included in his valuation of the cargo the value of the freight, & that the freight was of more value than appeared by the affidavit of value filed on behalf of the owner of the ship, & he made application to the ct. to reduce the value of the cargo, & to reduce the amount it had previously decreed as salvage. On the mistake being proved:—Held: the ct. had power to correct the mistake & to make the necessary alterations in the decree.—THE JAMES ARMSTRONG (1875), L. R. 4 A. & E. 380; 33 L. T. 390; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 46.

*Annotation:—*Apld. The Georg, [1894] P. 330.

1230. — Delay.]—To entitle a party to amend an error in a decree, the mistake should be brought to the notice of the ct. with the utmost possible diligence. An application to alter a decree 5 months after it was made was rejected.—THE ORIENT (1869), 39 L. J. Adm. 10; 21 L. T. 762.

1232. Decrees by consent.]—Final as well as interlocutory decrees & orders may be obtained in the Admlty. Ct. by consent, without an order of the overstated & had not been contested by the owners of the O. because they had had little or no interest so to do, but that the finding of such value could not be binding on them when they were not represented in the actions:—Held: the owners of the A. were bound to try again in the petition the amount of their claim.—VAN ELICK & ZOON v. SOMERVILLE (1906), 43 Sc. L. R. 841; 14 S. L. T. 316; 8 F. 22, H. L.; sub nom. OLGA v. ANGLIA (OWNERS) (1905), 12 S. L. T. 812; 7 F. 739.—SCOT.

b. Judgment—Antedating—Death of party.]—In a collision action, when one of the parties died after the argument, but before judgment, the judgment was antedated.—BRYCE v. CANADIAN PACIFIC RY. CO. (1908), 8 W. L. R. 230; 13 B. C. R. 446.—CAN.

PART III. SECT. 15, SUB-SECT. 2.

1228 i. Variation of decree.]—The ct. will, upon motion, & after time for appeal has elapsed, review its definitive sentence, & hear an application made by the promovents for a new distribution of the sum awarded as salvage amongst the salvors. Although the ct. might, perhaps, have made a different distribution of the salvage awarded at the hearing, if fully cognisant of all the facts, it will not, upon motion, alter its original distribution, unless under pressure of most peculiar circumstances.—THE JANE (1850), 5 Ir. SECT. 16.—COSTS.

Sec. generally, PRACTICE & PROCEDURE; SOLICITORS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

1234. General rule.]—The party who fails in any suit, except in very peculiar circumstances, should pay the whole of the costs, not as a punishment, but upon the principle of indemnification to the party sued, who has been put to the expense of a suit commenced without sufficient ground in fact or in law to warrant its institution.—THE CHRISTINA (1844), 3 L. 1236. — Costs increased by defendant's conduct.]—Defts. having occasioned great delay & extra expense, so that the amount in which the action had been entered proved insufficient to cover the amount pronounced to be due to pltf. with his costs of suit, the ct. ordered that the ship should not be released from arrest until payment of pltf.'s claim & costs should have been made.—THE HELEN (1866), 14 W. R. 502.

1237. — Applicable to preliminary objection.]—On an objection to the pleadings, the question for decision involved the whole case:—Held: the unsuccessful party must be condemned in costs.—THE TIGRESS, No. 560, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 560, ante.

1238. Costs—Not necessarily following event.]—There is no rule in the Admty. Ct. to give costs to a party succeeding in a cause of possession. A question of costs depends on the merits of the case.

Where the parties to a cause of possession agreed, after bail given, that proceedings should be discontinued, & the costs in the Admty. Ct. should abide the event of a trial at law, if the rule in the above ct. was to give costs to a party succeeding in a cause of possession:—Held: (1) there was no such rule in the Admty. Ct.; (2) the Admty. proceedings must be dismissed without costs.—THE PARTRIDGE (1822), 1 Hag. Adm. 81.

1239. Successful party—When not entitled to costs—Conduct.]—A successful party is entitled to costs generally subject to the exception of any costs incurred for matters unnecessarily introduced by him.—THE APOLLO, Nos. 202, 225, 239, ante.

Ct. had jurisdiction to give costs beyond the amount of the value of the vessel & freight, notwithstanding 53 Geo. 3, c. 159.—Ex p. RAYNE (1841), 1 Q. B. 982; 1 Gal. & Dav. 374; 10 L. J. Q. 1259. — Not limited to amount of bail.]—In a collision suit bail was taken from a shipowner for damages & expenses in £250, which was not the full value of the property, & the damages & costs were found to exceed that sum; the shipowner having compelled pltf. to proceed by an expensive process of "plea & proof" instead of "act on petition":—Held: the shipowner was liable in a further sum to cover the costs.—*THE LAWRENCE v. 1261. — Co-plaintiffs.]—In a case of damage instituted on behalf of the Queen in her office of Admty., & of the commander & crew of one of H.M. ships, against a private shipowner, the ct., on a finding for deft., declined to condemn the Crown in costs, but condemned the commander & crew to pay the whole of the costs.

Crown Suits Act, 1855 (c. 90), authorising costs to be given to or against the Crown, applies only to proceedings in which the A.-G. or Lord Advocate is a party. Co-pltfs. are severally liable to the whole of the costs.—THE LEDA (1863), Brown. & Lush. 19; 32 L. J. P. M. & A. 58; 7 L. T. 864; 9 Jur. N. S. 208; 11 W. R. 302; 1 Mar. L. C. 298.

Suits Act, 1868 (c. 78), did not apply.—THE BROADMAYNE, Nos. 69, 131, 705, ante.

1265. — Unless ratified.]—Where a shipowner applied to the ct. to set aside an order condemning him in the costs of unsuccessful legal proceedings taken on his behalf by the managing owner, on the ground that the proceedings had been instituted without his knowledge, consent, or ratification, & the first intimation he had of the proceeding was a notice received about a month previous to the present application condemning him in the costs of such proceeding, the ct. refused to grant the application, as it did not appear that applt., though he had no knowledge of the institution of, was not aware of the pendency of, the proceedings, & because he had not at once applied to the ct. on becoming aware of the proceedings, instead of delaying to take any steps for over a month.—THE BELLCAIRN (1886), 54 L. T. 544; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 583.

1266. — Proctor personally liable.]—A proctor of the Admlty. Ct. will be personally condemned in the costs of the suit for not setting forth the names of the parties for whom he appeared when directed so to do by a decree of the ct.—THE WHELMINE (WILHELMINE) (1842), 1 Wm. 1267. Unnecessary costs—Proctor personally liable.]—Where costs have been created by introduction of much matter foreign to the real & natural merits of the case as between the parties, the ct. will condemn in costs the proctor who has introduced irrelevant matter & an uncandid representation that has created the necessity of all that followed in contradiction.—THE FREDERICK (1823), 1 Hag. Adm. 211. S. C. No. 1012, ante.

SUB-SECT. 3.—COSTS ARISING OUT OF ARREST.

A. Since the Judicature Acts.

1268. Commission on bail—Not recoverable as costs—Damages.]—A successful deft. in an action in rem, where the action is decided in his favour or discontinued, cannot recover as costs the commission paid by him for bail to release his ship from arrest, though he may in some instances, where the arrest is made malá fide or with gross negligence, recover it as damages.—THE COLLINGROVE, THE NUMIDA (1885), 10 P. D. 158; 54 L. J. P. 78; 53 L. T. 681; 34 W. R. 156; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 483. S. C. No. 710, ante.

1269. Bail fees—Allowed, if bail excessive.]—A s.s. ran into another moored alongside a wharf in the Thames, doing damage to the moored vessel & breaking her adrift. The vessel which had been moored damaged others after she was broken adrift. In an action for damage brought by the owners of the vessel broken adrift they demanded bail in £10,000, but ultimately reduced their demand to £9,000. The question of liability having been fought & determined in favour of pltf's., they filed a claim in the registry amounting to £3,451 13s. 5d. Defts. tendered £3,100, which was accepted by pltf's. On a motion by defts. that pltf's. should bear the cost of the excessive bail fees:—Held: (1) the bail demanded was excessive; (2) pltf's. must bear the cost of the fees for the bail demanded above £8,000.—THE PRINCESSE MARIE JOSÉ (1913), 109 L. T. 326; 29 T. L. R. 678; 12 Asp. M. L. C. 360.

PART III. SECT. 16, SUB-SECT. 3.—A.

a. Excessive arrest.]—A party is not entitled to the benefit of the rule dealing with the costs & damages occasioned by an excessive claim, & which refers to costs incurred in obtaining the release of the ship & damages sustained by her detention, unless the amount claimed is so exorbitant & so disproportionate to the damages sustained, or the services rendered, as to indicate that the arrest of the ship was either an act of malice or of negligence so gross that malice will be implied. Pltf's. instituted an action in rem against the T., claiming £300 damages, & had the ship arrested; the registrar held upon inquiry before him that the demand of pltf's. was unreasonable & extortionate:—Held: pltf's. must pay the costs occasioned by arrest of the ship.—OLSON & MAHONY S.S. Co. v. THE THELMA (1913), 14 S. R. N. S. W. 10.—AUS.

(a) In General.

1270. Costs of arrest—Effect of admission of liability.]—The payment of wages after arrest of the ship is an admission of the justice of the claim, & renders the owners liable to expenses of the warrant & arrest.—THE THOMAS HANDFORD (1827), 2 Hag. Adm. 41 n.

1271. Not recoverable—Detention fees—Arrest at outport.]—Where a vessel is arrested in an outport & not by the marshal of the ct., the detention fees are to be paid by the arresting party, though successful in the cause.—THE NORTH AMERICAN No. 1399, post.

1272. — Possession fees—Second arrest in transferred action.]—Where a ship, already under arrest of the Admlty. Ct., is arrested in an Admlty. cause instituted in a city ct., pltf's. knowing of the previous arrest, & that cause is afterwards transferred to the High Ct., the possession fees charged by the high bailiff in respect of the city ct. arrest will not be allowed by the High Ct. upon taxation of pltf's. costs.—THE RIO LIMA (1873), L. R. 4 A. & E. 157; 43 L. J. Adm. 4; 29 L. T. 517; 22 W. R. 303; 2 Asp. M. L. C. 143.

(b) Costs of Appraisal.

1273. Salvors—When entitled to costs.]—Salvors are entitled to costs of a commission of appraisal where there is a substantial difference between the appraised value & that stated by defts.—THE PAUL (1866), L. R. 1 A. & E. 57; 35 L. J. Adm. 16; 14 L. T. 192; 2 Mar. L. C. 325.

1274. —.]—The value of the ship as appraised by the officer of the ct. was less & of the cargo more than the values tendered by defts. The ct. condemned defts. in costs of the appraisal.—THE MAGDALEN (1861), 5 L. T. 692; 1 Mar. L. C. 183.

1275. — When liable for costs.]—In cases of salvage the ct. is disposed to discountenance the taking out of a commission of appraisal. Where the value of the vessel is disputed, & a commission taken out, unless there be a great disparity between the value stated by the owners & the actual value, the party taking out the commission will be liable to costs of the appraisal.—THE PERSIAN (1842), 1 Wm. 1278. — When costs are costs in cause.]—The owner of a ship arrested in a damage suit alleged the value of the ship to be one-fifteenth less than it was afterwards shown to be upon a commission of appraisal obtained by pltf's.; the amount claimed by pltf's. was less than the sum for which the owners were willing to give security; but, assuming the claim to be sustained, the costs would extend the claim greatly beyond that sum. On a motion by pltf's. to condemn defts. in costs of the appraisal:—Held: the proper order was that costs should be costs in the cause.—THE RAPID (1869), 18 W. R. 150.

SUB-SECT. 4.—COSTS IN COLLISION CASES.

A. Since the Judicature Acts.

1279. Inevitable accident—Admiralty or common law rule.—Qu.: whether in cases of inevitable accident, where the practice of the Admty. Ct. as to costs before Jud. Acts was different from that of the cts. of common law, the Admty. Div. will now follow the practice of the cts. of common law.—THE MATTHEW CAY (1879), 5 P. D. 49; 49 L. J. P. 47; 41 L. T. 759; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 224. S. C. Nos. 1288, 1291, post.

1280. — No costs.—In consequence of the steering apparatus of a steamer suddenly breaking from a latent defect she ran into & damaged a schooner. At the hearing of an action of damage instituted on behalf of the owners of the schooner against the steamer:—Held: (1) the collision was an inevitable accident; (2) the action should be dismissed without costs.—THE VIRGO (1876), 35 L. T. 519; 25 W. R. 397; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 285.

1282. — Costs to defendant.—Pltfs. in an action for damage by collision admitted on the pleadings that the collision was the result of an inevitable accident. Defts. applied for judgment with costs:—Held: unless there are special circumstances to induce the ct. to depart from this rule, costs will be given against pltfs. in an action of damage whenever defts. prove that the collision is the result of an inevitable accident.—THE NAPLES (1886), 11 P. D. 124; 55 L. J. P. 64; 55 L. T. 584; 35 W. R. 59; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 30.

1283. Both to blame—No costs—Maritime Conventions Act, 1911 (c. 57).—In an action for damage by collision, in which both vessels were found to blame for negligent navigation in fog, the vessel which was found guilty of the initial fault was ordered to pay 60 per cent. of the damage & the other vessel 40 per cent. under s. 1 (1) of the above Act. No order was made as to costs.—THE ROSALIA, [1912] P. 109; 81 L. J. P. 79; 106 L. T. 351; 28 T. L. R. 287; 12 Asp. M. L. C. 166.

1284. — — — Former practice followed.—When in a collision action both ships are held to be in fault, but in different degrees, the practice in force before the passing of the above Act, that each party to the action should bear his own costs, will be followed unless there are special circumstances in existence to induce the ct. to depart from it.—THE BRAVO (1912), 108 L. T. 430; 29 T. L. R. 122; 12 Asp. M. L. C. 311.

1286. — Action by cargo-owner—Rules as to costs.—Where an action is brought by the owners of cargo laden on board one ship against another ship for damages sustained by the cargo through collision, & both vessels are found to blame, pltfs. will recover half their damages, in accordance with the practice of the Admty. Ct. & Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25 (9), but no order will, as a rule, be made as to the costs. Semble: if deft. in an action brought by the owners, of cargo laden on board another ship for damages arising from a collision admits his liability, but pleads contributory negligence on the part of the ship on board which the cargo was laden, & both vessels are found to blame pltfs. may be condemned in costs, & where cargo-owners suing alone admit contributory negligence on the part of the ship in which their cargo was, & only claim half their damages & recover them, they will get costs. The Milan (1861), Lush. 388, overd.—THE CITY OF MANCHESTER (1880), 5 P. D. 221; 49 L. J. P. 81; 42 L. T. 521; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 261, C. A. S. C. No. 1610, post.

1287. Compulsory pilotage—Admiralty rule followed.—In cases of compulsory pilotage the Admty. Div. will adhere to the practice of the Admty. Ct. before Jud. Acts as to costs.—THE PRINCETON (1878), 3 P. D. 90; 47 L. J. Adm. 33; 38 L. T. 260; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 562.

1289. — Costs to defendant—Discontinuance.—In an action for damage by collision defts. pleaded that the collision was caused solely by negligence of the pilot who was compulsorily in charge of defts.' ship. Pltfs. applied for leave to discontinue the action without payment of costs:—Held: pltfs. must pay the costs, there being no materials upon which the ct.'s discretion could be exercised, until the facts had come out at the trial.—THE J. H. HENKES (1887), 12 P. D. 106; 56 L. J. P. 69; 56 L. T. 581; 35 W. R. 412; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 121. S. C. No. 1086, ante.

1290. — No costs—Action justifiable.—Where defts. rely solely on the defence of compulsory pilotage, & are successful, they may not get costs if the ct. is of opinion that in the circumstances pltfs. were justified in bringing the action.—THE HANKOW (1879), 4 P. D. 107; 40 L. T. 335; 28 W. R. 156; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 97.

1291. — Unsuccessful defence on merits.—When in an action for damages by collision deft. pleads a defence on the merits & also a plea of compulsory pilotage, & succeeds on the plea of compulsory pilotage only, each party will have to pay his own costs.—THE MATTHEW CAY, Nos. 1279, 1288, ante.

1292. — — ——In an action of damage by collision defts. pleaded inevitable accident, & alternatively, that if the collision & damage were caused or contributed to by any negligence on the part of any one on board their s.s. (which was denied), such negligence was solely that of a duly licensed pilot who was in charge of their vessel within a district in which the employment of the pilot was compulsory by law. Bargrave Deane, J. found that the collision was occasioned by the fault of the pilot alone & dismissed pltf.'s action; but made no order as to costs. Defts., by leave, appealed on the ground that the judge, in the exercise of the judicial discretion vested in him under Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), should, in accordance with the alleged existing admty. practice, have given defts. the costs of defending the action.—Held:

down any general rule for the guidance of cts. of first instance beyond what had already been done, viz., that, if there be but one issue in the action, the successful party is, prima facie entitled to costs, as where the defence of compulsory pilotage is the only issue raised; but where, as in the present case, defts. undertake to prove that there was no faulty navigation on the part of anybody, & fail though succeeding upon the issue of compulsory pilotage, the ct. below will be rightly exercising its discretion, apart from special circumstances, in making no order as to costs.—THE OPHIELIA, [1914] P. 46; 83 L. 1293. — Difference between Admiralty & other divisions.]—In an action by plffs. for damages sustained by their ship in a collision with defts.' ship, defts. set up the defence, among others, that their ship at the time of collision was compulsorily under the charge of a pilot. Upon this defence they succeeded & obtained judgment. No application as to costs was made at the trial, but plffs. afterwards applied to the ct. under R. S. C., O. 55, for an order to deprive defts. of costs on the ground that in the old Admty. Ct. & in the present Admty. Div. the practice was uniform to disallow deft. costs in cases where he succeeded in the defence of compulsory pilotage alone, if besides that he had raised other defences:—Held: without deciding whether the ct. had power under R. S. C., O. 55, to make an order as to costs at all, the practice of the Admty. Div. applied to cases in that div. alone, & could not upset the general & well-established rule that the successful party is entitled to his costs.—*GENERAL STEAM NAVIGATION CO. v. 1294. — Counterclaim dismissed with costs.]—In an action of damage arising out of a collision plffs.' claim was dismissed without costs, the ct. having found that defts.' vessel was alone to blame for the collision, but that they were exempt from liability on the ground of compulsory pilotage. Defts. had counterclaimed:—Held: in the circumstances, plffs. entitled to have the counterclaim dismissed with costs.—THE RUBY (1890), 15 P. D. 139; 63 L. T. 735; 39 W. R. 42; 6 Asp. M. L. 1295. Co-defendants—Costs of.]—A pilot cutter was made fast to a sailing ship, which was being towed by two tugs. A collision occurred between the cutter & a schooner, causing damage to both. The cutter sued the tugs & the schooner. The schooner counterclaimed against the cutter & the tugs, & the tugs were held solely to blame. On appeal by the tugs:—Held: (1) though the cutter was lashed alongside the tow, those in charge of her were not absolved from keeping a look-out, & were negligent in not slipping their towrope & so avoiding collision; (2) there was no contribution between the tugs & the cutter in respect of the judgment obtained by the schooner against the tugs; (3) the tugs & cutter must pay their own costs in the ct. below & of the appeal.—THE HARVEST HOME, [1905] P. 177; 93 L. 1296. — Costs of successful defendant.]—The dumb barge E., while in tow of the steam-tug S., was damaged by collision with the steamship R. The owners of the E. commenced an action, joining the owners of both vessels as defts. The dock co. alleged that the collision was caused solely by negligence of those on board the ketch. The ct. judge gave judgment against both defts.; but on appeal the Div. B. Before the Judicature Acts.

1299. Practice as to costs.]—The law is, if either party is to blame, that party pays the costs of both; if neither is to blame, each pays his own costs; if both are to blame, the costs fall on both, the damages, costs, & expenses of both parties being thrown together, & equally divided.—THE WASHINGTON (1841), 5 Jur. 1067. S. C. No. 1309, post.

Annotation:—Reid. Stoomvaart Maatschappij Nederland v. Peninsular & Oriental Steam Navigation Co. (1882), 7 App. Cas. 795.

1300. Inevitable accident—No costs.]—In a collision action where neither ship was to blame no costs were given.—BAKER v. MALIN (1764), Burrell, 322.

1301. — —.]—It is the practice of the ct. not to give costs on either side where a collision has occurred from inevitable accident.—THE ITINERANT

PART III. SECT. 16, SUB-SECT. 4.—B.]

1299 i. Practice as to costs.]—In cross-suits to recover damages for collision between two sailing vessels, if it appear that one of them kept a proper look-out, & did all that was possible to avoid the catastrophe before it took place, & the other did not keep a good look-out, or adopt the proper precautionary measures to avoid it when the danger arose —such as getting all hands on deck, the helms, etc.—the ct. will make the vessel so in default pay the costs.—THE BILLOW QUEEN (1859), 5 Ir. Jur. N. S. 42 (Adm.).—IR.

1299 ii. S. P. THE ANNE (1860), 5 Ir. Jur. N. S. 360 (Adm.).—IR.

1299 iii. —.]—Where no blame is attributable to either party the practice of the ct. is in such cases not to award costs on either side.—THE MARQUERITE (1859), 10 L. C. R. 113; 2 N. Y. A. C. 19; V. A. C. 254, C. C.—CAN.

1300 i. Inevitable accident—No costs.]—A petition may be dismissed, with no order as to costs, when it appears that the collision was the result of an accident.—THE G. F. WILLIAMS (1871), 5 I. L. T. 33.—IR.

1305. — — — Except in special cases.—The rule of the Admly. Ct. in cases where a collision is found to be the result of inevitable accident is to make no order as to costs, unless it can be shown that the suit was brought unreasonably & without sufficient prima facie grounds, & this rule is followed by the C. A.—THE MARPESIA, Nos. 927, 1130. ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 1130, ante.

1306. — — — —.]—Though costs are not generally allowed in cases of collision caused by accident, cases might occur where they would be allowed, though the collision was accidental.—THE ADLER (1845). 8 L. T. 194.

1307. — Costs to defendant—Plaintiff failing to inquire.—In ordinary circumstances when it is found that collision was the result of inevitable accident, the general rule is that no costs are given. A collision being the result of inevitable accident, pl'tfs. were condemned in costs, the ct. being of opinion that they might, before suit brought, have ascertained how the collision arose.—THE LONDON (1863), Brown. & Lush. 82; 9 L. 1308. Both to blame—No costs.]—Costs in a case of damage done by a foreign vessel to a British vessel are to be divided, each party paying its own costs, both parties having been in fault.—THE DE COCK v. THE PARMELIA (1830), 4 L. T. 774.

1309. — Costs divided.]—THE WASHINGTON,
No. 1299, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 1299, ante.

1310. Negligence of damaged vessel—Costs to defendant.]—In a cause of collision, the owners are only entitled to indemnification if the damage is occasioned by the fault or misconduct of the vessel charged as the wrongdoer.

A collision having arisen from the neglect of the vessel damaged, the owners of the other vessel were dismissed with costs.—THE LIGO (1831), 2 Hag. Adm. 356.

1811. Compulsory pilotage—Costs to defendant.—In a cause of damage, the only defence was that the collision was caused by the fault of a pilot compulsorily in charge of defts.' vessel. Defts. having proved their case:—Held: plffs. must be condemned in costs.—THE ROYAL CHARTER (1869), L. R. 2 A. & E. 362; 38 L. J. Adm. 36; 20 L. T. 1019; 18 W. R. 49; 3 Mar. L. C. 262.

1912. — NO COSTS—UNSUCCESSFUL DEFENCE ON merits.]—Where defts. succeeded on the defence of compulsory pilotage, but failed to establish the defence that the other ship was to blame :—Held : (1) they could not be allowed costs ; (2) if they had relied only on the defence of compulsory pilotage the ct. would have given them costs.—THE BATAVIER (1845), 2 Wm. 1313. ———.]—In a collision cause, where deft. raises, together with other defences, that of compulsory pilotage, & his ship is found to blame, but is dismissed on the ground that negligence of the compulsory pilot was the sole cause of collision, each party pays his own costs according to the practice of the Admty. Ct. It has never been the custom in that ct. to apportion the costs in such cases according to findings on the various issues.—THE SCHWAN (THE ROBERT MORRISON) (1874), L. R. 4 A. & E. 187; 43 L. 1314. Other defences pleaded.]—Defts. in a cause of damage, who rely at the hearing upon the defence of compulsory pilotage only, & succeed on this point, but whose pleadings raise other issues which are not proved, are not entitled to their costs.—THE LIVIA (1872), 25 L. (a) In General.

1322. General costs—Though failure on special issue.]—The V. fell in with the C. showing signals of distress, with her propeller shaft broken, about 30 miles out of her usual course from America to England, & took her in tow. After the V. had towed the C. from 8.10 p.m. to 7.45 a.m. the hawser broke, & owing to the danger to the cattle on board the V. would not take the C. again in tow. By the service of the V. the C. was brought 10 to 14 miles nearer her proper track, & towed 85 miles on her course, & thus brought into greater comparative safety. The C. subsequently arrived safely at Queenstown. The V. having been awarded £200—Held: plffs. were entitled to the general costs of the action, but not to those of a special issue as to damage to machinery on which they had failed.—THE CAPELLA (1883), 9 P. D. 27; 53 J. P. 12; 50 L. T. 126; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 197.

1323. Salvors to pay costs — Forfeiture of award — Misconduct.]—Where salvors, having taken possession of a derelict vessel, whose crew had taken refuge on board the salvors' vessel, improperly refused to put back the crew or take the proffered assistance of a tug, although they themselves had no local knowledge, & then brought the derelict to anchor in an improper place, in consequence of which she was lost, the ct., although the ship & cargo were subsequently raised, & realised £3,075, refused to give any salvage remuneration, & condemned plffs. in costs, but dismissed the counterclaim for damages.—THE YAN YEAN (1883), 8 P. D. 147; 52 L. J. P. 67; 49 L. T. 187; 31 W. R. 950; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 135. S. C. No. 1246, ante.

Annotation:—Reid. The Camollia (1883), 9 P. D. 27.

1324. ———.]—A vessel drove ashore in a gale of wind. Some of the crew landed in their own boat, whilst others were taken off by a lifeboat, for which service the crew of the lifeboat

(plffs.) were remunerated in the usual way. On landing, the master of the vessel went in search of tugs, leaving the officer of the coastguard, with the mate & crew in charge of the vessel, to watch her. After some hours the weather moderated, & plffs., in spite of the remonstrances of the officer of the coastguard, put off in a boat to the vessel, at the same time forcibly preventing the mate & two of the crew from going in the boat with them. The plffs. took possession of the vessel, as if salvors of a derelict, & when the tide ebbed leaving the vessel high & dry they laid two anchors out on the sands. The master of the vessel subsequently arrived with tugs; but on rowing to his vessel & attempting to haul himself up the side he fell back into the boat as one of plffs. let go of the rope. The tugs then towed the vessel toward a neighbouring port, but, through plffs.' incapacity, she took the ground & had to be towed to sea again. A pilot subsequently boarded her, but, owing to plffs.' inefficiency in carrying out his orders, delay occurred before the vessel was brought into a place of safety. In an action of salvage:—Held: the suit must be dismissed with costs, as the vessel was not derelict & plffs.' misconduct was such as to work a total forfeiture of salvage reward.—THE CAPELLA, [1892] P. 70; 66 L. T. 388; 7 Asp. M. L. C. 158. S. C. No. 1247, ante.

1325. ——— Action brought unnecessarily.]—Where seamen instituted a salvage action in the High Ct. & sought to dispute an agreement made by their master for £200, which the ct. upheld, apportioning £40 to the crew, plffs. were condemned in the costs of the action.—THE NASMYTH (1885), 10 P. D. 41; 54 L. J. P. 63; 52 L. T. 392; 33 W. R. 736; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 364. S. C. No. 982, ante.

Annotation:—Consd. The Friesland, [1904] P. 345.

1327. No costs—Misconduct.]—Though salvage is awarded, the ct. may deprive the salvors of costs on account of their misconduct.—THE PINNAS (1888), 59 L. T. 526; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 313.

1328. S. P. THE CADIZ (1876), 35 L. T. 602; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 332.

1329. ——— Agreement set aside.]—Where an agreement to pay salvage remuneration is set aside as inequitable, each side must pay its own costs of the action. Semble: the fact that plffs. have claimed, in the alternative of the agreement being set aside, an award of salvage remuneration does not entitle them to the costs when such award is made.—THE SILESIA (1880), 5 P. D. 177; 50 L. J. P. 9; 43 L. T. 319; 29 W. R. 156; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 338. S. C. No. 999, ante.

1323 I. Salvors to pay costs—Excessive bail.]—In an action of salvage in which a ship was arrested & the bail asked for was found to be excessive, the ct. held that the promovers must pay to the impugnants the costs required by the bail being excessive. The George Gordon, (1884), 9 P. a. Costs as though action instituted under Supreme Court Code of Civil Procedure.—An abandoned sailing-ship was picked up & saved by plff. co.'s steamship. The evidence as to the value of the abandoned vessel ranged from £2,000 to £750:—Held: in the circumstances costs should be allowed as though the action had been instituted under the Supreme Ct. Code of Civil Procedure.—AORERE S.S. CO., LTD. (No. 2) v. COLONIAL SAILING SHIP CO., LTD. (1906), 26 N. Z. L. R. 259.—N.Z.

the owners of the salved ship & cargo respectively must be apportioned between them, in accordance with the rule laid down in The Peace, No. 1358, post, namely, in proportion to the value of their respective interests.—THE ELTON, No. 838, ante.

(b) Consolidation.

1331. Two actions—One set of costs—Apportionment.—In a case where defts., in two actions of salvage instituted against the same property, were ordered to pay only one set of costs, to be apportioned between plffs. in the two actions, the ct. directed that the apportionment should be made according to the amount of plffs.' respective bills of costs.—THE PASITHEA (1879), 5 P. D. 5.

1332. — Refusal to consolidate—Costs nomine expensarum.—Where salvage services were rendered to a vessel in distress afterwards towed into safety by other salvors, the ultimate salvors were condemned in an amount of costs nomine expensarum for not consenting to consolidation of their action with the action of the first salvors.—THE HESTIA, [1895] P. 193; 64 L. J. P. 82; 72 L. T. 364; 43 W. R. 608; 7 Asp. M. L. C. 590; 11 R. 808.

1333. Consolidated action—Separate representation—When allowed.—The owners, masters, & crews of the H., a tug which was towing a salved ship under a contract, & the F., a tug which rendered salvage services, in which the H. took part, instituted proceedings for salvage, the owners of the H. claiming that the towage contract had been superseded by the events which had happened. The salvage suits were consolidated, the conduct of the action being given to the owners of the H. At the trial the H. was represented by a leading & junior counsel. The F. was also represented by two counsel. The ct. awarded each salvor £300. Counsel for the H. asked for a certificate for the separate representation of the H. by two counsel:—Held: as defts. had alleged that the H. was not entitled to salvage, but was only fulfilling her agreement, the owners of the H. were entitled to be separately represented by two counsel.—THE POLTALLOCH (1906), 94 L. T. 556; 10 Asp. M. L. C. 255.

1334. Separate representation—No separate interest—No costs.—The solrs. acting for the owners of a salving ship without any direct authority from the crew who numbered thirty-six, & of whom no member had performed any special service, issued a writ on behalf of the owners, master & crew, claiming salvage for services rendered to the B., her cargo & freight, & delivered a statement of claim on behalf of the owners, master & crew of the L., to which the owners of the B. delivered a defence. Meanwhile twelve of the crew gave notice to defts.' solrs. of a change of solrs., & a further statement of claim was delivered on their behalf, to which the owners of the B. delivered a defence. On hearing of the salvage suits the owners, master & twenty-four of the crew were represented by two counsel, & the remaining twelve of the crew were also separately represented by two counsel:—Held: (1) the twelve seamen were not entitled to costs; (2) they were not to be condemned in costs.—THE BREMEN (1906), 94 L. T. 383; 10 Asp. M. L. C. 229.

B. Before the Judicature Acts.

1335. Costs awarded to salvors—No tender.—It is a rule that, when no tender is made, & salvage is awarded, costs are always given in favour of the salvors.—THE ANN MITCHELL (1852), 6 L. T. 194; Shipping Gazette, Feb. 7.

1336. S. P. THE ARABIAN (1853), 8 L. T. 613; Shipping Gazette, Feb. 7.

1337. — — ——A salvage service was admitted to have been rendered, but no tender had been made, because, as alleged, the sum claimed by the salvors was so disproportioned to the value of their services that there was no probability of its being accepted:—Held: the owners were still liable for costs of the salvors, no tender having been made.—THE SHANNON (1847), 10 L. T. O. S. 266; 11 Jur. 1045.

1339. Proportion of costs—Misconduct—Award not forfeited.—Where salvors, not employed at the time, prevented further assistance being given, although their services were afterwards accepted, & they salved the ship & cargo, the ct. awarded them £100 instead of £300, & allowed them two-thirds only of their costs.—THE GLORY (1850), 14 Jur. 676.

1340. Salvors to pay costs—Award forfeited for misconduct.—A ship, laden with lead & iron, sunk on the Ship-wash sand, & was there left by the master & crew:—Held: the first finders, though they recovered part of the property, forfeited their claim to salvage, & became liable to the costs of a suit instituted by them as salvors, by reason of their subsequent misconduct towards, & forcible resistance to, the authority of the owners.—THE BAREFOOT (1850), 14 Jur. 841.

1341. — Excessive bail.—Excessive bail having been required by salvors, the salvage service being of a very trifling character, performed without risk or difficulty, & with but little labour, the salvors were condemned in the costs up to giving in the act on petition.—THE CHARLOTTE (1848), 3 Wm. 1342. — Unjustifiable proceedings.—The ct. condemned the salvors not only in the costs of the appraisement but in all the costs that related to the value, expressing the opinion that the proceedings adopted for obtaining the value were unjustifiable

PART III. SECT. 16, SUB-SECT. 5.—

1332 I. Two actions—Refusal to consolidate—One set of costs.—The ct. will not permit owners to be saddled with two sets of costs where the salvors ought to have joined in their suit.—THE C. D. V. CHIPMAN (1877), 6 Nfld. L. R. 132.—NFLD.

1333 I. Consolidated action—No order for separate representation.—When two separate salvage actions are consolidated at the instance of the common impugnant, & no order is made giving the conduct of both to one plff., the promotores are entitled to separate costs.—Re THE DRACHENFELS, THE RETRIEVER v. THE DRACHENFELS, THE HUGHLE v. THE DRACHENFELS (1899), 1 L. R. 27 Calc. 860.—IND.

PART III. SECT. 16, SUB-SECT. 5.—B.

1335 I. Costs awarded to salvors—Derelict.—In a case of derelict salvage, the ct. awarded a little more than "one-third" of the total value of the property saved, & gave the salvors their costs of the suit.—THE KRIN-GO-BRAGH (1864), 9 Ir. Jur. O. S. 100 (Adm.).—IR.

1335 II. — — ——The P., being on fire, attracted the attention of another vessel which proceeded towards her. She found the master & crew in boats & took them aboard, & learned that there was no one aboard the burning P. The master of the P. requested that the other vessel should beach her, but, after consultation, the request was declined owing to the heavy risks. The master & crew of the P. were landed, & left without intimating any intention of returning to their vessel. The following day the flames from the P. were diminishing, & the other vessel went over to her and took her in tow.

A. Since the Judicature Acts.

1359. Discretion of court—Certificate not necessary.—Since the passing of Jud. Acts it is not necessary to obtain a certificate to enable plff. to recover his costs in an action in the High Ct. where such action is within the Admlty. jurisdiction of the ct. ct., but not within its common law jurisdiction. Semble: it is necessary in such case to apply to the ct. for directions as to the costs.—THE ENGLISHMAN (1878), 38 L. 1361. — — — — ——Plff. sued defts. in the Q. B. Div. for damage by collision, claiming £200, & recovered £100 at the trial before an official referee, who made no order as to costs, "having regard to Cty. Cts. Admlty. Jurisdiction Acts, 1868 (c. 71) & 1869 (c. 51)." The Div. Ct. varied that order by ordering defts. to pay plff.'s costs:—Held: (1) s. 9 of the former Act was impliedly repealed by R. S. C., O. 65, r. 1; (2) the costs were in the discretion of the official referee; (3) the official referee had not exercised his discretion; (4) such discretion was rightly exercised by the Div. Ct.—ROCKETT v. CLIPPINGDALE, [1891] 2 Q. B. 293; 60 L. J. Q. B. 782; 64 L. T. 641; 7 T. L. R. 515, C. A.

L. R. 428. S. C. No. 1742, post.

hours, & the decision mainly turned on the inability of defts. to exonerate their s.s. from the charge of not keeping out of the way of plffs.' steamer, a large vessel in tow of tugs, which defts.' steamer was overtaking in the Thames. Defts.' vessel was held alone to blame, & damages were referred to the registrar & merchants. Plffs. filed their particulars of claim, amounting to £339 15s. 7d., but the parties ultimately agreed the damages at £226 5s. On motion on behalf of plffs. to condemn defts. & their bail in that amount, with interest, & in the costs of the action, defts. contended plffs. were not entitled to their costs, as the amount recovered was under the statutory ct. ct. limit of £300, & the action ought to have been brought in a ct. ct.:—Held: (1) the discretion of the ct. in allowing or refusing costs depended upon whether, considering the facts & circumstances of the particular case, plffs. had acted properly & reasonably in bringing their action in the High Ct.; (2) considering the size of the vessels, the nature of the collision, the length of time the hearing lasted, & the judgment pronounced, this was a proper case to be tried in the High Ct.; (3) plffs. were entitled to their costs.—THE SALT BURN, [1892] P. 333; 69 L. 1366. — — — — ——In an action of collision in the Admlty. Div. defts. gave bail in the sum of £600, & after the pleadings had been closed they admitted liability. Plffs. then filed a claim in the registry for £330, & the action was eventually settled for £218. The ct., in its discretion, allowed plffs. costs on the High Ct. scale, though the amount recovered did not exceed £300, as it thought that the case was rightly brought in the High Ct.—THE EMDEN (1907), 23 T. L. R. 546.

1367. — Costs of action—Costs of reference.—Defts. in an action for damage, before any statement of claim had been delivered, admitted their liability for the damage proceeded for, & by consent the question of amount was by an order of ct. referred to the registrar & merchants to report thereon. At the reference before the registrar plffs. claimed as damages £295 18s. 4d. The registrar reported to the ct. that there was due to plffs. £190 18s. 6d. Afterwards plffs. moved the judge to condemn defts. in the costs of the action & of the reference. Evidence was given on affidavit in support of the motion to the effect that plffs. at the time their action was instituted were liable for a claim for salvage in respect of services rendered to their vessel after the collision, & that subsequently & before the reference £60 had been paid & accepted in settlement of such claim:—Held: (1) the ct. had juris-

Cts. Admlty. B. Before the Judicature Acts.

1369. County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (c. 71), s. 9.—Amount recovered—Not amount claimed.]—An action was brought in the Ct. of Queen's Bench, in which an amount less than £300 was claimed in the particulars of demand for damage by collision, & a further sum not exceeding £300, for salvage services, & further sums for depreciation in value of the ship & for demurrage, amounting on the whole to more than £300. Deft. paid £254 12s. 10d. into ct. in respect of the claim for damage by collision, which plff. accepted in full satisfaction, & entered noll. pros. as to the rest:—Held: (1) plff.'s right to costs depended upon the amount recovered, not the amount inserted in the particulars of demand; (2) £254 12s. 10d. was recovered in the action; (3) plffs. were not entitled to costs.—HEWITT v. CORY (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 418; 39 L. J. Q. B. 279; 22 L. T. 666; 18 W. R. 954; 3 Mar. L. C. 425.

1370. — Proceeding without leave.]—A plff. proceeding without leave in a superior ct. for damages to his ship by a barge (propelled by oars only) taking judgment by default, & having his damages assessed by a sheriff at an amount under £300, is not entitled to his costs.—PURKIS v. FLOWER, No. 478, ante; No. 1723,

For full anns., see S. C. No. 478, ante.

1371. — Proceeding with leave.]—When a suit has been already commenced in the Admlty. 1372. — — —.]—Scmble: even where leave is given to proceed in the High Ct. under the above Act the High Ct. is not thereby precluded from condemning plff. in costs, if at the hearing of the cause it should appear the cause was improperly instituted in the ct.—THE JOHN EVANS, Nos. 1739, 1746.

1373. — Certifying for costs of action—Costs of reference.]—A ship was damaged by another outward bound, & the owners of the injured vessel, in the bonâ fide belief their damage was greater than it was, instituted a suit in the Admlty. Ct. & arrested the ship for a large amount, but accepted bail & released the ship at once on ascertaining their actual damage; defts. admitted liability, & the damage was referred to the registrar; the claim made by plffs. was a little over £300, but the registrar reduced the amount claimed by more than one-third, & made no report as to costs. On application by plffs., the ct. certified for the costs of the suit under the above Act, but condemned plffs. in the costs of the reference.—THE NAOMI (1875), 32 L. T. 836; 23 W. R. 387; 2 Asp. M. L. C. 588.

1374. — — — Amount awarded.]—A salvage suit was brought in the Admlty. Ct. & a sum of £282 was recovered. The agreed value of the property saved was £2,200; plffs.' claim was for £700; there was considerable conflict of testimony as to the degree of meritoriousness of plffs.' service, & questions of some difficulty arose:—Held: having regard especially, but not solely, to the smallness of the difference between the sum awarded & the limit of the jurisdiction of the ct. ct., the case was proper for a certificate to entitle plffs. to costs.—THE HICKMAN, No. 992, ante.

1375. — — — Saving of expense.]—Although a suit for salvage might have been tried in a ct. ct. the judge of the Admlty. Ct. will certify for costs if it be less expensive to try there than in the ct. ct.—THE BEAUMARIS CASTLE (1871), 40 L. J. Adm. 41; 24 L. T. 448; 1 Asp. M. L. C. 19.

On the question of costs:—Held: (1) the limitation as to costs in the above Act extended only to cases where the service was performed within the limits of the United Kingdom, i.e., within 3 miles of the coast; (2) beyond that distance the ct. would exercise its discretion as to giving costs having regard to the sum awarded.—THE ACTIF (1857), Sw. 237; 29 L. 1388. ————.]—Pltf., one of several salvors, sued for salvage services rendered in the United Kingdom. Defts. tendered, by act of ct., £40, "with costs up to time of tender," which pltf. refused. Defts. then resisted the claim partly on the question of amount, & partly on the ground (which they failed to support) that pltf. had been party to a settlement of the whole claim with one of the co-salvors. The ct. overruled the tender & gave £100:—Held: (1) notwithstanding the question of agreement, the case was not a fit one to be tried in the superior ct.; (2) the ct. would not certify for costs under the above Act; (3) notwithstanding the form of tender, pltf. was not entitled to his costs up to the time of tender.—THE COMTE NESSELROOD (1862), Lush. 454; 31 L. SECT. 17.—REFERENCE TO THE REGISTRAR AND MERCHANTS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—THE REFERENCE.

1390. Matters referred — Bottomry — Excessive charges.]—In all actions of bottomry it is the settled law & practice of the ct. to refer questions of excessive charges, whether for repairs, commissions, or premiums, to the registrar, assisted by merchants, to report upon.—THE PONTIDA (1884), 9 P. D. 177; 53 L. J. P. 78; 51 L. T. 849; 33 W. R. 38; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 330, C. A. S. C. Nos. 1411, 1422, post.

1392. ———— Premiums.]—In a cause of bottomry in pœnam the ct., judging the premium to be excessive, will refer it to the registrar & merchants to be reduced.—THE HUNTLEY (1860), Lush. 24.

1394. ———— Validity in question—General reference for report.]—Where the validity of a bottomry bond was contested upon the grounds (1) there was no necessity for a bond of bottomry, (2) the bond was vitiated personalis exceptione of the lender, (3) some of the items in the bond consisted of simple contract debts bought up from the ship's creditors at a discount of about 50 per cent., the bond was generally referred to the registrar & merchants to report thereon.—THE OCEAN (1846), 2 Wm. Rob. 429; 4 Notes of Cases, 410; 10 Jur. 504.

1395. ———— Scope of reference.]—A bondholder submitted that it was not usual to refer to the registrar & merchants accounts that had not been exhibited in the cause:—Held: (1) it was proper that the accounts should be audited; (2) if the bondholder was affected, it was open to him to make an application to the ct. at a future time.—THE NELSON (1823), 1 Hag. Adm. 169.

For full anns., see SHIPPING & NAVIGATION.

1396. ———— Reference refused.]—Where a bottomry bond is admitted to be drawn in legal form & entitled to payment, the parties are bound by the terms of agreement; & the ct. will not refer the matter to the registrar & merchants to make such deduction on account of the rate of exchange as is made in ordinary cases of mercantile negotiation.—THE JANE VILET (1827), 2 Hag. Adm. 92.

1397. — Collision—Duty of registrar.]—In case of collision the owners often avail themselves of the opportunity of doing other repairs, which may then be effected at less expense to themselves. If they attempt to include these other repairs in the amount of damage done, they are guilty of fraud; but if they simply avail themselves of that opportunity, without injury to the persons who pay for the repairs consequent on the collision, no blame is imputable to them; but the registrar & merchants should exercise their vigilance, & see that no greater charge is made against deft. than he is justly entitled to pay.—THE ALFRED, Nos. 1185, 1204, ante; Nos. 1416, 1423, post.

Annotation:—Held. The Princess (1885), 52 L. T. 932. For full anns., see S. C. No. 1423, post.

1398. — Consequential damages—How far referred.]—It is not the invariable practice of the Admty. Div. in cases of damage to refer questions of consequential damage to the registrar & merchants. The ct. will in each case consider whether the question of consequential damage is one which ought to be decided by the ct. itself, with the assistance of the Elder Brethren of the Trinity House, or referred to the registrar & merchants. The ct. will be influenced in coming to its decision by economical considerations, & by the presence of questions requiring for their decision the nautical knowledge of the Elder Brethren.—THE MAID OF KENT (1881), 6 P. D. 178; 50 L. J. P. 71; 45 L. T. 718; 29 W. R. 897; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 476.

1399. — Defendant's remedy cross-action, not reference in original action.]—Where, in an action of collision, a decree has been made of both vessels to blame, the ct. will not refer the damage of both vessels to the registrar, but will leave deft. to bring his cross-action, notwithstanding the ship of pltf. perished in the collision, & pltf. resides out of the jurisdiction.—THE NORTH AMERICAN (1859), Sw. 466. S. C. No. 1271, ante.

1400. Reference not ordered—Unless something clearly due.]—In Admty. proceedings, where a ship is arrested on a specific demand, before a reference of accounts to the registrar & merchants can be ordered, it must be shown to the ct. that something is due, although the actual amount may be the proper subject of inquiry. The practice differs from a reference by an equity ct. on an unsettled account, where the ct. directs an account to be taken, leaving it to be shown by the result on which side the balances lie.—THE TWENTY, No. 330, ante.

1401. — Where court can dispose of matter.]—A reference to the registrar as to damages will not be ordered in a salvage case, where the ct. can satisfactorily dispose of the question.—THE ELEONORE, Nos. 754, 773, ante.

1402. Evidence by affidavit—Cross-examination—Deponent abroad.]—Under R. S. C., O. 37, r. 2, which enables the evidence in references in Admty. actions to be given by affidavit, it is in the discretion of the registrar to refuse, if he thinks fit, to give weight to such evidence unless & until the deponent has been cross-examined on his affidavit, & where the deponent is a party to the action, he may, though resident abroad, be required to attend in England for such cross-examination.—THE PARISIAN (1887), 13 P. D. 16; 57 L. J. P. 13; 58 L. T. 92; 36 W. R. 704; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 249.

1403. Offer to avoid litigation—Not binding.]—Where a rough & very low estimate has been made of the damage & loss sustained by collision, & offered to be accepted in order to avoid litigation, the registrar & merchants ought not to take this as binding upon the suffering party, but should ascertain the actual amount of a complete indemnity to him.—THE TWO SISTERS (1853), 1 Ecc. & Ad. 99.

SUB-SECT. 2.—REGISTRAR'S REPORT AND OBJECTIONS THERETO.

A. Registrar's Report.

1404. Based on practical knowledge—Not subject to strict rules of evidence.]—The proceedings before the registrar & merchants are summary, not bound by strict rules of evidence.—THE BLACK PRINCE, Nos. 1424, 1427, 1464, 1477, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 1424, post.

1405. — Evidence as to damage—Not conclusive.]—On a reference in a collision action the registrar & merchants are not bound by uncontradicted evidence as to the amount of damage done, but entitled to use their own judgment & experience, & find in accordance therewith.—THE BERNINA (1886), 55 L. T. 781; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 65.

For full anns., see SHIPPING & NAVIGATION.

1406. Special report unnecessary—Allowing item to stand sufficient.]—The report of the registrar & merchants need not be special upon every particular matter; it is sufficient when they allow the item to stand.—THE OCEAN (1846), 2 Wm. Rob. 465; 4 Notes of Cases, 583; 10 Jur. 504. S. C. No. 1240, ante.

B. Special Case.

1407. When registrar may state.]—The registrar may state a special case on the question whether the evidence before him is sufficient.—THE JOHN BELLAMY (1870), L. R. 3 A. & E. 129; 39 L. J. Adm. 28; 22 L. T. 244; 3 Mar. L. C. 360.

C. Objections to Registrar's Report.

(a) Procedure.

1408. Time for objection—Extension—Failure to object within time.]—A report of the registrar & merchants does not necessarily stand confirmed by reason of defts. failing to take objection thereto within the time provided for in Admty. Ct. Rules, 1859, r. 117, so as absolutely to entitle pl. fs. to payment to them by defts. of a sum of money which the ct. is of opinion ought not to have been allowed them in the report.

The ct. has power to extend the time within which objection to the report of the registrar & merchants may be taken.—THE THYATIRA (1883), 49 L. T. 713; 32 W. R. 276; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 178.

1409. — Only on special grounds.]—The ct. will not extend the time for objecting to the registrar's report in a co-ownership action without

1398 l. — Consequential damages—How far referred.]—Upon the liquidation of an account by registrar & merchants in a case of collision for damages done by a ship to a wharf:—

Held: a claim for consequential damages not asked for in the libel nor awarded by a decree, could not be considered by the registrar & merchants, & if it had been, such damages could not be allowed by art. 1660 (1) of the Code nor by the maritime law.—RE THE BARCELONA, p. 142, c, ante.—CAN.

special grounds being shown by the party seeking to object.—GOWAN v. SPROTT, Nos. 1412, 1434, post.

1410. Mode of objection.—An appeal from a report of the registrar cannot be made by motion, except by consent of both parties.—THE EDMOND (1860), Lush. 211; 2 L. T. 521.

For full anns., see SHIPPING & NAVIGATION.

1411. Office copy of report necessary.—When the registrar's report is disputed, the objecting party must take an office copy of the registrar's notes at the reference.—THE PONTIDA, No. 1390, ante; No. 1422, post.

1412. Action in district registry—Report of district registrar—Objections—Procedure.—Where an action is instituted in an Admty. District Registry by part-owners of a ship against the managing owner thereof for an account, & the writ claims an account under R. S. C., O. 3, r. 8, & an order for the filing of the accounts is made under O. 15, r. 1, & the account is proceeded with pursuant to order, & the district registrar reports thereon, such report is to be treated as the usual report in an Admty. Ct. action, & if deft. seeks to take objection thereto, he must do so according to O. 58, r. 11, otherwise plffs. will be entitled to judgment thereon, as it is too late to take objection to the district registrar making such order after he has reported, there having been no appeal against such order.—GOWAN v. SPROTT (1884), 51 L. T. 266; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 288. S. C. No. 1409, ante; No. 1434, post.

1413. Objection in general terms—Right of party objecting.—Semble: where an objection to a registrar's report is taken in general terms as to the whole of an item allowed, it is open to the party objecting to seek to have part of the item disallowed.—THE CITY OF PEKING, No. 1627, post.

(b) Weight to be given to Report.

1414. Report—Opinion of qualified persons.—The report of the registrar & merchants is in its nature partly legal & partly mercantile. It is a report proceeding from persons qualified, in both these respects, to form a sound judgment on the subject before them: one of them being, from his connection with cts. of justice, supposed capable of forming his own opinion, & of assisting his associates on all questions of law in the first instance subject to inspection & correction of the ct., whilst the other part of this domestic forum consists of persons acquainted with trade, & exercising their judgment on matters relative to commerce.—THE HAABET (1800), 2 Ch. Rob. 174.

1416. Presumption in favour of report.—The ct. is disposed in the first instance to receive the report of the registrar & merchants with the strongest desire to believe it is correctly made; but if the ct. differs from the registrar & merchants, it will follow the dictates of its own mind.—THE ALFRED (1850), Nos. 1185, 1204, 1397, ante; No. 1423, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 1438, post.

1418. —.]—The report of the registrar & merchants is not an order of the ct., but is simply a report to the ct., and the ct. is not bound by the decision of the registrar & merchants on a question of fact, e.g., the abandonment of a vessel by the owners.—THE WALLSEND, [1907] P. 302; 76 L. J. P. 131; 96 L. T. 851; 10 Asp. M. L. C. 476.

1419. —. Until proved to be wrong.]—The ct. will not interfere with the report of the registrar & merchants unless fully convinced they are in error.—THE CLYDE (1856), Sw. 23; 5 L. T. 240. S. C. No. 1476, post.

1420. —. —.]—Great trust is to be reposed in the registrar & merchants, who have greater practical knowledge upon these subjects than the ct.; & to induce the ct. to support objections to their report, the affirmative of proving the report is wrong must be clearly substantiated by those who object.—THE GLENMANNA (1860), Lush. 115. The examination of the accounts is conducted by persons of great experience in those matters, competent to the duty they undertake, & careful in discharge of it.—THE EDMOND (EDMUND) (1860), Lush. 57; 59 L. J. P. M. & A. 76.

1422. —. —.]—The registrar & merchants have a discretionary power to reduce items claimed under a bottomry bond, should they deem them unnecessary or exorbitant, & the ct. will not interfere with this discretion unless it be shown the registrar & merchants have exercised it on an erroneous principle.—THE PONTIDA, Nos. 1390, 1411, ante.

1423. Court to decide independently.]—In considering objections to the report of the registrar & merchants in a cause of damage, the ct. forms its opinion upon the whole of the evidence, whether laid before the registrar & merchants, or brought in subsequently; & will, although inclined to confirm the report, especially in matters within the practical knowledge of the merchants, direct the report to be reformed.—THE ALFRED (1850), *Wm. 1424. —.]—The presumption is always in favour of the report of the registrar & merchants, on account of their special knowledge of mercantile affairs, particularly as to the usual gains made by ships, losses arising from detention & the amount of expenses necessary to be incurred in making good damage received. But a right of appeal exists to the Admty. Ct., whose duty it is to pass an independent judgment upon the case submitted.

1428. —.]—The new rules made pursuant to Admty. Ct. Acts, 1840 (cc. 65, 66), & Admty. Ct. Act, 1854 (c. 78) (repealed), do not restrain the judge of the Admty. Ct. from admitting in his discretion fresh evidence when the case comes before him upon objections to the report of the registrar & merchants upon a reference to them to ascertain the amount of damage.—THE FLYING FISH (1865), 3 Moo. The affidavit in support of a motion for leave to produce further evidence, where the object is to vary the evidence already given, should be clear & precise as to the witnesses it is proposed to call, & the nature of their testimony. The affidavit of a witness, who is not tendered for cross-examination, & deposes to a fact material to the inquiry before the registrar & merchants, should be filed before the hearing. The adjournment of the hearing of a motion for counsel's convenience does not preclude the parties making the motion from filing & using a further affidavit.—THE THURINGIA (1871), 41 L. J. 1430. Courses open to the court.—]—There are three courses open to the ct. with respect to objections to a report: (1) to confirm the report, if the objections are unfounded; (2) to send it back to the registrar & merchants; (3) to make, on its own authority, such alterations therein as it may think fit.—THE HEBE (1847), 5 Notes of Cases, 176.

Correction of report—Erroneous view of evidence.—]—In a cause of limitation of liability arising out of a collision, where the fund in ct. being insufficient to satisfy the claims against it, a reference has been made to the registrar & merchants to assess the damages as to time & rate, the ct. will review the registrar's report & correct it, if it should appear that any portions of the report are founded on what the ct. deems to be an erroneous view of the evidence.—THE CITY OF BUENOS AYRES (1871), 25 L. T. 672; 1 Asp. M. L. C. 169.

1438. — On expert advice.—]—In a difficult case of objection to the report of the registrar & merchants partly requiring the knowledge of a shipwright or surveyor of shipping, the judge may select a merchant & surveyor to assist him in reconsidering their report, & give personal attendance.—THE SIR GEORGE SEYMOUR, Nos. 1417, 1435, ante.

granted by the registrar & merchants in another form, an act on petition contesting the report in this particular was overruled.—THE QUEBEC (1878), 4 Q. L. R. 101.—CAN.

& debts.' s.s. were referred to the registrar, assisted by merchants, to assess the amount thereof on the basis of debts, paying 95 per cent. of the assessed damages. By the schedule to the assistant registrar's report the amount claimed in respect of the "value of the hull, machinery & electric fittings & batteries of the submarine at the time of her loss," was £35,000, of which £26,500 was allowed; but on motion by debts. to vary the report, on the ground that the sum of £26,500 was excessive, the President reduced the amount to £23,850. On appeal:—Held: the sum of £26,500 must stand, as it was arrived at by the assistant registrar & merchants upon evidence produced by both sides, & was varied by the President only upon the question of quantum, for an appellate tribunal does not review a figure so found unless in very exceptional circumstances, such as the detection of an error of principle, or an obvious mistake in the calculation, or a clear misunderstanding of evidence lying at the root of the assessment.—THE AMERIKA, [1914] P. 167; 83 L. SUB-SECT. 3.—COSTS.

A. Since the Judicature Acts.

1440. Successful party entitled to costs—Reference treated as separate litigation.—The costs of the reference as to damages in an action of damages do not follow the costs of the action, but are in the discretion of the judge as costs of a fresh litigation. Where an action is brought by the owners of a ship & owners of cargo laden on board it jointly against another ship for damages arising from collision, & both vessels are found to blame, & as a consequence no order is made as to costs of the action, & each ship pays a moiety of the damage of the other, those plffs. who are owners of the cargo are entitled to costs against debts. of proving their claim in a reference before the registrar & merchants.—THE CONSETT (1880), 5 P. D. 77; 42 L. T. 33; 28 W. R. 622; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 230, C. A.

Annotations:—Fold, The Savernake (1880), 5 P. D. 166; The Mary (1882), 7 P. D. 201.

1441. ———.]—An action of damage was brought by the owners of the ship V. against the ship S., & the owners of the S. claimed damages by way of counterclaim against the V. At the hearing of the action the ct. found both ships to blame for the collision, condemned the owners of each ship in a moiety of the damage sustained by the other, referred the question of damages to the registrar & merchants, & made no order as to costs. Afterwards the owners of the S. brought their counterclaim into the registry. No tender was made by the owners of the V., & the registrar struck off less than one-ninth of the amount claimed, but made no recommendation as to costs of the reference. On application of the owners of the S. the ct. condemned the owners of the V. in the costs of & incident to the reference.—THE SAVERNAKE (SEVERN-NAKE) (1880), 5 P. D. 166; 49 L. J. P. 71; 29 W. R. 123; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 34, n.

1442. ———.]—Claim & counterclaim—Less than one-fourth struck off.—In cases of collision, where both vessels are held to blame, & the amount of damage is referred to the registrar, & less than one-fourth is struck off the respective claim & counterclaim of plffs. & debts., the costs of substantiating plffs.' claim at the reference will be borne by debts., & of debts.' counterclaim at the reference by plffs.—THE MARY (1882), 7 P. D. 201; 48 L. T. 28; 31 W. R. 248; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 33.

1443. Excessive claim—More than one-third struck off—Costs awarded to defendant.—Where more than one third of the claim is struck off at a reference, the ct. will consider itself bound by the rules of practice as to costs, & condemn plff. in the costs of the reference, notwithstanding hardships in the particular case.—THE ENGLISHMAN, No. 1359, ante.

1444. ———.]—Part of original claim withdrawn—No costs.—Where plff. in a reference in a collision action withdraws a large item of his claim at the reference & not before, & he recovers less than two-thirds of the amount originally claimed, but more than two-thirds of the amount which remains after his withdrawal of the above item, the original amount of his claim before withdrawal is the claim upon which costs are to be given & he is not entitled to his costs.—THE EILEAN DUBH (1883), 49 L. T. 444; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 154.

1445. ———.]—Costs awarded to plaintiff.—Where plff. claimed unliquidated damages in respect of loss of the remainder of a season's fishing occasioned by a collision, & on a reference to the registrar & merchants debts. objected to the claim altogether, but plff. recovered, being awarded less than two-thirds of the amount claimed by him as damages, the ct. gave him costs in respect of the reference on the ground of the peculiarity of plff.'s claim, without prejudice to the general rule as to costs of reference.—THE GLEANER (1878), 38 L. T. 650; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 582.

1447. ———.]—No general rule—Discretion.—As by R. S. C., O. 65, r. 1, the costs of all proceedings are in the discretion of the ct., the general rule of practice in the Admty. Ct. as to the costs of reference, namely, that when more than a fourth is struck off a claim, each party pays his own costs, & when more than a third claimant pays the other party's costs, is wrong, & the ct. must exercise its discretion according to the circumstances of each particular case. The Empress Eugenie, No. 1471, post, overd.—THE FRIEDERBERG (1885), 10 P. D. 112; 54 L. J. P. 75; 52 L. T. 837; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 426; 33 W. R. 687, C. A.

1448. Tender—Effect of—On costs of reference.—Plff. claimed as damages for collision the sum of £501 12s. 9d., of which £237 4s. 3d. was claimed in respect of demurrage. Debts. tendered the sum of £385 in satisfaction. On the reference the registrar allowed the sum of £393 1s. 3d. in respect of the claim, of which £136 represented demurrage, but, on the ground that the amount allowed exceeded the tender by only £8, directed each party to pay a moiety of the reference fees, & to bear its own costs from the time of the tender, plffs. being entitled to the costs previous thereto:—Held: the ct. would not interfere with the registrar's exercise of discretion.—THE DANIA (1901), 18 T. L. R. 159.

1449. Limitation of liability—Costs of reference.]

Sect. 17.—Reference to the registrar & merchants:

—In a collision cause, although defts. is entitled upon admission of liability & payment into ct. of the amount of his liability under M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 54, to a stay of proceedings as against himself, plffs. having separate interests may, at d. ft.'s cost, proceed to a reference to settle the respective amounts due to them, & may tax their costs.—THE EXPERT (1877), 36 L. T. 258; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 381.

1450. — When not allowed.]—In a limitation action shipowners & cargo owners both claimed against the fund in ct. At the usual reference the cargo owners disputed some part of the shipowners' claim, which was in consequence considerably reduced. The cargo owners contended that they were entitled to recover all the costs incurred by them on the reference in disputing the shipowners' claim from the owners of the s.s. as part of the necessary costs of establishing their respective claims. The District Registrar taxed the costs de bene esse, but referred the question of the liability of plffs. for the costs of settling the disputed items of the claims to the judge:—Held: plffs. in the limitation action not liable for such costs.—THE PONCE (1879), 4 Asp. M. L. C. 185 n. (a).

1451. — Discretion of registrar.]—In a limitation of liability suit plffs. objected to certain items of defts.' claim for damage to cargo sustained in consequence of collision, upon the ground that a large proportion of the damage was owing to defts.' failure to use due diligence after the collision to minimise the damage. The registrar found that plffs.' objections were well founded & allowed only a portion of defts.' claim, & ordered each party to pay his own costs of the reference. From this order defts. appealed by motion:—Held: (1) though there is a general rule of practice that plff. in a limitation of liability suit must pay the costs, that practice is not invariable; (2) the registrar has discretion in a proper case to make such order as to costs as he thinks just; (3) his order was right.—THE RIJNSTROOM, [1899] W. N. 33; 80 L. T. 422; 8 Asp. M. L. C. 538.

1452. — Costs of objection to report.]—In an action of limitation of liability, where there were claims for loss of life & personal injury & for loss of or damage to goods, & the claims for loss of life & personal injury exceeded the amount of plffs.' liability not available for distribution amongst claimants for loss of or damage to goods, the registrar, after marshalling the whole of the claims of all kinds so as to throw on to the amount solely available for loss of life & personal injury claims such equal & proportionate parts of each loss of life & personal injury claim as absorbed the whole of the amount so available, reported that that part of the fund in ct. against which goods claimants were also entitled to claim ought to be distributed rateably between goods claimants & loss of life & personal injury claimants in the same proportions that the claims for loss of or damage to goods bore to the unsatisfied portions of the claims for loss of life & personal injury. The report was objected to by certain defts. on the ground that claimants for loss of life & personal injury ought not, in respect of any portion of their claims, to rank against the fund in ct. available to satisfy pro tant claimants for loss of or damage to goods:—Held: (1) the report of the registrar was correct, & must be affirmed; (2) in the special circumstances, the costs of objection to the report must be borne by plffs.—THE VICTORIA No. 1547, post.

For full anns., see S. C., No. 1547, post.

B. Before the Judicature Acts.

1453. Bottomry—Bondholder entitled to costs—General rule—Exception.]—The rule which applies to references in causes of collision does not apply to causes of bottomry. In a cause of bottomry, where the bond is admitted to be valid, & referred to the registrar & merchants to report the amount due, plff. is usually entitled to the general costs of the reference, but will be condemned in costs clearly occasioned by improperly persisting in claims which cannot be sustained. Where the reference was adjourned to produce further evidence in relation to certain items on each of which the bondholders subsequently failed:—Held: the bondholder must pay costs occasioned by the adjournment.—THE KEPLER (1861), Lush. 201.

1454. — — — — —.]—In a case in which the ct. was of opinion that the bondholder had acted most meritoriously for the common interest of all parties on the question of costs:—Held: no fraud being proved against him & the opposition to the bond being unjust & very ungracious, costs should be given.

The charges that the registrar has disallowed do not give a character of fraud to any part of this transaction. The title of the party therefore to his costs upon the general proceedings is not vitiated, but I shall make no order as to those which may have been incurred by the discussion of the registrar's report; it was fairly brought to my notice, & on the matter of costs the parties must have come before the ct. (LORD STOWELL).—THE TARTAR (1822), 1 Hag. Adm. 1.

Annotations:—Refd. The Staffordshire (1871), 25 L. T. 137. Mentd. The Atlas (1827), 2 Hag. Adm. 48; Weston v. Foster (1836), 5 L. J. C. P. 242; The Emancipation (1840), 1 Wm. Rob. 121; Stainbank v. Fenning (1851), 11 C. B. 51.

1455. — — — — —.]—A bottomry bond was pronounced valid in part & invalid as to the rest, & was referred to the registrar & merchants to report on certain items which were allowed as claimed. The bondholder claimed the costs of the reference as the report was in favour of the whole sum:—Held: the costs must be allowed.—THE HEART OF OAK (1841), 1 Notes of Cases, 114.

1456. — — — — —.]—Prima facie a bondholder establishing his bond is entitled to his costs. Where, however, the general validity of the bond is established, & upon a reference a large deduction is made, & the report is confirmed by the ct., the bondholder will not be entitled to his costs in the original suit. The party opposing the bond in the original suit, having made various charges against the bondholder which were not established, was held disentitled to his costs in the original suit; but the costs of the reference were decreed to him.—THE GAUNTLET (1849), 3 Wm. Rob. 167; 7 Notes of Cases, 41; 13 Jur. 413.

1458. — — — — —.]—Where a bond is pronounced for, & upon being referred to the registrar & merchants large deductions are made in the report, the party setting up the bond will be liable to the costs of the reference. Semble: the main consideration in the judgment of the ct. will be the amount of the sum deducted in proportion to the sum claimed.—THE CATHERINE (1847), 3 Wm. Rob. 1; 5 Notes of Cases, 398; 10 L. T. O. S. 35; 11 Jur. 739.

1459. S. P. THE SHAMROCK, No. 1408, post.

1460. Wages—Rule applicable.]—The rule obtaining in references in causes of collision that if the registrar strikes off more than one-third of pltf.'s claim pltf. shall be condemned in the costs of the reference does not apply to a reference in a cause of master's wages; but the ct. will decide equitably according to the circumstances of the particular case.

In a reference in a cause of master's wages more than one-third was struck off the master's claim, & more than one-third struck off the owner's counterclaim, & a balance declared due to the master:—Held: each party should pay his own costs.—THE LEMUELLA (1860), Lush. 147; 30 L. J. P. M. & A. 1.

1461. ———.]—Upon a report made by the registrar in a cause of master's wages, the ct. will not determine the incidence of the costs of the reference by any fixed rule, but according to the circumstances.

Pltf. suing for wages claimed £1,557 10s. 6d., & refused a tender by defts. of £150; defts. thereupon set up a counterclaim of £1,571 13s. 6d., & the accounts were referred to the registrar & merchants, who found £413 1s. 5d. due to pltf.:—Held: pltf. must pay the costs of the reference.—THE WILLIAM (1861), Lush. 199.

1462. Collision—Plaintiff entitled to costs—Though excessive amount claimed—Special circumstances.]—There is no absolute rule of practice in the Admty. Ct. that pltf.'s costs of a reference in a collision cause shall be disallowed when more than one-fourth of pltf.'s claim is struck off.

Where pltf.'s claim was reduced by more than one-fourth, but the claim was made out in a fair spirit, & deft. had underestimated the damage much more than pltf. overestimated it, pltf.'s costs of the reference were allowed him.—THE AMELIA (1870), 23 L. T. 544; 19 W. R. 216; 3 Mar. L. C. 505.

1463. ———.]—The claim made by pltf's. involved investigation of salvage expenses to a great amount incurred in consequence of collision. The registrar disallowed more than one-third of pltf's. claim, the greater portion of the items so disallowed being expenses with reference to the salvage which were not chargeable as between pltf's. & deft.:—Held: (1) the usual rule as to costs of reference should not prevail in this case; (2) pltf's. were entitled to their costs.—THE BERBICE (1857), 6 L. T. 106; 1 Mar. L. C. 203.

1464. ——— No costs—Both parties in wrong.]—Where at the reference both parties were in the wrong:—Held: each party must bear his own costs.—THE BLACK PRINCE, Nos. 1404, 1424, 1427, ante; No. 1477, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 1424, ante.

1465. ——— Excessive claim.]—Costs of reference to the registrar & merchants are not allowed so far as applies to excessive demands.—THE NEW UNION v. THE PANTHER (1853), 5 L. T. 240.

1466. ———.]—As a general rule, where one-third is taken by the registrar & merchants off the amount claimed, the party who has the third taken off is condemned in costs of the reference. In this case each party was left to pay his own costs, as the registrar & merchants took off £5 less than one-third of the claim.—THE FIDELIA (1858), 5 L. T. 240; Shipping Gazette, May 17.

1467. ———.]—On a reference to the registrar & merchants in a damage cause more than one-fourth & less than one-third of pltf.'s claim having been disallowed:—Held: each party must pay his own costs.—THE PEERLESS (1862), 6 L. T. 107; 1 Mar. L. C. 206.

1468. ——— Plaintiff liable for costs—Excessive claim.]—The amount of damage had been referred to the registrar & merchants, who reduced pltf.'s claim from £1,375 to £300. On their report being confirmed:—Held: pltf. must be condemned in costs of the reference.—THE SHAMROCK (1849), 7 Notes of Cases, 112. S. C. No. 1459, ante.

1469. ———.]—Pltf. was condemned in costs of the reference in consequence of large deductions made by the registrar & merchants from his claim for damage sustained by collision.—THE CYNTHIA ANN (1853), 17 Jur. 768.

1470. ———.]—When a large proportion of the damage claimed is disallowed, & the registrar's report is not objected to, claimant must pay the whole costs of reference.—THE J. J. HATHORN (1858), 4 Jur. N. S. 790.

1471. ——— Though plaintiff falls on point of law.]—The ordinary rule in causes of collision that pltf. shall pay costs of the reference to the registrar & merchants, if their report disallows more than one-third of his claim, is not to be relaxed, even if pltf. fails in substantiating his entire claim upon a question of law only.—THE EMPRESS EUGENIE (1860), Lush. 138.

Annotation:—Overd. The Friedberg (1885), 10 P. D. 112, C. A.

1472. ——— Conduct of plaintiffs conducing to loss.]—Seemle: where an exorbitant claim is made before the registrar & merchants for the value of the injured vessel, & the abandonment is held unjustifiable, pltf's. will be condemned in costs of the reference.—THE THURINGIA (1872), 41 L. J. Adm. 44; 26 L. T. 446; 1 Asp. M. L. C. 283.

1473. ——— Effect of insufficient tender.]—Where the amount of damage in a cause of collision is referred to the registrar & merchants, & a tender is made by deft. but not accepted by pltf., if the amount pronounced to be due is less than two-thirds of pltf.'s claim, but exceeds the tender of deft., pltf. is liable for general costs of the reference, but deft. for costs occasioned by his making an insufficient tender.—THE SEINE (1859), Sw. 513; 1 L. T. 340.

1474. ——— Costs of particular items.]—The claim made in a damage cause was £3,121. The report allowed £1,736. A tender was made before the reference of £1,685. The four principal items disallowed amounted to £1,109. The claimants were condemned in costs of the reference as to these four items.—THE NIMROD (1853), 17 Jur. 767.

1475. ———.]—Where, on a reference to ascertain the amount of damages, pltf. included a claim for freight to which he was held not entitled:—Held: pltf., though entitled to the rest of the costs, must pay the costs occasioned by the claim for freight.—THE SOUTH SEA (1856), Sw. 141.

1476. Appeal from report—Costs of.]—In a case of doubt as to objections to the report of the registrar & merchants, no costs were allowed, although their report was affirmed.—THE CLYDE, No. 1419, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 1419, ante.

1477. ———.]—The costs of an appeal from the registrar's report follow the result, & do not depend upon the proportion of pltf.'s original claim which is finally disallowed.—THE BLACK PRINCE, Nos. 1404, 1424, 1427, 1464, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 1424, ante.

PART III. SECT. 17, SUB-SECT. 3.—B.

1460 i. Wages—Rule applicable.]—As a general rule, upon a reference to the registrar & merchants to take accounts in an Admty. suit, where one-fourth of promoter's claim is disallowed no costs of the reference will be given, & where one-third is disallowed resp. will be allowed his costs of the reference. But this rule does not apply to a suit for wages. Seemle: it is not usual to employ counsel in taking accounts before the registrar & merchants, & their costs will seldom be allowed.—THE ALBION, No. 363, il., ante.—AUS.

SECT. 18.—ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENT.

Amount recoverable—Collision.]—See SHIPPING & NAVIGATION.

1478. No rights given to third parties—Cost of repairs—Repairs not paid for.]—Where in the registrar's report in a collision action it appears that claimant claims, inter alia, as part of his damages the cost of repairing his ship, but has not paid the shipwright, & has since the repairs were effected become insolvent, & the registrar allows such item, the ct. has no power to do anything to ensure the money being paid over by claimant to the shipwright, & will not retain the money in the registry until claimant has given satisfactory evidence that he had paid the shipwright.—THE ENDEAVOUR (1800), 62 L. T. 840; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 511.

1479. Satisfaction—What is.]—Payment to seamen by shipowners before a shipping master is no satisfaction of wages pronounced for in a suit in the Admty. Ct.—THE ARAMINTA (1850), Sw. 81; 26 L. T. O. S. 317; 2 Jur. N. S. 310; 4 W. R. 306, C. A.

For full anns., see SHIPPING & NAVIGATION.

SUB-SECT. 2.—INTEREST.

1480. Awarded from date of loss.]—It is the settled practice of the Admty. Ct. to allow interest upon damages recovered in respect of a collision at sea, in the case of a vessel in ballast, from the date of the collision. The same rule will be followed by an equity ct. in suits instituted under M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 514.

A vessel proceeding homewards in ballast was run down by a steamer. The owners of the latter filed their bill, asking protection of the ct. under the above Act:—Held: they ought to pay into ct., not only the amount of damages for which they had been held liable by a judgment of the Admty. Ct., but also interest at 4 per cent. from the date of collision.—STRAKER v. HARTLAND (1864), 2 Hem. & M. 570; 5 New Rep. 163; 34 L. J. Ch. 122; 11 L. T. 622; 10 Jur. N. S. 1143; 2 Mar. L. C. 159; 71 E. R. 584.

1481. —.]—In an action brought in the Admty. Div. to recover unliquidated damages, plffs., if successful, are, in accordance with the practice of the Admty. Div., entitled to interest on the amount recovered from the date of the loss on which their claim is based, even where the claim is one which, before Jud. Acts, could not have been brought in the Admty. Ct.—THE GERTRUDE (1887), 57 L. T. 883; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 224.

1482. — Notwithstanding delay.]—In a collision action in rem not instituted till 12 years after the collision occurred, the ct., having held that the circumstances of the delay were not such as to preclude plffs. from recovering, although they might have proceeded earlier, gave plffs. interest for the 12 years on the damages awarded.—THE KONG MAGNUS, [1891] P. 223; 65 L. T. 231; 7 Asp. M. L. C. 64.

1483. — On judgment debt.]—Since the incorporation of the Admty. Ct. in the High Ct. of Justice, an award of salvage is a judgment debt, & as such bears interest from the date of entry of judgment, the taxed costs bearing interest from the date of signing of the allocatur.—THE JONES BROTHERS (1877), 46 L. J. P. 75; 37 L. T. 164; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 478.

1484. — Costs—Compound interest.]—In a cause of collision where payment of a sum for damage, interest, & costs reported to be due has been delayed by the party liable, the other party is entitled to interest on the whole sum from 15 days after the date of such report, & 53 Geo. 3, c. 159, s. 1, limiting the liability of owners to the value of the ship, appurtenances & freight, applies only to the original claim for damage & does not extend to costs & interest. Where interest is made up, it then becomes principal & bears interest as part of the principal. The costs to which the party is put are a part of his loss.—THE DUNDÉE (1827), 2 Hag. Adm. 137.

SUB-SECT. 3.—SALE.

Sale in interlocutory proceedings, see pp. 171, 172, ante.

1488. Sale of ship—Sale of cargo.]—Where in an action in rem for collision against ship & freight, in which defts.' ship was held solely to blame, the ship being still under arrest with the cargo on board, was ordered to be sold, the ct. on motion directed the marshal to discharge the cargo, to retain same in his custody as security for payment of the landing & other charges & freight, if any, due from the owners or consignees of the cargo in respect of same, & that in default of any application for delivery of the cargo within 14 days, the marshal should be authorised to sell such part of it as might be necessary to pay the charges & freight, if any, due.—THE GETTYSBURG (1885), 52 L. T. 60; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 347.

PART III. SECT. 18, SUB-SECT. 1.

a. Rights of Crown.]—The Crown invoking the aid of a Ct. of Admty. to enforce a maritime lien, is an ordinary suitor, & its rights must be determined by rules & principles applicable to all claims & suitors alike.

The Crown sued the owners of a steamship for damages to a Govt. canal occasioned by the ship colliding with the gates, but obtained judgment subsequent in date to one obtained by the master of the ship upon a claim for wages & disbursements accrued & made after the collision; such judgment was accorded priority over that of the Crown. Scmble: when the Crown pursues its remedy by writ of extent against the owners of a ship, it can only take under such writ the property of the debtor at the time the writ issued; & if the debtor assigned his property before that, the Crown can realise nothing under the writ in respect to the res.—R. v. THE CITY OF WINDSOR, SYMES v. THE CITY OF WINDSOR (1896), 5 EX. C. R. 223.—CAN.

PART III. SECT. 18, SUB-SECT. 2.

b. Awarded from date of suit.]—A promotor in an Admty. suit is entitled to interest at 5 per cent. from the date to the final decree.—THE ALBION, No. 363, ii. ante.—AUS.

1489. — Deductions from gross proceeds.]—Defts.' vessel having remained under arrest was sold in satisfaction of pltf's. claim for damage, to discharge which the gross proceeds were insufficient:—Held: (1) as against pltf's. claim the ex-duction from the gross proceeds; (2) defts. could not be called upon to repay them; (3) pltf's. were entitled to interest & costs.—THE EUROPA (1863), Brown. & Lush. 210; 3 New Rep. 216; 9 L. T. 701. 1 Mar. L. C. 420. S. C. No. 1408.

1490. — Effect of.]—In cases of sale under a decree of the ct., the transfer of the ship's register is not essential to validity of the purchaser's title. The title conferred by the ct. in the exercise of its authority in decreeing the sale is a sufficient title against the whole world.

A monition against the American consul to bring in the register of an American ship, sold at Liverpool in a cause of bottomry, was refused.—THE TREMONT (1841), 1 Wm. Rob. 163.

1491. — Prior petens.]—In an action by the owner of the damaged ship, & the owners of part of the cargo, the ship was condemned, damage for, reference to registrar & merchants as to the amount of damage, etc. On same day that that decree was made, the owners of other parts of the damaged cargo applied to be let in to share rateably in the proceeds of the condemned ship:—Held: the Admty. Ct., although it may, in certain cases, give weight to equitable considerations, had no equitable jurisdiction whereby it could, in the present case, decree a rateable distribution, & thereby take away the priority of the prior petens.—THE SARACEN, Nos. 61, 650, 1227, ante.

1492. — Position of other claimants — Difference between sale & bail.]—Of two pltf's. in a cause of damage the one obtaining the first decree is entitled to priority of payment from proceeds of the ship in ct. If pltf. in a second suit is apprehensive that the value of the ship & freight will not satisfy the whole claim for damage, he must apply to the ct. before any decree is pronounced. If the ship remains in the custody of the ct., & is sold by its decree to pay the damage, the ship is not liable to a second detention, being sold by the ct. free of all demands. Semble: (1) if bailed she may be arrested again at the suit of another claimant; (2) another claimant may proceed, either at common law or in the Admty. Ct., against the person.

Where a second pltf. has kept himself free from liability to costs, he cannot take the benefit of the decree in the first suit to the injury of the first pltf.—THE CLARA (1855), Sw. 1; 26 L. T. O. S. 165; 2 Jur. N. S. 46; 4 W. R. 180. S. C. No. 813, ante.

PART III. SECT. 18, SUB-SECT. 4.

1495 i. Payment out of court—Improper payment to ship's agents—Proper method.]—The proctor for the owners of a salvaged vessel paid to the proctor for the salvors the amount awarded to them, which, having been paid by him to the agents of the salvaging ship, had been by them made subject to a commission of 5 per cent. as against the salvors:—Held: this should not have been done, but the whole salvage money should have been paid into ct., & then paid out under its authority to the salvors in person, if they applied therefor, or if not, to their duly authorised agent.—THE RUNEBERG (1867), Y. A. D. 42.—CAN.

1495 ii. — Balance of fund for which warrant issued—Petition.]—The master of a ship, who claimed to be part owner, deft. in a suit for breach of contract, having a claim for wages & disbursements on the proceeds of the ship & cargo, which had been sold, moved for payment to him of the balance of the fund, for which the warrant had been issued:—Held: the master must file a petition.—THE JOSEPH

SUB-SECT. 4.—FUND IN COURT.

1493. Claim out of time—Rights of Crown.]—Where there is a fund in ct. which has been paid in under a decree for limitation of liability, the Crown is entitled to come in & prove against the fund like any other suitor. A claim against such fund is not necessarily barred by the fact that the time fixed by the ct. for bringing in claims has expired.—THE ZOE (1886), 11 P. D. 72; 55 L. J. P. 52; 54 L. T. 879; 35 W. R. 61; 5 Asp. M.

Power to direct issue.]—Defts. in their statement of claim in a limitation action admitted that a collision was in part caused by improper navigation of their vessel, & pltf's. in their defence did not notice this admission or otherwise refer to the cause of the collision. In an action by pltf's., the owners of cargo on board the other vessel, which was sunk in the collision, against defts.:—Held: (1) there was no admission on the pleadings by pltf's. as defts. in the limitation action which precluded them from claiming to prove against the fund paid into ct. in that action for the whole amount of their damage; (2) in support of their proof an issue might be directed between them & the owners of

1496. — Rescinded if made by mistake—Caveat—Costs.]—The rule that a suitor who first obtains a decree shall have priority in order of payment only applies where suitors are in pari conditions.

Where the ct. in a suit in rem has made, per incuriam, an order directing payment out of ct. to satisfy the claim of a suitor, the ct. has power before payment to vary or rescind the order.

Where pltf. in a cause of necessities obtains a decree, & the mtgees. neglect to enter a caveat until after the order for payment out of ct. has been made, the ct. will grant costs to pltf.—THE MARKLAND (1871), L. R. 3 A. & E. 340; 24 L. T. 596; 1 Asp. M. L. C. 44.

1495 iii. — Costs incurred paid before other payments.]—Where a party in an action in rem has incurred costs which have benefited not only but parties in other actions against the res, the costs so incurred by him will, if the proceeds of the property are insufficient to satisfy all claims in the various actions, be paid to him out of the fund in ct. before any other payment is made thereout.—*IL v. registrar as of course, but without such order he was not justified in giving his cheque on the bank to the party in whose favour the decree was pronounced. After the wages, etc., were pronounced for as above, but before any order of the ct. had issued in pursuance of the judgment, the moneys were attached in the hands of the registrar in an action in the Mayor's Ct. against the master:—Held: the moneys were not so attachable before order issued.—READ v. ANGELL (1856), 26 L. T. O. S. 316.

1498. Arrest of ship.—Salvage having been awarded against a vessel, the ct. issued a warrant of arrest against the ship; after judgment, in order to enforce payment of the award.—THE TROUBADOR (1878), cited 5 P. D. 33.

SUB-SECT 5.—PERSONAL REMEDIES.

A. Since the Judicature Acts.

1499. Liability exceeding amount of bail—Defendant personally liable—Fieri facias.—In an action in rem for salvage services, the writ was directed in the usual form "to the owners & parties interested" in the res, & indorsed with a claim for £5,000. As the owners of the salvaged ship, her cargo & freight, appeared as defts., & through their solr. gave an undertaking to put in bail for the above amount, plffs. did not arrest the vessel, or interfere with the discharge of the cargo. The value of the salvaged ship, her cargo & freight, was £179,200, & at the hearing the ct. made an award of £7,500. Plffs. obtained leave to amend the indorsement on the writ by altering the sum named therein to £8,500 (see Nos. 66, 75, ante). The amount of the award was affirmed on appeal, & defts. paid the costs, but denied their liability in respect of the amount awarded beyond the amount of the undertaking to put in bail, viz. £5,000. Plffs. thereupon moved for leave to proceed personally for the full amount awarded:—Held: (1) the remedy was not limited by the amount of the undertaking to put in bail; (2) plffs. were entitled in the present action to sue out writs of fi. fa. in order to enforce payment from defts. personally of the full amount of the decree.—THE DICTATOR, [1892] P. 64, 304; 61 L. 1500. ———. Seizure of vessel after release.—A collision occurred in the Thames between a British & a foreign vessel. The owners of the British vessel commenced an action in rem & arrested the foreign vessel, & her owners, domiciled abroad, having appeared, & put in bail for the full value of the vessel & her freight, she was released. The foreign vessel was found alone to blame, & the decree in the usual form, in the case of owners who have appeared, condemned defts. & their bail in damages & costs. The damages proved to be in excess of the amount of the bail, & plffs. in respect of this balance sued out a writ of fi. fa. under which the foreign vessel was seized:—Held: (1) the owners of the foreign vessel had, by appearing, rendered themselves personally liable; (2) payment of the balance could be enforced under Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 15, by a writ of fi. fa. against any of their goods & chattels including the released vessel within the jurisdiction.—THE GEMMA, [1899] P. 285; 68 L. J. P. 110; 81 L. T. 379; 15 T. L. R. 529; 8 Asp. M. L. C. 585, C. A.

1501. ———. Plffs., owners of a British ship, commenced an action in rem & caused a vessel within the jurisdiction to be arrested in respect of a collision on the high seas. The owners of the vessel arrested were foreigners domiciled abroad. They appeared & obtained the release of their vessel by giving bail to the value of ship & freight. They then defended the action, denying their liability, & counterclaiming for damage they had sustained by reason of the collision. The foreign vessel was found alone to blame, & judgment was pronounced in the usual form condemning defts. & their bail in the amount of the damage sustained by plffs., together with costs of the claim & counterclaim. Defts. moved to vary the decree by limiting it to the value of their vessel, freight, & costs:—Held: apart from any application for a statutory limitation of liability, the appearance of defts. being voluntary & their proceedings in the action amounting to a submission to the jurisdiction of the ct., they were personally liable to the full extent of plff.'s proved claim.—THE DUPLEX, No. 766, ante.

1502. Action in rem—Proceedings in personam in the action—Position of master.—The value of a vessel condemned in a cause of damage was insufficient to answer the damage. 1510. Priorities as between marshal & sheriff—Right to surplus.—Upon the sale of a ship, in a suit for wages, by Admty. process issuing after seizure of same vessel by the sheriff under a writ of fi. fa.:—Held: the claim of the sheriff to the surplus proceeds, in discharge of his execution, was good as against the late owner of the ship. A rule nisi to "show cause why the marshal of the Admty. Ct., or his deputy, should not pay over to the sheriff the surplus proceeds taken in execution by the sheriff by virtue of the writ of fi. fa." will be discharged, because the King's Bench Ct. has no jurisdiction to proceed in such a summary manner against the officer of the Admty., who acted under competent authority, & it is useless to make an order upon a person not bound to obey it. SECT. 19.—TAXATION OF COSTS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—SINCE THE JUDICATURE ACTS.

See, generally, PRACTICE & PROCEDURE: SOLICITORS.

1511. Costs on higher scale—When allowed—Special cases.—Costs on the higher scale will only be granted when special grounds of urgency or importance are shown, as it was intended that the lower scale should be the ordinary scale.

An award of £2,400 having been made in a salvage action, an application under R. S. C., O. 65, r. 9, for costs on the higher scale was made to the ct.:—Held: this was not a special ground so as to take the case out of the ordinary rule.—THE HORACE (1884), 9 P. D. 86; 53 L. J. P. 64; 50 L. T. 595; 32 W. R. 755; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 218.

1512. ———.—[Pltfs., owners of a.s.s., brought an action in the Admty. Div. claiming damages against defts., a port & harbour authority, for injuries sustained by the vessel owing to the alleged negligence of the servants of defts. in not keeping the bed of the harbour in a proper & fit state for the vessel to ground upon at low water. Defts., by their defence, alleged, inter alia, that the damage was occasioned by the inherent weakness & unfitness of the vessel to take the ground with the cargo she had on board. The trial of the action lasted the greater part of 4 days, & owing to the nature of the defence set up, several engineers & surveyors were called on both sides, who produced plans in support of their respective views as to the strength & construction of the vessel. Judgment was given for pltfs. on the ground that the damage sustained by the vessel was due to a ridge of gravel left in the bed of the harbour by the negligence of the servants of defts. On the question of costs:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to an order for costs on the higher scale under R. S. C., O. 65, r. 9, inasmuch as the case was special in its nature, involving the calling of a number of scientific witnesses & the preparation of plans, & had been so presented as greatly to facilitate its trial.—THE ROBIN, [1892] P. 95; 67 L. a. Marshal—Possession fees—Warrants in different actions.—When in an Admty. action a marshal is in possession of a ship simultaneously under warrants issued in different actions, more than one set of possession fees will not be allowed. THE ITO LIMA (1873), L. b. — Travelling expenses—Warrant to arrest—Admiralty Rules of Exchequer Court of Canada.—To effect an arrest of the A. a tug was hired at a cost of $440, but the registrar allowed $50 only, being at the rate of 10 oe per mile, in accordance with note to Part 5 of Table of Fees in Admty. Rules of Exch. Ct. of Canada. On an application to review the registrar's taxation:—

commenced on the afternoon of one day, & proceeded with & concluded on the morning of the next day, occupied less than a day's time, & in taxing the costs of the action the Liverpool district registrar disallowed refresher fees to pltf.'s counsel, on the authority of Harrison v. Wearing (1879), 11 Ca. D. 206. On motion to review the taxation:—Held: the registrar had rightly exercised his discretion. The practice which prevailed in the Admty. Ct. as to the allowance of retainer fees to both senior & junior counsel is in force in the Admty. Div.—THE NEERA (NEAERA) (1879), 5 P. D. 118; 48 L. J. P. 69; 42 L. T. 743; 28 W. R. 816; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 277.

1515. — — — — —.]—A collision case extended over 2½ hours on the first day, & 5½ hours on the second day. On taxation of costs, between party & party, refresher fees were allowed to the counsel of the successful party in respect of the last 2½ hours on the second day:—Held: the taxing officer under R. S. C., O. 65, r. 27 (48), had a discretion to allow some refresher fee for any time during which the trial was substantially prolonged beyond 5 hours.—THE COURIER, [1891] P. 355; 61 L. J. 1516. — — — — — Three counsel.]—In a collision action where the trial lasted 4 days & the damage done exceeded £2,000, the ct. refused to interfere with the registrar's discretion in allowing the costs of three counsel.—THE MAMMOTH, No. 1521, post.

1517. — — — — — Amount of fees.]—In an action for damage by collision, where the damage to one vessel amounted to £20,000 & to the other vessel to £2,000, three counsel were instructed on behalf of pltf's., & the fees marked on their briefs were respectively 75 guineas, 50 guineas, & 30 guineas, & the registrar, on taxation, reduced these fees to 60 guineas, 40 guineas, & 27 guineas; the ct., on appeal from the taxation, allowed the original fees, holding that they were proper fees in a case of that magnitude.—THE CITY OF LUCKNOW (1884), 51 L. T. 907; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 310. S. C. No. 1520, post.

1518. Country solicitor—Attendance in London—When allowed.]—The allowance as between party & party of the costs of the attendance of a country solr. at a trial in London is a matter for the discretion of the taxing-master. In Admty. actions where the statements of the witnesses have been taken by the country solr. & the evidence has been collected by him, his presence may be necessary for the proper conduct of the client's case &, if so, the costs of his attendance should be allowed, although the case is conducted by the London agent; but in such event the costs of the attendance of the London agent must be reduced.—THE SOTO, [1893] P. 73; 62 L. J. P. 17; 69 L. T. 231; 41 W. R. 479; 7 Asp. M. L. C. 335; 1 R. 579, H. L.

c. Costs of reference—Amount of claim—Amount allowed.]—Pltf., who has succeeded in recovering a substantial sum, though very much less than the amount he claimed, is entitled to costs not only of the action, but also of the reference; but the taxing officer must take into account the fact that the greater part of the claim was disallowed,

d. Expenses of witnesses—Detention—Parties.]—The crew of pltf.'s ship were maintained until they gave their evidence on the trial, a period of about one week. Before the trial was commenced, they were added as pltf's. in the cause. Judgment was given in favour of pltf's., condemning deft. ship in damages & costs to be taxed. Upon taxation pltf's. sought to tax the amount expended in 1519. — — — — —.]—In a consolidated salvage suit the two sets of pltf's. were at issue at the trial as to the merits of the services performed by them respectively, & the judge at the trial directed that the costs of two counsel should be allowed to both sets of pltf's. The district registrar, upon taxation, disallowed the costs of the attendance at the trial in London of the country solr. to that set of pltf's. who had not had the conduct of the consolidated suit. Those pltf's. appealed:—Held: as the judge at the trial had considered it reasonably necessary for the elucidation of the true state of the facts that both sets of pltf's. should be represented by two counsel, it was also reasonably necessary that the country solr. should be in attendance at the trial & he ought to be allowed costs of attendance.—THE METROPOLIS (1899), 81 L. T. 236; 8 Asp. M. L. C. 583.

1520. Detention of witnesses—Though not called.]—Semble: the cost of detaining witnesses on shore may be allowed although such witnesses are not called. This is a matter in the discretion of the registrar.—THE CITY OF LUCKNOW, No. 1517, ante.

1521. Printed evidence used by agreement—Costs of counsel's copies.]—In consequence of the negligent navigation of the M. the s.s. P. came into collision with the M. & the D. In a damage action, instituted by the owners of the P. against the M., pltf's. were successful. In a damage action, instituted by the owners of the D. against the M. to recover damages arising out of the collision between the D. & the P., pltf's. were successful. In this latter action by agreement between the parties the evidence in the first action, which had been printed in the form of a record for the purposes of appeal, was admitted, & supplied to pltf's. by the owners of the P., defts. refusing to provide them with it. The registrar, on taxation, allowed pltf's., the owners of the D., the amount paid by them to the owners of the P. for the printed evidence, & 3*d.* per folio for this printed evidence provided for the use of the counsel in ct. in accordance with the terms of R. S. C., Appendix N. On objection to the registrar's taxation the ct. refused to disallow the 3*d.* per folio.—THE MAMMOTH (1884), 9 P. D. 126; 53 L. J. P. 70; 51 L. T. 459; 33 W. R. 172; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 289. S. C. No. 1516, ante.

1522. Fees of Trinity Masters.]—There is no fixed scale of fees in the Admty. Div. for the Trinity Masters. They are to be paid what is just & reasonable.

Five salvage actions, having been consolidated, were heard together, one of pltf's. having the conduct of the consolidated action, & the other pltf's. being allowed to appear by one counsel each & to examine & cross-examine witnesses. The action lasted 5 days, & a total amount of £7,550 was awarded amongst different pltf's. The registrar, on taxation of costs, allowed the Trinity Masters two guineas a day each for each of the consolidated actions, & the judge refused to interfere with the registrar's decision. Defts. having appealed on the ground that only one fee should be allowed for the consolidated action:—Held: (1) the matter was one purely of discretion & the C. A. could not interfere; (2) the appeal must be dismissed.—THE maintaining the crew while they waited for the trial, & also their ordinary witness fees during the trial, it having been shown that they were kept for the sole purpose of giving evidence:—Held: (1) parties to an action were entitled to the usual witness fees, when they attended the trial to give evidence; (2) pltf's. were entitled to tax a reasonable sum as sustenance fees for the crew while they awaited the trial.—CONWELL v. THE RELIANCE (1901), 21 C. L. T. 429; 7 Ex. C. R. 181.—CAN.

1523. Special order necessary—Shorthand note.—The ordinary order of judgment with costs does not include the cost of a transcript of the shorthand writer's notes. Such costs must be applied for at the hearing.—THE TURRET COURT, No. 1226, ante.

SUB-SECT. 2.—BEFORE THE JUDICATURE ACTS.

1524. Expenses of witnesses—Though not called.—In the taxation of costs & allowing expenses of witnesses, the question for the registrar must be whether the evidence was material, & there ought to have been substantive proof of it, & not merely whether the witnesses were put into the box.

Where two witnesses were brought from abroad to prove a material fact, but were not put into the box, because the fact was admitted in cross-examination of a witness on the other side, the registrar was directed to allow their expenses.—THE BIDDICK (1868), 38 L. Annotation :—Apld. The Rivoli (1870), 23 L. T. 196.

1525. — Detention.—The expenses of detaining a witness will not be allowed, unless it can be shown that his detention was absolutely necessary to ensure his attendance as a witness, & was not for any other purpose, e.g., merely to watch the proceedings in a suit.—THE BAHIA (1865), L. R. 1 A. & E. 15 ; 11 Jur. N. S. 1008 ; 14 W. R. 411. S. C. No. 1528, post.

Annotation :—Distd. The Rivoli (1870), 23 L. T. 196.

1526. — Foreign witnesses—Interpreter.—A party in a cause is not bound to examine any of his witnesses before the hearing ; & if judgment is given in his favour with costs, he is in general entitled, with respect to seamen who are reasonably detained by him as necessary witnesses, to the expenses of maintaining them to the time of the hearing. In the case of the witnesses being foreign seamen, a reasonable charge incurred for agency or interpretation may be allowed.—THE KARLA (1864), Brown. & Lush. 367 ; 13 W. R. 295.

Annotations :—Distd. The Rivoli (1870), 23 L. T. 196. Apld. The City of Brussels (1873), 42 L. J. Adm. 72.

1527. — Amount allowed.—In estimating the allowance & compensation for loss of time in the case of a seaman detained to give evidence, the rate of wages is a fair criterion. A master has in all respects the same privileges as a common seaman in a suit for wages under M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), & is, prima facie, a necessary witness in his own suit.—THE OLIVE (1857), Sw. 292 ; 6 W. R. 274.

1528. — Master.—A master's expenses at the rate of £1 a week were allowed from the arrest of the vessel in Mar., 1863, to July, 1864, when debts applied to have the cause put off.—THE BAHIA, No. 1525, ante.

Annotation :—Distd. The Rivoli (1870), 23 L. T. 196.

1529. — — — — —.—In calculating on taxation the amount due to a master for detention money & board whilst detained ashore as a witness, in a cause for recovery of his wages, the fact that he through his wife carries on a business will not deprive him of his right to be allowed detention money, but if he lives at his place of business during his detention, the fact that he can live more cheaply at home than elsewhere may be taken into consideration in fixing the amount to be allowed for subsistence money.—THE ROYAL FAMILY (1874), 31 L. T. 704 ; 2 Asp. M. L. C. 421.

1530. — Not allowed—Receiver of droits—Producing document.—The costs of the receiver of droits, who has been summoned as a witness to produce the original statement of the master of pltf.'s vessel, will not be allowed to the successful deft. in a cause of damage.—THE OSCAR, No. 1164, ante.

For full ams., see S. C. No. 1161, ante.

1531. — — — Receiver of wreck—Producing documents.—Pltfs. in a collision suit subpoenaed the receiver of wreck to produce the original depositions at the hearing of the cause, & did not call upon deft. to admit copies. The receiver of wreck obeyed the subpoena. The ct. pronounced deft.'s vessel

ment of the marshal's taxed expenses the balance of the fund should be paid to pltf., a taxation of pltf.'s costs being superfluous.—THE THOMAS & ELIZABETH (1871), 5 L. T. Jo. 196.—IR.

h. Costs of bail bond.—Deft. is entitled to have costs of bond of a guarantee co. given as bail in a collision action taxed in the bill of costs against pltf. in proportion to total amount of security given in the bond.—MONTREAL HARBOUR COMIS. v. THE UNIVERSE (1907), 11 Ex. C. 11. 229.—CAN.

j. Supreme Court practice applicable to Vice-Admiralty Court.—The practice in the Supreme Ct. as to taxation & review applies to costs in the Vice-Admiralty Ct. The table of fees in the latter ct. does not exhaust all matters that may occur in a suit. Costs will be allowed in respect of necessary proceedings in a suit, although they may not be mentioned or included in the table.—Re THE TAIAROA, 2 J. R. N. S. S. C. 188.—N.Z.

k. Salvage of derelict—Extraction of private warrant.—Where the salvors of a derelict have given notice to the Admiralty, Proctor & a private warrant is extracted in the interim between such notice & the taking of proceedings by such proctor, the private warrant will be disallowed on taxation.—THE SARAH (1871), Y. A. D. 102. S. C. No. 727, 1. ante.—CAN.

e. Commission on sale.—Where, on taxation of the marshal's fees in Admiralty, the registrar allowed him a commission of 3 per cent. upon the sale of the vessel & property, the ct. reduced the amount to 2½ per cent.—THE ENVOY (1861), 4 Nfld. L. R. 555.—NFLD.

1524 i. Expenses of witnesses—Though not called—Counsel's advice on proofs.—Where a consent to admit certain documents without further proof is tendered & refused, the party tendering such consent is entitled to costs of witnesses rendered necessary by the refusal to enter into the consent, but not to the costs of the consent so tendered. The registrar, as taxing officer of the Admiralty Ct., has discretion to decide whether the witnesses in a cause were material & necessary. This discretion is subject to review of the ct., but only where a legal principle is involved. Direction of proofs by counsel is not binding on the taxing officer, nor on the ct., in measuring costs between party & party.—THE RIVOLI (1870), 23 L. T. 196 ; 4 L. T. Jo. 454.—IR.

1527 i. — Amount allowed.—A party to an Admiralty suit will be allowed his expenses as a witness, if he is fairly & properly called as a witness. In allowing witnesses' expenses only the amount actually expended by the witness will be allowed.

In taxing costs the registrar has no power to reduce the time during which subsistence money is allowed to promoter as a witness, because of his delay in proceeding with his suit ; the delay is a matter for the ct. to consider in awarding costs.

On taxation of costs the ct. will allow the expenses of a witness coming to the place of trial, or who being at the place remains there for the purpose of the trial. But the ct. will not allow promoter his expenses of coming to the place of trial, unless he comes only for the purpose of being a witness.—THE ALBION, No. 363, 11. ante.—AUS.

l. Costs of issues.—There is no such thing in Admiralty as taking the costs of issues as there is at law, but a sum is allowed by the ct. nomine expensarum, where promoter though successful on the whole is not entitled to all his costs. Where the ct. gives promoter costs, the registrar has no power to disallow the costs of issues upon which he has failed.—THE ALBION, No. 363, 11. ante.—AUS.

g. Taxation unnecessary—Undeferred suit—Insufficient funds.—In a suit for master's wages & disbursements, no appearance was entered on behalf of the ship, & the ct. made a decree ; as the fund realised by the sale of the vessel was insufficient to satisfy pltf.'s demand, the ct. directed, with the assent of pltf.'s solr., that after payalone to blame, & condemned debt. in costs of the suit. The registrar, in taxing pl'tfs.' bill of costs, disallowed the costs of the subpoena, & the expenses of the attendance of the receiver of wreck. On motion to review the taxation the ct. refused to interfere with the registrar's decision.—THE CROMWELL (1870), L. R. 3 A. & E. 316.

1532. Salvage action—Outport charges—Agent not solicitor.]—The practice of bringing in on taxation in salvage suits two separate bills of costs—one containing the expenses incident to the employment of an agent at the outport, & the other the remaining charges incurred in respect of the conduct of the suit—though formerly prevailing among the proctors of the Admty. Ct., is now no longer to be followed, & in future one bill only, containing all charges, whether outport or otherwise, is to be delivered into the registry. Although a proctor may employ an agent, who is not an attorney or solr., to act as clerk pro hac vice for the purpose of collecting evidence in a cause, etc., in the outports, & may lawfully charge for the expenses incurred in respect of such agent as agency, charges made by such agent for doing work which is essentially the work of a proctor, attorney, or solr., such as "taking instructions for brief & drawing same," etc., will not be allowed upon taxation.—THE CITY OF BRUSSELS (1873), L. R. 4 A. & E. 194; 42 L. J. Adm. 72; 29 L. T. 312; 22 W. R. 71; 2 Asp. M. L. C. 102.

1533. Costs of mortgagee.]—A mtgee.'s costs in a mtge. suit will be taxed as between party & party in accordance with the practice of the Chancery Ct. & not as between solr. & client, where a decree has been made by consent that pl'tfs. are to receive their "costs, charges, & expenses properly incurred."—THE KESTREL (1866), L. R. 1 A. & E. 78; 16 L. T. 72; 12 Jur. N. S. 713; 2 Mar. L. C. 472.

1534. Counsel's fee—Advising on answer.]—The old practice of allowing in all cases a fee to counsel to advise as to the propriety of opposing the answer in a cause does not still prevail. Semble: in many cases the fee may properly be allowed.—THE ROUEN (1862), Lush. 510; 31 L. J. P. M. & A. 132; 6 L. T. 508; 1 Mar. L. C. 221.

SECT. 20. LIMITATION OF LIABILITY.

SUB-SECT. 1.—SINCE THE JUDICATURE ACTS.

1535. Writ—Description of plaintiffs not sufficient.]—Where the owners of a vessel seek to limit their liability in respect of a collision under M. S. Act, 1894 (c. 60), ss. 503, 504, it is not sufficient to describe pl'tfs. on the writ as "Owners of the ship or vessel," for, the action being one for personal relief, the names of the owners of the vessel at the time of collision should be set out on the face of the writ.—THE INVENTOR (1905), 93 L. T. 189; 10 Asp. M. L. C. 99. S. C. No. 1543, post.

1536. ——— Unless identity otherwise clear.]—In an action for limitation of liability, though strictly the names of all pl'tfs. who are seeking to limit their liability should be stated in the writ, it is sufficient in the writ to describe pl'tfs. as owners of the vessel, provided that the affidavit made in support of the claim & the certified copy of the ship's register exhibited thereto show clearly who are the owners at the date of collision.—THE BLANCHE (1904), 21 T. L. R. 145.

1537. Separate action not necessary—Counterclaim—In alternative.]—Under the system of pleading established by Jud. Acts. & rules, debt., where he admits his liability for the damage done by a collision, but claims to have his liability limited to £8 or £15 per ton of his vessel under M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 54, can so claim by counterclaim instead of by instituting a separate suit for limitation of liability. Semble: when liability is not admitted a similar course may be adopted in the alternative.—THE CLUTHA (1876), 45 L. J. P. 108; 35 L. T. 36; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 225. S. C. No. 968, ante.

1539. Evidence—Affidavit—Proof of ownership.]—Where the owners of a vessel seek to limit their liability in respect of a collision under M. S. Act, 1894 (c. 60), ss. 503, 504, & the evidence in support of their claim is given by affidavit, the affidavit as to whether loss of life or personal injury was occasioned by the collision should be made by some person having knowledge of the facts, & the certified copy of the register proving ownership of the vessel should be a certified copy of the register at the date of collision.—THE ROSSLYN (1904), 92 L. T. 177; 10 Asp. M. L. C. 24.

1540. ——— Person to make—Railway company.]—A ry. co. instituted proceedings to limit its liability under M. S. Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 503. Defts. consented to the evidence in support of the claim being given by affidavit. Pl'tfs. tendered an affidavit by the general manager of the ry. co. Defts. contended the affidavit should have been made by the managing owner of the s.s., & that he was an owner within the above sect., & that as he was at fault for the loss, pl'tfs. were not entitled to limit their liability:—Held: (1) the affidavit by the general manager was sufficient; (2) the managing owner was not an owner within the above sect.—THE YARMOUTH, [1909] P. 293; 79 L. J. P. 1; 101 L. T. 714; 25 T. L. R. 746; 11 Asp. M. L. C. 331.

1541. ——— Measurement.]—In an action for limitation of liability by the owners of a French s.s., the French certificate of registry supported by affidavit, & the Order in Council of May 5, 1873, extending M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), as to measurement to French vessels, were put in. A further affidavit was filed that the double bottom for water ballast was not used for the purpose of carrying cargo stores, or fuel:—Held: (1) this was sufficient; (2) it was not necessary that the certificate of a Board of Trade surveyor under M. S. Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 81, should be also adduced.—THE CORDILLERAS, [1904] P. 90; 73 L. J. P. 13; 89 L. T. 673; 9 Asp. M. L. C. 506.

1542. ——— Registered tonnage incorrect.]—In an action of limitation of liability defts. by their defence denied that the registered tonnage of pl'tfs.' ship was the correct tonnage, & at the hearing tendered evidence in support of their defence:—Held: the evidence was admissible.—THE RECEPTEA (1889), 14 P. D. 131; 58 L. J. P. 70; 61 L. T. 698; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 433.

1543. Life claims—Bail in lieu of payment into court—Amount below statutory liability.]—Where the owners of a vessel at fault institute a suit for the purpose of limiting their liability in respect of a collision which has caused loss of life, & in respect of which loss of life the claims made do not amount to the total limit of the owners' statutory liability, the ct. may grant a decree on their giving bail for an amount to be fixed by the ct. & an undertaking to give bail if required for the balance of their statutory liability instead of requiring them to pay into ct. the total amount of their statutory liability in respect of the life claims. — THE INVENTOR, No. 1635, ante.

1544. — Interest included.]—By the practice of the Admlty. Div. plffs. in a limitation of liability suit brought for the purpose of limiting their liability in respect of damage to goods, loss of life, & personal injury arising from a collision for which their vessel is to blame, are required before a decree is pronounced in their favour, in addition to paying into ct. the statutory amount to which their liability for damage to goods is limited, together with interest, to give bail not only for the loss of life & personal injury claims for which they are liable, but also for interest on such claims calculated from the date of collision until payment. — THE CRATHIE, No. 1548, post.

1545. — Conditions.]—In an action of limitation of liability, where plffs. have paid into ct., or are willing to pay in, £8 per ton in respect of damage to ship, goods, & merchandise, but seek in respect of the life claims to pay into ct. or give bail for an amount less than their total liability under M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), the ct., before fixing such amount, will require plffs. to state on affidavit the names of the persons killed & injured, their condition in life, the number of those legally entitled to claim, the number of claims that have been settled, & the amounts paid in settlement. — THE DIONE (1885), 52 L. T. 61; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 347.

1546. Fund already in court.]—A vessel which had been arrested in a cause of damage was released on payment into ct. of the amount to which the liability of her owners was limited by stat., together with a sum to cover interest & costs. Subsequently the vessel was pronounced solely to blame for the collision, & her owners, who had instituted a cause of limitation of liability, moved the ct. to decree for a limitation of their liability, & to order that the sum in ct. should be transferred to the credit of the limitation of liability suit. The ct. decreed a limitation of liability, but considered it unnecessary to order that the amount in ct. should be transferred to the credit of the limitation of liability suit. — THE SISTERS (1876), 1 P. D. 281.

1547. Marshalling of assets.]—Plffs. in an action to limit their liability paid into ct. the sum of £7,862 0s. 10d., the amount of their statutory liability at the rate of £15 per ton. The amount so paid into ct. being insufficient to satisfy in full claims against plffs. in respect of loss of life & loss of goods, the registrar by his report found that claimants in respect of loss of life were entitled to be paid out of the sum in ct. an amount equal to £7 proceeded against by the owners of the German vessel & by two claimants interested in cargo. The British vessel having been found alone to blame, she was sold by order of the ct., & the net proceeds paid out rateably to the three claimants. The owners of the British vessel, as plffs., having obtained a decree in a limitation action in England under M. S. Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 503, paid into ct. an amount equal to £8 per ton of their statutory liability with interest to date, & in respect of the life claims gave bail to pay the balance of £7 per ton when required. On the question as to the right of those who had sued in Holland to participate in the distribution of this sum & as to the allowance of interest on the £7 per ton:—Held: (1) the owners of the German vessel & claimant in respect of cargo (the other claimant not taking part in the proceedings) were not debarred from proving against the fund in ct. to the full extent of their loss; (2) in ascertaining the proportion receivable by them, credit must be given for the sums they had respectively been paid out of the proceeds of the sale of the ship, & plffs. were entitled to take out of the fund a sum equal to the amounts received by the three claimants abroad. — THE CRATHIE (THE CRATHIE & THE ELBE), [1897] P. 178; 66 L. 1549. Effect of death—Action for loss of life—Stayed.]—In an action for limitation of liability, where it appeared that all the claims in respect of loss of life had been settled, the ct. ordered that upon payment in of £8 per ton all persons having any claim either in respect of loss of life or damage to ship, goods, or merchandise, should be restrained from bringing any action in respect of the collision. — THE FOSCOLINO (1885), 52 L. 1550. — Not stayed.]—In an action for limitation of liability in respect of a collision for which plffs. had admitted liability, & in which loss of life had ensued, the ct. granted a decree limiting plffs.' liability to £15 per ton upon payment into ct. of £8 per ton & security being given for the balance, but refused to stay life actions which had been instituted in the Admlty. Div., plffs. in such actions wishing to have their damages assessed by a jury. — THE NEREID (1889), 14 P. D. 78; 58 L. J. P. 51; 61 L. T. 339; 37 W. R. 688; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 411.

S. Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 504, with an intimation that if claimants failed so to do in time they would be excluded from sharing in the fund paid into ct.

1555. Costs—Amount recoverable reduced below county court limit.]—A damage suit was instituted in the Admly. Ct. in a sum exceeding the amount to which the jurisdiction of the ct. was limited under Cty. Cts. Admly. Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (c. 71), by pltf. who had sustained damage beyond that amount, but the amount recoverable was reduced by M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 54, to a sum within the limit of the jurisdiction of the ct. ct. On a motion to condemn pltf. in costs:—Held: pltf. was not within s. 9 of the former Act depriving of costs & rendering liable to be condemned in costs plffs. who take in the Admly. Part IV.—Appeals.

SECT. 1.—APPEALS FROM INFERIOR COURTS TO THE ADMIRALTY DIVISION.

SUB-SECT. 1.—FROM COUNTY COURTS AND THE CITY OF LONDON COURT.

A. Jurisdiction.

1557. Jurisdiction to hear appeals.]—Although Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 45, provides by s. 40 that ct. ct. appeals may be heard before a div. ct. consisting of two or three judges, the Admly. Div., having all the exclusive jurisdiction of the Admly. Ct. before the passing of the Act, still retains jurisdiction to hear & determine ct. ct. Admly. appeals.—THE TWO BROTHERS (1875), 1 P. 1558. Detention of ship—Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (c. 58), s. 11—Appeal to Divisional Court.]—An order by a ct. ct. judge for detention of a ship under the above Act is made by him in his judicial character, not as an arbitrator under the Act, & an appeal therefrom lies to the Div. Ct., not to the Ct. of Appeal.—PANAGIOTS v. PONTIAC (OWNERS), [1912] 1 K. B. 74; 81 L. J. K. B.

1559. Prohibition—Refused in Admiralty Division—Appeal to Court of Appeal.]—Pltf. issued a plaint, on the Admly. side of a ct. ct., for damage by collision. Defts. denied their liability; but at the trial judgment was given for pltf. with costs, subject to a reference to the registrar to assess damages. Defts. paid into ct., by way of tender, a sum found sufficient by the registrar to cover the damage. The judge rescinded so much of his judgment as dealt with the costs, & made a decree condemning pltf. in the costs of the action & of the reference. Pltf. applied to a judge of the Admly. Div. sitting in chambers, in vacation, exercising the jurisdiction of all the divisions of the High Ct., for a writ of prohibition in respect of so much of the decree as dealt with the costs of the action. The application was refused, & the judge did not desire any further argument. Pltf. appealed, & on objection to the jurisdiction:—Held: (1) by virtue of Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 16, a judge of the Admly. Div. has all the powers, as to prohibition, of a judge of the High Ct.;

a. Loss of ship—Full amount of statutory liability.—Motion for distribution—Interest.]—In an action of damages by a shipowner for loss of a ship by collision, the jury found for pursuer, & assessed damages at £8 per ton of the tonnage of defenders' ship, the full amount allowed by M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 54. A motion by defenders for a new trial was refused. Defenders then presented a petition, under s. 514 of the above Act, for distribution among all parties interested of the amount of damages:—Held: in the circumstances, the presentation of the petition, which was unnecessary, should not stop the currency of interest against defenders, from the date when, but for the petition, the verdict might have been applied.—SELIGMANN v. FLEMSBERG STEAM SHIPPING CO. (1871), 9 Macp. (Ct. of Sess.) 1011; 43 So. Jur. 550.—SCOT.

(2) as the judge did not require any further argument, the appeal, in an Admty. cause, was direct to the Ct. of Appeal, notwithstanding Cty. Cts. Act, 1888 (c. 43), s. 132, which only applied to proceedings in the High Ct., & prevented an application to another judge of the High Ct., or to another Div. Ct., when the first judge, or Div. Ct., had refused to grant a writ.—THE RECEPTE [1893] P. 255; 62 L. J. P. 118; 69 L. T. 252; 42 W. R. 73; 9 T. L. R. 535; 37 Sol. Jo. 580; 7 Asp. M. L. C. 359; 1 R. 644, C. A. S. C. B. Right of Appeal.

1560. Appeal on point of law.]—Cty. Cts. Act, 1888 (c. 43), s. 120, which gives a right of appeal on points of law, & rejection or admission of evidence where the amount claimed exceeds £20, applies to Cty. Ct. Admty. appeals, & pltf. in an action on the Admty. side who claims more than £20 & recovers only 1s. as nominal damages may appeal to the High Ct. notwithstanding the specific provisions of Cty. Cts. Admty. Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (c. 71), s. 31.—THE EDEN, [1892] P. 67; 61 L. J. P. 68; 60 L. T. 387; 40 W. R. 415; 7 Asp. M. L. C. 174, D. C.

1561. —Question of fact.]—A party to an action brought on the Admty. side of the Cty. Ct. has a right, under Cty. Cts. Act, 1888 (c. 43), s. 120 (which to this extent repeals Cty. Cts. Admty. Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (c. 71), ss. 20, 31), to appeal against a decision on a point of law without any condition or restriction, even though the amount decreed to be due does not exceed £50; but he can only appeal upon a question of fact, subject to the latter Act, under which, if the amount decreed to be due exceeds £50, he must give security for costs of the appeal, but if it is under £50 he cannot appeal at all.—THE DELANO, [1895] P. 40; 64 L. J. P. 8; 71 L. T. 544; 43 W. R. 65; 11 T. L. R. 23; 39 Sol. Jo. 42; 7 Asp. M. L. C. 523; 6 R. 810, C. A. S. C. No. 1577, post.

1563. —.—Pltf. in a collision action, instituted on the Admty. side of the Cty. 1565. — Cross-appeal.]—Cross-causes of damage heard together in a Cty. Ct. are, as to the right of appeal, to be considered distinct.

Cross-causes of damage each instituted in the sum of £100 were heard in the City of London Ct., at the same time, upon the same evidence. A decree was pronounced in the first cause dismissing the cause; by the decree in the second cause defts.' ship was pronounced solely to blame. By agreement the amount of damage was referred to the assessors of the Ct. The owners of the ship pronounced solely to blame entered two appeals in the Admty. Ct., one against the decree in each cause. On motion to dismiss the appeal in the second cause:—Held: on proof that the damage decreed to be due in that cause did not exceed the sum of £50, the appeal must be dismissed.—THE ELIZABETH (1870), 1 L. 1566. —.—Pltfs. sued defts. in the Cty. Ct. for 5 days 22 hours' demurrage. The Cty. Ct. judge gave judgment for pltfs. for £22 5s. 10d., one day's demurrage only. Pltfs. having unsuccessfully appealed:—Held: as the Div. Ct. had only appellate jurisdiction, defts. could not be allowed to argue by way of cross-appeal against the judgment for one day's demurrage, as they had no right to originate an appeal questioning a judgment for an amount under £50 depending upon an issue of fact.—THE ALNE HOLME, [1893] P. 173; 62 L. Ct. in a salvage cause where there is a tender of less than £50 & that tender is upheld, the amount tendered being the amount "decreed or ordered" within Cty. Cts. Admty. Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (c. 71), s. 31.—THE FVENDOORD (1870), 34 L. T. 918; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 218.

1569. — Judge following, but disagreeing with assessors—New trial.]—In a collision action brought in the Cty. Ct. the judge formed an opinion on the evidence in favour of pltfs., but the nautical assessors took the view that pltfs.' vessel was to blame for a wrong manoeuvre. The judge said he felt bound to act upon the assessors' advice, & gave judgment for defts., expressing his dissent therefrom. Pltfs. appealed:—Held: on these facts, the Ct. had no power to alter the judge's decision. Semle: the High Ct. has power in such circumstances to order a new trial.—THE FRED (1895), 72 L. Act, 1888 (c. 43), s. 120, impliedly repealed to the extent of allowing the party aggrieved by the determination of the judge in point of law to appeal, without security for costs being first given, & whether the amount involved is under or over £50; but, in respect of a question of fact, the special provisions of the Act of 1868 are left unaffected.—THE DELANO, No. 1561, ante.

1578. ———. Omission to deposit—Mistake of solicitors.]—Under Cty. Cts. Admty. Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (c. 71), s. 27, it is not “sufficient cause” to entitle the ct. to allow an appeal to be prosecuted that applts.’ solrs. have, under a mistaken impression that it was unnecessary, omitted to deposit security for the appeal within the proper time.—THE GRATIA (1911), 28 T. L. R. 49.

1579. ———. Mode of giving—Time.]—An instrument of appeal from a decree of a cty. ct. in an Admty. cause, under Cty. Cts. Admty. Jurisdiction Act, 1868, was lodged in the Admty. Ct. No security for costs had then been given. Security for costs was afterwards given in the Admty. Ct.:—Held: (1) the security required must be given in the cty. ct.; (2) s. 26 of the above Act as to security for costs had not been satisfied; (3) the ct. had no jurisdiction.—THE FOREST QUEEN (1870), L. 1580. Time for appeal—Extension—Jurisdiction.]—The power of extending the time for appealing from a decree or order of a cty. ct. in an Admty. suit, conferred on the judge of the Admty. Ct. by Cty. Cts. Admty. Jurisdiction Act, 1868, s. 27, may, since the coming into operation of Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), be exercised by the judge of the Admty. Ct. sitting as a judge of the High Ct. of Justice.—THE TWO BROTHERS, No. 1557, ante.

1581. ———. Absolute discretion.]—Leave to extend the time for appealing from a cty. ct. in the exercise of its Admty. jurisdiction is, by *Cty. Cts. Admty. 1585. Notice of motion—Filed before service—Discretion.]—In an appeal to the Admty. Div. from a ct. ct. appls. filed their notice of motion in the registry before serving resps. solr. with a copy of the notice. On the appeal coming on, the preliminary objection was taken by resps. that the ct. could not entertain the appeal on the ground that appls. had not complied with R. S. C., O. 52, r. 10, which requires that a copy of the notice of motion shall be served on the adverse solr. before the original is filed in the registry:—Held: even if O. 52, r. 10, applied, the case was one in which the ct. should, in the exercise of its discretion, hear the appeal on the ground that sufficient notice had been given to resps. Qu.: whether the words "in Admty. actions" in O. 52, r. 10, are intended to include appeals dealt with by O. 59.—THE GRATIA (1912), 28 T. L. R. 474.

1586. Judge's note—Shorthand note—Discrepancy.—In an appeal to the Admty. Ct. from a ct. ct. where there is a conflict between the transcript of the notes of evidence & judgment taken by a shorthand writer in the c. y. ct. under C. C. R., No. 32, & the ct. judge's own notes, the version given by the latter must be accepted as binding, & if he alters the shorthand writer's notes so as to correspond with his own version, the Admty. Ct. will order the alterations so made to be carried into effect in the printed copies of the appendix.—THE RATHWAITE HALL (1874), 30 L. T. 233; 2 Asp. M. L. C. 210.

1587. Examination of witnesses on appeal.]—The ct. may order witnesses to be examined vivâ voce at the hearing of an appeal from a ct. ct.; but such order will not be made except in special circumstances.—THE BUSY BEE (1872), L. 1589. —.].—In an Admty. appeal from a ct. ct., under Ct. Cts. Admty. Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (c. 71), where there are no shorthand writer's notes of the evidence, & no notes taken by the judge of the ct. ct. available for the purpose of appeal, the Admty. Div. will order the appeal to be heard on vivâ voce evidence.—THE CONFIDENCE, THE SUSAN ELIZABETH (1879), 40 L. T. 201; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 79.

1591. Fresh evidence on appeal.]—The ct. will not, except for special reasons, admit new evidence in the hearing of an appeal from an award of magistrates.—THE GENEROUS (1868), L. R. 2 A. & E. 57; 37 L. J. Adm. 37; 17 L. T. 552; 16 W. R. 619; 3 Mar. L. C. 40.

1596. No appeal—Shipowner.]—A shipowner, who has appeared as a party at the hearing of an investigation under M. S. Acts into circumstances attending the loss of a ship owned by him, has no right of appeal, notwithstanding that the tribunal investigating the case has given a decision suspending the certificate of the master of the ship, & condemning the shipowner in costs.—THE GOLDEN SEA (1882), 7 P. 1599. — Nautical matters—Trinity Masters.]—The Admty. ment if the evidence is insufficient to justify suspension of the certificate.

Where a ct. of inquiry ordered a master's certificate to be suspended, & the only ground on which the decision could be supported was that serious damage to a ship had been caused by the wrongful act or default of the master within M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 242 (2), & on appeal it appeared to the appellate ct. there was no evidence that the damage had been so caused, the ct. reversed the decision, and restored to the master his certificate.—THE ARIZONA (1880), 5 P. 1601. Materials for appeal—Official shorthand note of judgment.—Where on an appeal under Shipping Casualties Investigations Act, 1879 (c. 72), applt. had been supplied with the report of the case made to the Board of Trade under M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 23, together with their annexe to the report, purporting to contain the reasons for the decision appealed from, the ct. refused to direct that applt. should be furnished with a copy of the official shorthand writer's notes of the judgment delivered on conclusion of the hearing of the case in the ct. below.—THE KESTREL (1881), 6 P. 1602. Costs of appeal—Liability of Board of Trade.—Where, on an appeal under Shipping Casualties Investigations Act, 1879 (c. 72), s. 3, against suspension or cancellation of a certificate of competency the decision appealed from is reversed, the Board of Trade will, if the certificate of applt. was dealt with in the ct. below on the invitation of the Board, be directed to pay costs of the appeal, unless it is shown applt. had been guilty of such misconduct as rendered an inquiry into the suspension of his certificate reasonable. The unsuccessful applt. in an appeal against suspension or cancellation of a certificate will, as a general rule, be condemned in costs.—THE ARIZONA, No. 1600, ante.

1604. ———. —[Where in a Board of Trade inquiry the Board submitted, inter alia, the following question for the opinion of the ct., "Was the loss of the s.s. & of life caused by wrongful act or default of the master?" but refused to express an opinion whether the master's certificate should be dealt with, the Admty. Div., on appeal, reversed the decision of the ct. below, & found there was no wrongful act or default on the part of the master, & ordered the Board of Trade to pay costs of the successful appeal, being of opinion that the Board ought to have assisted the ct. below by intimating whether, in its opinion, the certificate should be dealt with & had, in the circumstances, invited the

1605. — No order as to.—Where the appellate ct., though affirming the decision of the ct. below, shortened the period for which the master's certificate had been suspended, no order was made as to costs.—THE KESTREL, Nos. 1599, 1601, post.

1606. Other remedies—Certiorari.—A vessel was stranded on Nov. 14, & an inquiry was directed by the Board of Trade under M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104). On Jan. 2 the inquiry was held, & adjourned to the next day, when the solr. to the Board of Trade announced his intention of not proceeding with it. The magistrate, however, proceeded, & directed the master's certificate to be suspended on the evidence of the master himself. Upon a rule for a certiorari to quash the magistrate's order:—Held: the proceeding was irregular, & the rule was made absolute to bring up the order to quash it.—R. v. YORKE (1877), 41 J. P. SECT. 2.—APPEALS FROM THE ADMIRALTY DIVISION TO THE COURT OF APPEAL.

SUB-SECT. 1.—WHERE APPEAL LIES.

1608. Registrar's order—Review by judge.—An order made by a registrar sitting as judge under R. S. C., O. 54, is not, for the purposes of Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 50, an order made by a judge in chambers, & where such order has been reviewed by a judge in ct. an appeal from the judge's decision will lie without special leave.—THE VIVAR, Nos. 765, 841, 845, ante.

1609. Refusal of prohibition.—An appeal lies to the Ct. of Appeal from an order of a judge of the Admty. Div. refusing a writ of prohibition.

An application for prohibition by a party to a ct. ct. Admty. action was made in chambers under Cty. Cts. Act, 1888 (c. 43), s. 127, to a judge of the Admty. Div. & refused. The appet. wishing to appeal, the judge granted him leave to appeal direct to the Ct. of Appeal without further argument in ct. On the appeal coming on resp. took the objection that, by s. 132 of the above Act, there was in such case no appeal to the Ct. of Appeal from the decision of the Admty. Div.:—Held: there was an appeal.—THE RECEPTEA, Nos. 983, 1559, ante; Nos. 1768, 1773, post.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 1559, ante.

1610. Appeal as to costs — If principle involved.—A question of the principle on which costs are awarded is subject to appeal, notwithstanding Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 49. An addition made to a decree upon motion, giving directions as to costs, is a portion of the decree, not an interlocutory order within R. S. C., O. 58, r. 15; it can be examined in an appeal from the decree.—THE CITY OF MANCHESTER, No. 1286, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 1286, ante.

1611. No appeal — Exercise of discretion.—Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 19, does not give the Ct. of Appeal jurisdiction to entertain an appeal from a judge of the High Ct. with reference to a matter which before the passing of Jud. Acts was in the absolute discretion of the judge.

PART IV. SECT. 2. SUB-SECT. 1.

a. Appeal on facts.—The C. A. in Chancery has jurisdiction to decide on appeal from the Admty. Ct. on matters of fact, as well as matters of law.—THE JANE (1871), 5 L. T. 188.—IR.

b. Claim not for appealable amount—Counterclaim.—Appeal limited to judgment on counterclaim.—Pltfs.' claim for £408 was dismissed, & defts. on their counterclaim got judgment for £735. Pltfs. appealed:—Held: the appeal must be limited to the judgment on the counterclaim, as the claim was not for an appealable amount.—CANADIAN DEVELOPMENT CO. v. LE BLANC (1900), 21 C. L. T. 600; 8 B. C. R. 173.—CAN.

Leave to extend the time for appealing from a cty. ct. in the exercise of its Admly. jurisdiction is by Cty. Cts. Admly. Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (c. 71), s. 27, a matter within the absolute discretion of the judge of the Admly. Div., & from his decision no appeal lies to the Ct. of Appeal.—THE AMSTEL, No. 1581, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 1581, ante.

1612. Who can appeal—Appellant not party to judgment or subrogated.—Cargo-owners instructed barge-owners to lighter their goods, & to employ a tug. The tug was so negligently navigated by the tug-owners' servants that the barge containing the goods was brought into collision with another barge, & the goods thereby damaged. In an action by the cargo-owners as plffs. against the barge-owners & the tug-owners as co-defts., the barge-owners were dismissed from the suit with costs to be paid by the cargo-owners, but the tug-owners were held liable with costs for damage sustained by the cargo-owners, together with costs to be paid by the cargo-owners to the barge-owners. The tug-owners, by a third-party notice, served on the barge-owners, set up a contract of indemnity under which their customers agreed that the tug-owners should "not be answerable for any loss or damage which might happen to, or be occasioned by, any barge, or its cargo, while in tow, however such loss or damage might arise," & undertook to hold them harmless & indemnify them "from any such loss or damage, & against the faults or defaults of their servants or any claim therefor by whomsoever made." Under the issue raised between co-defts. by the third-party notice, the barge-owners were adjudged responsible for the amount of the damage for which the tug-owners had been held liable together with the two sets of costs. Both defts. served notices of appeal; but the appeal of the tug-owners was subsequently withdrawn:—Held: the barge-owners could not appeal in respect of the decision in favour of plffs. against the tug-owners, for they were not parties to that judgment, & not having paid the amount adjudged to be due by tug-owners to plffs., they were not subrogated to their rights, & if subrogated, they could not avail themselves of an appeal which the tug-owners had abandoned, nor could they rely on the third-party procedure under Jud. Acts, as no order had been made within R. S. C., O. 16, r. 53, giving directions as to the mode in, or the extent to, which they were to be bound, or made liable, by the judgment against the tug-owners.—THE MILLWALL, [1905] P. 155; 74 L. J. P. 61, 82; 93 L. T. 429; 53 W. R. 471; 21 T. L. R. 346; 10 Asp. M. L. C. 110, C. A.

SUB-SECT. 2.—PRACTICE.

See, generally, PRACTICE & PROCEDURE.

1613. Time—Peremption of appeal.—In an Admly. or Vice-Admly. cause the right of appeal to the Privy Council is preempted by any proceedings being taken by applt. under the decree to be appealed from.—THE BRINHILDA (1881), 45 L. T. 389; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 461, P. C.

1614. Abandonment of appeal.—Where an appeal is not prosecuted the cause is remitted & appls. condemned in costs.—BROWNLOW v. GARRISON (1843), 4 Moo. P. C. C. 272; 13 E. R. 306.

1615. —Continuance of cross-appeal.—When resp. under R. S. C., O. 58, r. 6, has given notice that he will on the hearing of an appeal contend that the decision of the ct. below should be varied, & applt. withdraws his appeal, such notice entitles resp. to elect whether to continue or withdraw his cross-appeal. If he continues his cross-appeal applt. has the right to give a cross-notice that he will bring forward his original contention on the hearing of resp.'s appeal.—THE BEEFWING (1884), 10 P. D. 18; 54 L. J. P. 7; 51 L. T. 883; 33 W. R. 319; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 335, C. A.

1616. Security for costs—Fresh security required.—Security given in the Admly. Ct. cannot be made available in the appellate ct. That ct. requires fresh security & a new proxy.—SHEFFIELD v. BALL (1756), 2 Lee, 291.

1617. ——The form of bail-bond appointed to be given in the Admly. Ct. by the rules of 1859 to answer judgment "with costs" does not receive a new interpretation from Admly. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 33, & does not extend to cover costs of an appeal. On an appeal from the Admly. Ct. to the Privy Council applt. (at least, if resident out of the jurisdiction) will be required by the Privy Council to give security for costs of the appeal.

An applt. will not be required to enlarge any security which he gave as deft. in the Admly. Ct. to answer judgment & costs in that ct., notwithstanding such security has proved insufficient for that purpose.—THE HELENE, No. 1632, post.

1618. —Not ordered as general rule.—In appeals from the Admly. Div. the Ct. of Appeal, following the practice of the Privy Council, will not order an applt. to give security for the costs of the appeal except in special circumstances.

Where, in an action in rem, a vessel had been arrested & released on the execution by deft. of a bail bond in the usual form (which, according to the authorities, does not cover the costs of an appeal), & a decree had been made in plff.'s favour from which deft. had appealed & had obtained an order staying execution pending the appeal:—Held: an application by plff. that deft. might be ordered to give security for the costs of the appeal must be refused.—THE VICTORIA (1870), 1 P. D. 280; 34 L. T. 931; 24 W. R. 596; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 230; 3 Char. Pr. Cas. 460, C. A.

1613 i. Time—Notice of appeal to Supreme Court of Canada.—The judgment in a collision action was handed (not in ct.) by the surrogate to the registrar. The judgment was not drawn up until some days after, but within fifteen days after the judgment was actually drawn up by the registrar notice of appeal was given. Appls. (defts.) sought to quash the appeal for want of notice under r. 269 of the Maritime Ct. of Ontario, which required that notice of appeal must be given within fifteen days from the pronouncement of the decision appealed from:—Held: that inasmuch as the notice of appeal was served within fifteen days of the date upon which the order was actually drawn up by the registrar it was within the terms of r. 269.—*THE ST. 1620. — Assessors in Court of Appeal—Costs.]—On the hearing of an Admlty. appeal the Ct. of Appeal may call in the aid of nautical assessors, the expense to be paid in the first instance by the successful party who can recover it as part of his costs from the unsuccessful party.—THE DUNKELD (1876), 2 Char. 1622. — — — Not admissible—Matters of nautical skill.]—In Admlty. actions, where the ct. is assisted by nautical assessors, evidence as to matters of nautical skill & knowledge is not admissible.

Where in a damage to cargo action the judge found on the advice of his assessors that all screw alleys, however well made, may emit smells which may damage sensitive cargo stowed in the vicinity, the Ct. of Appeal, being assisted by assessors, refused to allow appls., the shipowners, at the hearing of the appeal, to call evidence to show that the particular screw alley did not emit a smell, on the ground that it was a question of nautical skill about which evidence could not be given.—THE ASSYRIAN (1890), 63 L. 1624. Stay of execution Appeal to House of Lords—Bail no ground for stay.]—The practice as to staying execution pending an appeal from the Ct. of Appeal to the House of Lords in actions in the Queen's Bench Div. applies to Admlty. actions. The fact that bail has been given in an Admlty. action in rem is not a special ground for staying execution pending an appeal from the Ct. of Appeal to the House of Lords.—THE ANNOT LYLE (1886), 11 P. SECT. 3.—APPEALS TO THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

(NOTE.—The following cases relating to the appellate jurisdiction of the Privy Council before the Judicature Act 1873 (c. 66), are retained as being of possible value.)

1628. Cases arising out of same occurrence—Notice of appeal in all.]—Where several causes in respect of one collision are heard together & decided in favour of plfss. & defts. give notice of appeal to the Privy Council in all the causes, the Admlty. Ct. will, upon demand of plfss. in any one of the causes, require defts. to file their inhibition in that cause (on penalty otherwise of allowing plfss. to prosecute their claim for damages in ordinary course), & will leave to the Privy Council the question of preventing undue expense arising from multiplicity of causes.—THE AMALIA (1863), 3 New Rep. 217.

1629. Time for appealing—Extension for cross-appeal.]—An action & cross-action having been

1629 ii. — — —.]—By r. 35 of the rules respecting appeals from Vice-Admlty. Cts. abroad, made & ordained under 2 Will. 4, c. 51, all appeals from the decrees of Vice-Admlty. Cts. were to be asserted within fifteen days after the date of the decree:—Held: the words "after the date of the decree" meant after the date when the decree was pronounced by the Admlty. or Vice-Admlty. Ct., not the date when the decree was reduced to writing & signed. On July 23, 1880, the High Ct. in its appellate jurisdiction, modifying a decree of the High Ct. as a Vice-Admlty. Ct. in a cause of damage by collision, instituted in the Admty. Ct. in a case of collision, & the two actions having been heard together by consent, upon the same evidence, an appeal was entered against the sentence of the ct. below in the principal action only, without the knowledge of the parties in the cross-action; & 15 days (the time limited for appealing) having elapsed, the parties in the cross-action sought, & in the circumstances obtained, leave to appeal in that action.—THE MÆANDER, THE FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE (1862), 1 Moo. 1632. Security for costs—How far ordered.—A suit in rem was instituted in the Admty. Ct. under Admty. Ct. Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 6, against a foreign vessel to recover damages to the cargo by negligence. The owners of the vessel were foreigners resident abroad. The ship was arrested for £600, the estimated amount of the damages & costs, & a bail-bond being given for that amount, the ship was released. By the decree of the Admty. Ct. the damages & costs awarded exceeded the amount of the bail-bond. The foreign owners having appealed to the Privy Council from that decree, resps. applied for further security, (1) for the costs incurred in the ct. below uncovered by the bail-bond, & (2) for costs of the appeal.—Held: (1) an appellate ct. could not entertain so much of the application as related to the costs incurred in the ct. below; (2) as s. 33 of the above Act was not yet in operation, & appls. were foreigners resident abroad, the rule requiring foreigners appealing to find security for costs was still in force, & security was directed to be given by appls. for costs of appeal.—THE HELENE (1865), 3 Moo. 1633. Right of appeal—Not affected by—Tender in satisfaction.—An offer made by the agents of appls. to the agents of resps., tendering a specific sum as the full amount in satisfaction of the damages & costs to which resps. were declared entitled by judgment of the ct., made after judgment, but declined.—Held: not to perempt appls.' right to appeal.—THE ULSTER (1862), 1 Moo. 1634. Interlocutory order—Unloading & sale of cargo.—An order was made by the Privy Council on the application of resps. in a pending appeal for unlivery of the cargo & sale of a mtgd. ship, the unlivery & sale of which had been decreed by the Admty. Ct.—THE JEFF DAVIS (1868), L. R. 2 P. C. 19; 5 Moo. P. C. C. N. S. 25; 16 E. R. 424, P. C.

1635. Rehearing.—A judgment of the Admty. Ct. in a cause of collision, which imputed mutual blame, & condemned each party in a moiety of the damages & costs, was reversed by the Privy Council upon a review of the evidence & the opinion of the nautical assessors. A petition was presented for the rehearing of the appeal, before the report of the Privy Council had been confirmed by Her Majesty in Council, stating that evidence had been received at the hearing of the appeal which was not called for or produced in the ct. below, & which petitioner alleged contradicted the case made by the pleadings on both sides. The petition was dismissed, the Privy Council without deciding that they were not competent to grant a rehearing, being of opinion that the grounds relied on in the petition did not bring the case within any principle on which such application could be supported.—THE SINGAPORE & THE HEBE (1866), L. R. 1 P. C. 378; 4 Moo. P. C. C. N. S. 271; Holt, Adm. 124; 16 E. R. 319, P. C.

1636. Evidence—Admissibility of further evidence—Where no appraisalment.—Where the salvors took no step in the Admty. Ct. to issue a commission of appraisalment of the vessel proceeded against, the Privy Council, as the ct. of final appeal, will not admit affidavits as to the value of the vessel.—COLBY v. WATSON (1848), 6 Moo. P. C. C. 334; 6 Notes of Cases, 56; 13 E. R. 712, P. C.

1638. ——————Leave to adduce fresh evidence upon appeal was refused, it appearing (1) the matters to which such evidence referred regarded the loss of insurance by reason of the deviation of a vessel from her course in effecting the salvage services, which fact was sufficiently before the ct.

referred it to the registrar to assess the damages that had been incurred in reference to one of the ships, both of which were in fault. The parties went, without protest, before the registrar for that purpose, impugnants also having taken out process to compel the appearance of promovents before him, & the damages were assessed with the consent of both parties at a certain amount. On Sept. 2, 1880, a notice of appeal was given on behalf of impugnants, & was recorded as asserted pursuant to the above rule.—Held: (1) the appeal was not within time, more than fifteen days having elapsed after the decree before the appeal was asserted; (2) the proceedings taken before the registrar were themselves sufficient also to prevent an appeal as of right.—THE BRENHILDA (OWNERS) v. BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION CO. (1881), L. R. 7 Calc. 547.—IND.

1632 i. Security for costs—How far ordered.—Upon the application of resps. in chambers for an order under the rules established by Colonial Cts. of Admty. Act, 1890 (c. 27), fixing bail to be given by them upon an appeal by them to His Majesty in Council to answer the costs of such appeal, it was ordered that resps. should give bail to answer the costs of the proposed appeal in the sum of £300 sterling, to the satisfaction of the Registrar of the Supreme Court of Canada within a specified time, costs of the application to be costs in the cause.—S.S. procedure from Vice-Admty. Cts., by which an applt. is required to give bail in £200 to answer the costs of appeal, is not impeded repealed by Vice-Admty. Ct. Rules, 1883, r. 150, by which an applt. may be required to give security not exceeding £300 for the costs of the appeal, but the Judicial Committee has a discretion in fitting cases to dispense applt. from giving security under Privy Council Rules, 1865, r. 15.—THE HESKETH (1891), 66 L. 1633 i. Right of appeal.—Upon the application of appls. to the full ct. for an order to fix the bail on appeal to His Majesty in Council it was contended by resps. that there was no appeal de plano. SECT. 4.—PRINCIPLES ON WHICH THE APPEAL COURT ACTS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

1639. Question of nautical fact—Credibility of witnesses.—On an appeal from the Admty. Div., the Ct. of Appeal, when unassisted by nautical assessors, will not reverse a finding of the ct. below upon a question of fact depending upon the credibility of witnesses regarded from a nautical point of view, provided that there is evidence in support of that finding.—THE SISTERS, No. 469, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. 469, ante.

1640. ———.]—Though the Privy Council will not lay down any exclusive rule as to appeals from judgments of the ct. below, upon questions which are entirely of facts, yet the ct. is reluctant to come to a conclusion different from that of the judge of the ct. below merely on a balance of testimony, the judge having had the opportunity of seeing & testing the conduct & demeanour of the witnesses.

Where in a cause of collision in which the evidence was entirely oral, & the judge of the ct. below, assisted by Trinity Masters, determined on the evidence which vessel was in fault, & decreed damages accordingly, the Privy Council, approving the finding, affirmed that judgment & dismissed the appeal with costs.—THE ALICE & THE PRINCESS ALICE (1868), L. R. 2 P. C. 245; 5 Moo. P. C. C. N. S. 333; 38 L. J. Adm. 5; 19 L. T. 678; 17 W. R. 209; 3 Mar. L. C. 180; 16 E. R. 541, P. C.

1641. ———.] The Privy Council on appeal, not being quite satisfied with the opinion given to the judge of the Admty. Ct. by the nautical assessors, but not being able to form so strong a conviction that his judgment was wrong as to warrant them in reversing it, affirmed his judgment with costs.—THE EMPEROR & THE LADY OF THE LAKE (1865), Holt, Adm. 37, 202; 3 Mar. L. C. App. p. 50.

1642. ———.] Limitations on general rule.—The rule that the Ct. of Appeal will not, except in extreme cases, reverse the decision of the ct. below on a question of fact, when the judge of the latter ct. has come to a clear conclusion after sitting & hearing the witnesses, applies only to cases where his decision depends upon the credibility of the witnesses as evinced by their demeanour, & not to cases where it depends upon the drawing of inferences from the facts sworn to.—THE GLANNIBANTA (1876), 1 P. D. 283; 24 W. R. 1033, C. A.; sub nom. THE TRANSIT, 34 L. T. 934; 2 Char. Pr. Cas. 18; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 233, C. A.

1643. Effect of Trinity Masters advising court below.—Though the Trinity Masters advise the judge below, the sentence is entirely his, & must, with reference to the facts & the law, be reviewed by the Privy Council, though the ct. would give the greatest attention & respect to the opinions of persons whose advice had been solicited by the judge. Neither the opinion of the assessors nor the decision of the judge is analogous to the verdict of a jury on a question of fact at common law, which is altogether conclusive.—WILLIAMS v. CHAPMAN (1846), 4 Notes of Cases, 585. S. C. No. 1203, ante.

1644. Decision of court below varied—Where full materials available—Verdict set aside.—Where on a claim for salvage a jury finds that the services are pilotage, & a Div. Ct. directs a new trial, the Ct. of Appeal will, if it appears that all the materials are before it upon which to decide the case, go farther than the Div. Ct., & set aside the verdict for deffs., the owners of the cargo, & enter judgment for plffs. without another trial.—AKERBLOM v. PRICE (1881), 7 Q. B. D. 129; 50 L. J. Q. B. 629; 44 L. T. 837; 29 W. R. 797; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 441, C. A.

1645. Res judicata—Effect of no cross-appeal.—There were cross-suits respecting a collision between a steamer & a sailing vessel. The Admty. Ct. held both to blame. The steamer alone appealed in both suits:—Held: as the sailing vessel had not appealed from the decree which declared she was in the wrong, such decree operated as res judicata that the allegations made in her suit were not substantiated.—THE CITY OF ANTWERP & THE FRIEDRICH (1868), L. For full anns., see S. C. No. 1433, ante.

1647. New trial.—The Admty. Ct. acts upon the rule established by the House of Lords that when evidence pertinent to the issue is rejected there must be a new trial.—THE FENIX v. THE MOBILE (1856), 3 L. T. 123; Shipping Gazette, Jan. 8.

PART IV. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 2.

1649 i. Where satisfied that judgment wrong—Doubts not sufficient.—On appeal from a judgment of a local judge in Admty. under Admty. Act, 1891 (c. 29), s. 14, the ct. will not interfere with a finding of fact by the local judge unless satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the evidence does not warrant such finding.—LANDRY v. RAY (1894), 4 Ex. C. R. 280.—CAN.

1649 ii. ———.]—On appeal from a decree of the Maritime Ct. of Onvolving nautical questions, is raised by an appeal from the Admty. Ct., as in the case of a collision, the Privy Council will not reverse the decree appealed from, unless it is conclusively satisfied that the decree is wrong, even though the Privy Council may entertain doubts as to the finding of the Admty. Ct.—THE JULIA (1860), 14 Moo. P. C. C. 210; Lush. 224; 15 E. R. 284, P. C.

1650. ———.]—The judgment of the Admty. Ct. in a cause of damage by collision pronounced by the judge, assisted by the Trinity Masters, was reversed upon an examination of the evidence, which was taken on interrogatories, & on the opinion on the nautical points in question of the sailing masters advising the Privy Council on the appeal.—THE JOHN & MARY (1862) 15 Moo. 1651. ———.]—The Privy Council, though reluctant to disturb the judgment of the Admty. 1652. ———.]—Although there may be considerable doubt in the estimate taken by the Admty. Ct. in respect of evidence of witnesses upon questions of nautical skill, yet, considering the advantage that ct. has from the assistance of the Trinity Masters, the Privy Council must be satisfied that the ct. below was wrong, to justify a reversal of such finding.—THE CONSTITUTION (1864), 2 Moo. P. C. C. N. S. 453; Brown. & Lush. 324; 10 L. T. 894; 10 Jur. N. S. 831; 2 Mar. L. C. 60; 15 E. R. 972, P. C. S. C. No. 1159, ante.

1656. Discretion—Exercised on wrong principles.]—In an action for wages & damages for wrongful dismissal by British seamen who had served on a Spanish ship under Spanish articles, the Spanish consul at L. protested against the exercise of the jurisdiction of the ct., & the ct. dismissed the action:—Held: to enable the Ct. of Appeal to overrule the discretion of the ct. below as to entertaining the action, the judge must be shown to have exercised it on wrong principles or wrongly or unfairly.—THE LEON XIII., No. 151, ante.

1657. Principal question not decided below.]—Where the Admty. Ct. has given no opinion on a question which in the opinion of the Privy Council is a vital one in the cause, the Privy Council will decide that question on the evidence before it.—THE C. M. PALMER, THE LARNAX (1873), 29 L. T. 120; 2 Asp. M. L. C. 94, P. C.

1659. ———.]—Where on appeal in a collision case it appeared that the ct. below had found that applts.' ship was to blame, & had accepted the story told by resps.:—Held: it was not open to applts. on the appeal to raise the contention that, assuming applts. to be to blame, resps. were also to blame, as applts. had not raised such question in the ct. below.—S.S. PLEIADES & PAGE v. PAGE & S.S. JANE & LESSER, [1891] A. C. 259; 60 L. J. P. C. 59; 65 L. T. 169; 7 Asp. M. L. C. 41, P. C.

tario in a collision case: Held: the judgment of the lower ct. would not be reversed unless it was clearly shown by applt. that the judgment was formed on some mistake either on the law or the facts of the case, & the appeal ct. was most unwilling to reverse the judgment merely upon a balance of testimony. *Khoorshed-ju Manik-ju v. 1649 iii. ———.]—In an action for collision through the breaking down of the steering apparatus, the local judge in Admty. found that the steering gear was in good order when the S. started on her voyage, but that the collision was due to want of prompt action by the master & officers when the wheel refused to work. On appeal:—Held: only a question of fact was involved, & though doubtful, if the evidence was sufficient to warrant the finding, the decision was not so clearly wrong as to justify an appellate ct. in reversing it.—THE SANTANDARINO v.

THE VARWART (1893), 23 S. C. R. 145.—CAN.

1649 iv. ———.]—The ct. will not interfere where there was a conflict of testimony on two questions of fact, material to the decision of the case, both of which were found by the local judge in Admty. in favour of defts., the burden of proof being upon plff., & there being evidence to support the findings. The Franconia (1876), 2 P. D. 8, reld.—INCHMAREE S.S. Co. v. THE ARTHUR (1899), 6 Ex. C. R. 218.—CAN.

1651 i. ———.]—The ct. will not in a case involving difficult questions of navigation interfere with the findings of a nautical assessor when adopted by the trial judge unless applt. can literally put his finger on the mistake & show irresistibly that the judgment complained of is not only wrong but entirely erroneous. Gray v. Turnbull (1870), L. R. 2 Sc. & Div. 53, fold.; The Khedive (1880), 5 App. Cas. 876; The Benares (1888), 9 P. D. 16; The Constantia (1889), 62 L. T. 236, reld.—THE ARRANMORE v. RUDOLPH (1906), 35 S. C. R. 176.—CAN.

1656 i. Discretion—Exercised on wrong principles—Adopting expert's opinion.]—In an action for collision the judge requested the parties to appoint some experienced mariners with whom he might confer. This having been done, the judge adopted their view as to responsibility for the collision. On appeal:—Held: as the judge had not merely consulted the assessors as experts for an opinion on an admitted state of facts, but had left the facts of the case to them, & had adopted the conclusions which they had drawn as to the weight of evidence & credibility of witnesses, a new trial must be ordered. The Berpl (1884), 9 P. D. 137 cited.—WRIGHT v. COLLIER (1892), 19 A. R. 298.—CAN.

1658 i. Principal question not decided below.]—When a view of the facts is presented which has not been suggested before, that view should be most jealously scrutinised by an appeal ct., which should only decide in favour of an applt. on a view there put forward for the first time if it is satisfied beyond doubt that it has before it all the facts bearing upon the new contention as would have been the case if raised at the trial, & that no satisfactory answer would have been made by the party whose conduct is impugned. An appeal ct. suffers from the disadvantage of lacking skilled nautical advice, which emphasises the importance of having all questions of fact, especially as to seamanship, distinctly raised before the ct. which tries it with the assistance not afforded before the higher ct. The Tasmania (1890), 15 App. Cas. 223; The Anselm, [1907] P. 151, fold.—THE TORIENSKJOLD v. THE EUPHEMIA (1908), 41 S. C. R. 154.—CAN.

Sect. 4.—Principles on which the Appeal Court acts: Sub-sect. 3, A. & B. Sect. 5: Sub-sect. 1.]

A. Since the Judicature Acts.

1660. Appeal as to amount—Presumption in favour of award—Grounds for interference.]—In reviewing an award for salvage made by the judge of the Admty. Div. & affirmed by the Ct. of Appeal the House of Lords will not interfere with the amount awarded unless it appears that the established principles have not been satisfactorily applied.—THE GLENGYLE, [1898] A. C. 519; 67 L. J. P. 87; 78 L. T. 801; 14 T. L. R. 522; 8 Asp. M. L. C. 430, H. L.

1661. ———.]—In salvage appeals, the Ct. of Appeal, following the rule of the Privy Council, will not interfere with the amount of the award unless the amount has been estimated on wrong principles or on a misapprehension of the facts, or unless, assuming the principles & facts to be correct, the amount of salvage is, in the opinion of the Ct. of Appeal, exorbitant in the sense of being beyond all reason.—THE LANCASTER (1883), 9 P. D. 14; 49 L. T. 705; 32 W. R. 608; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 174, C. A.

1662. ——— Amount increased or diminished.]—The Ct. of Appeal will in a salvage action, where it appears that the judge below has misapprehended the evidence & given a wrong award, increase or diminish the award as the justice of the case may require.

The barque S., having taken up a foul berth in bad weather in the Downs, collided with another barque. The tug C. towed her clear after an hour's towing, during which time her anchor & chain were slipped. After she had been got clear the tug continued to tow ahead until another anchor had been brought off from the shore by other salvors, & she was ultimately saved. Her value & that of her cargo & freight amounted in all to £23,000. BUTT, J., in a salvage action against the S., having awarded £150:—Held: (1) the judge had misapprehended the evidence as to the danger from which the S. had been saved; (2) the award must be increased to £300.—THE STAR OF PERSIA (1887), 57 L. T. 839; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 220, C. A.

1663. ———.]—The Privy Council is reluctant to review salvage awards which involve the exercise of the discretion of the judge below, & will not do so unless the amount awarded differs to the extent of one-third from that which the Privy Council thinks adequate.

The steamship T. A., of 1,701 tons, laden with a cargo of grain, broke her screw shaft on Oct. 3, 1885, when in the Gulf Stream, about 300 miles from Halifax. On the evening of the same day the A., of about 1,600 tons, laden with cargo & bound from Philadelphia to Bordeaux, took the T. A. in tow about 8.30 p.m. & brought her safely into Halifax about 3.30 p.m. on Oct. 5. The weather was fine, & the A. ran no danger in rendering the services. The T. A. was in no immediate danger when picked up. The value of the T. A., her cargo & freight, was 120,775 dollars; the value of the A., her cargo & freight, was 132,500 dollars. The Vice-Admty. Ct. of Halifax having awarded 12,000 dollars:—Held: the award was excessive, & must be reduced to 7,500 dollars.—THE THOMAS ALLEN (1886), 12 App. Cas. 118; 56 L. T. 285; 3 T. L. R. 188; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 99, P. C.

1664. ———.]—There is no rule binding the Ct. of Appeal not to interfere with a salvage award unless the amount is so large or so small that no reasonable man could fairly arrive at the sum awarded. The amount awarded will be increased or diminished if, after carefully considering the facts & giving every possible weight to the view of the previous judge, the amount appears to the Ct. of Appeal so large as to be unjust to the owners of the salvaged ship or so small as to be unjust to the salvors.—THE ACCOMAC, [1891] P. 349; 66 L. 1665. Appeal as to amount—Presumption in favour of award.]—In a salvage case where the appeal is substantially confined to the quantum of compensation for salvage services awarded by the ct. below, the rule which governs the Privy Council is similar to that of the common law cts. in dealing with a verdict as to the amount of damages where the jury have paid attention to the case & been properly directed by the judge.—THE CARRIER DOVE (1863), 2 Moo. 1666. ——— Grounds for interference.]—An appellate ct. in a disputed question respecting the amount of remuneration awarded by the ct. below for salvage service is indisposed, except it appears that the judgment is clearly erroneous, to interfere with the compensation which the ct. below, in its discretion, has awarded.—THE CLARISSE (1856), 12 Moo. 1667. ———.]—The Privy Council will not disturb an award of salvage by the ct. below, on the ground of that ct. having awarded too large a sum, unless the Privy Council is satisfied, beyond all doubt, that the judge has made an exorbitant estimate of the salvage services.—THE FUSILIER (1865), 3 Moo. PART IV. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 3.—A.

1660 i. Appeal as to amount—Presumption in favour of award—Grounds for interference.]—The rule which guides the ct. in dealing with objections to the amount awarded by an Admty. Ct. of first instance is that, if the ct. cannot say that the judge has misapprehended the facts, or has acted contrary to any principle, it cannot interfere if the amount does not seem to be unreasonable.

A sealing steamer of 197 tons with a crew of one hundred men, while on her way & actually prosecuting the seal fishery fell in with a freight & passenger steamer surrounded by ice. At the request of the captain, she stood by her & aided in bringing her safely into port. The value of the property salvaged was about $53,000. In a suit instituted for salvage the ct. awarded a sum of $12,000, & $500 for value of coal & provisions supplied. On appeal:—Held: the award was excessive & should be reduced to $6,500.—BOWRING BROTHERS & KENT & THE GASPESEA (1899), 8 Nfld. L. R. 290—NFLD.

1668. ———.]—In an appeal from the award of magistrates in a claim for salvage applts. must show that the magistrates have grossly miscarried in their decision. 1670. ———.]—The Privy Council is unwilling to interfere with the judicial discretion in cases of salvage, where the quantum awarded is alone the subject of appeal. Though there is no precedent for reduction of an amount awarded, yet in principle there can be no difference between increasing & reducing such amounts, both being equally an interference with judicial discretion. The amount must be reduced on appeal when the sum awarded is exorbitant or manifestly excessive.

1676. Reduction of amount.]—The Privy Council will not reduce an award of the Admty. Ct. in a cause of salvage, unless the amount awarded is so exorbitant & so manifestly excessive that it would be unjust to confirm it. The value of property salvaged is to some extent to be treated as an ingredient in the calculation of the quantum of salvage remuneration, but that value must not be allowed to raise the quantum to an amount altogether out of proportion to the services actually rendered. An award of £30,000 on a value of £190,000 in the case of a derelict ship was reduced to £18,000, on the ground that the reward was out of proportion to the services rendered.—THE AMERIQUE (1874), L. 1717. ——— Freight under £50.]—Cty. Cts. Admty. Jurisdiction Acts, 1868 (c. 71) & 1869 (c. 51), do not deprive cty. cts. not having Admty. jurisdiction of their jurisdiction to try actions to recover freight under charterparties where the amount claimed is less than £50.—R. v. SOUTHELD COUNTY COURT JUDGE (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 142, D. C.

1718. ——— Colliery loading agreement.]—A loading agreement between a colliery co. & the charterers of a ship, by which the colliery co. undertakes to load the ship in a certain time, & pay the demurrage if that time is exceeded, is not an "agreement made in relation to the use or hire" of a ship within Cty. Cts. Admty. Jurisdiction Amendment Act, 1869 (c. 51), s. 2, & hence the cty. ct. has no jurisdiction on the Admty. side to entertain a claim for demurrage against the colliery co.—THE ZEUS (1888), 13 P. D. 188; 59 L. T. 344; 37 W. R. 127; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 312.
